Campaign Ends July 1

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter
(First of Two Articles)

Within the next six months about 5000 Greater Washington residents will learn they have tuberculosis—or have had it.

That is the prediction of Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the District Health Department's Tuberculosis Control Bureau, based on present returns of the current mass X-ray survey.

Thus far, more than 375,000 persons have been checked. Of this number, 10,574 have been called back for a second X-ray, indicating that further study is needed, it was revealed yesterday. Present indications are that 3750 of this number (1 per cent of the total X-rayed) will reveal evidence of past or present tuberculosis.

Since the survey is expected to X-ray at least 500,000 residents by the July 1 windup of the X-ray campaign, the total showing signs of tuberculosis—past or present—probably will reach 5000, Coulter believes. The goal is to examine 600,000 persons over 15 years of age during the campaign which started January 12. The survey is sponsored jointly by the D. C. Health Department, the United States Public Health Service and the D. C. Tuberculosis Association.

Acute Health Problem Faced

The Health Department feels that persons who have had the disease should be checked for a possible recurrence.

As a result of uncovering these cases, the District will be brought face to face with one of the most acute public health problems in its history—How to care for these victims and prevent further spread of the disease?

Many of these prospective patients will be suffering from the early stages of the disease and therefore will require only instruction in self-treatment at home. Others will require immediate hospitalization.

Dr. Coulter estimates that by October 1 from 400 to 500 serious tuberculosis patients will be waiting for desperately needed hospitalization, which will not be available. This group will include many whose physical condition permits them to mingle with the general public, offering great danger of spreading the contagious disease.

Will Cut Number, Costs

Medical and public health officials have no regrets about sponsoring the survey which has brought to light these existing tuberculosis cases. On the contrary, they feel that the early discovery will, in the long run:

1. Reduce the number of tuberculosis cases by catching active victims before they can spread the disease.

2. Cut treatment costs by uncovering the disease in its earliest stages. Medical care expenses and accompanying welfare expenditures pyramid in direct ratio to

Cabbie Lowered Off Bridge Saves Sailor in River

A bridge guard and a cab driver teamed up early today to rescue a 22-year-old sailor who fell or jumped off the Eleventh street bridge into the Anacostia River.

Joseph A. Sherr, 4402 7th st. nw., a Premier cab driver, was lowered 30 feet to the water by an unidentified bridge guard. Sherr grabbed the sailor, Donald L. Martin, electrician's mate 3/c, stationed at the naval receiving station here. Sherr held the sailor for 10 minutes until a Navy launch came to the rescue.

October Pow-Wow Described

Reds Picked Wallace To Run, May Quit Him

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter
(Copyright, 1948, by The Washington Post)

The Communist Party, as a means of blocking the Marshall Plan, decided last October to back a third party headed by Henry A. Wallace, long before the former Vice President himself announced his candidacy.

The strategy, adopted in October, 1947, by the Party's Central Committee, was to force the CIO to reverse its position, taken the week before, indorsing the European Recovery Program.

In this way, it was hoped there would be created a large and powerful labor pressure group against the pending foreign aid program.

Considerations of Russian foreign policy were the almost exclusive reasons moving the Communists to found the third party and pick Wallace as its candidate.

The two primary goals were defeating the Marshall Plan and winning a Communist victory in the Italian elections.

The Central Committee of the American Communist Party ordered labor's indorsement of Wallace to be secured even if that resulted in "splitting the CIO right down the middle."

The points presented above are the highlights of the carefully planned scheme which culminated in Wallace's formal acceptance of the role of candidate last December 29.

But there is nothing to suggest that Wallace was a party to, or had direct knowledge of, the Communists' inception and creation of the third party.

There is now an indication—not firm, but nevertheless of possible significance—that the Communist Party, having used Wallace and having failed in its objectives—is now thinking of new strategy, involving the dumping of Wallace. This indication will be discussed later.

The Communists' support of the Wallace campaign and Police Seize Sen. Taylor at Negro Parley

Wallace's Running Mate Tried to Use Wrong Entrance

Birmingham, Ala., May 1 (U.P.)—Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), Henry Wallace's running mate on the Third Party ticket, was arrested tonight after attempting to force his way through a door marked "Negroes" at the Southern Negro Youth Conference here.

Taylor declared "they treated me very rough—anything but gentlemanly. God help the ordinary man."

He suffered a slight cut on the right forefinger and a barked shin while scuffling with police who led him away from the meeting place, a Negro church.

Taylor claimed police "elbowed" him off the church porch and said five officers combined forces to take him to a police car.

He was formally booked on charges of "disorderly conduct," fingerprinted and was released under $100 bond within a few minutes. He missed a scheduled radio broadcast which was rescheduled later.

The afternoon meeting of the Youth Congress, listed on the Department of Justice roster of Communist-inspired groups, had been broken up when police arrested three white persons and a Negro minister for violation of the city segregation law.

Taylor appeared at the night meeting more than an hour late.

Patrolman W. W. Casey said he warned Taylor that "this is the colored entrance. The white entrance is on the side."

Casey said Taylor replied "I'll go in here anway," and attempted to push past him.

Four detectives and Casey led the Senator toward a police car. Taylor stumbled over a low wire fence and, apparently thinking he was being roughed up, objected in a loud voice. The officers told him to keep quiet.

Architect Gets Trade Board Helm in Revolt

Tradition Bypassed In Moving Director Up to Presidency

Leon Chatelain, jr., 46, architect, yesterday was elected president of the Washington Board of Trade in a surprise revolt against board tradition.

Sponsored by a strong group in the membership committee, he defeated P. Y. K. Howat, the board's first vice president for the past administrative year. A member of the Board of Trade since 1930, Chatelain has been a director for six years.

According to tradition, first vice presidents are slated to move in as president after serving a year. Only twice in the organization's 58 years have first vice presidents failed to be elected presidents. In both instances they had declined the nomination.

Tradition was followed yesterday, however, in the election of the other officers, most of whom moved up a step. Three of them were reelected to their same positions.

Chatelain was voted into office with the help of 12 new members of the board of directors, indorsed by the group opposing Howat and elected at a ballot of the membership Friday night. Their vote was considered enough to swing the election.

The membership committee group has been taking a very active part in all board affairs recently, and showed itself well organized in this year's elections.

The group supporting Chatelain campaigned vigorously, distributing sample ballots indicating their candidates. The Chatelain campaign was believed to have been particularly effective among younger members of the Board of Trade who were recruited in recent membership drives.

Howat attributed his defeat to

As Other Methods Fail

Police Will Keep Continuous Patrol on Numbers Center

A continuous police patrol beginning Monday will be placed in front of the numbers-writing spot at 902 Florida ave. nw., which a reporter found to be operating openly.

Similar patrol tactics may be used against many other known gambling establishments which cannot be closed down by other law enforcement methods, it was learned.

These patrols, or short-beats as they are known to police, have not been used here for years. As the term implies, a policeman "walks a beat" directly in front of the place involved.

A reporter from The Washington Post on Friday found a Florida ave. gambling establishment operating behind the "front" of a cigar store and newsstand, doing a brisk numbers' writing business with little attempt at secrecy.

The store is only a block away from the Thirteenth Precinct station.

On May 17, a special grand jury to investigate what United States District Attorney George Morris Fay has described as a 100 million dollar a year gambling business in Washington will be impaneled by District Court Justice David A. Pine.

Police Inspector Floyd Truscott, acting superintendent of police in the absence of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, when asked for comment on the 902 Florida ave. gaming spot, said:

"So far as I have been able to ascertain, all the usual means to obtain satisfactory evidence on this place have been exhausted. I will now have to adopt the only alternative left, a continuous patrol in front of the place during its hours of business.

"And the same means will be adopted at other locations, if necessary," he added.

Vice squad head Roy Blick said yesterday that he has made repeated, but unsuccessful efforts to close down the numbers-writing spot at 902 Florida ave. nw., which

Bill Imperils Pay Raises For 90,000

Senate Committee Approves Measure To Declassify Navy Department Jobs

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

A bill of tremendous importance to 90,000 Navy Department employes—about 15,000 in this city— has been approved without notice by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

In a sentence, the bill would authorize local wage boards to fix their salaries. The salaries they are paid would no longer be fixed by the Civil Service classification act. These employes, nearly all per annum Navy employes in and near this city, would not have their salaries raised by any pay bill now in Congress since those bills would grant increases through amendments to the Classification Act.

About 200,000 of the 300,000 Navy civilians now are paid salaries fixed by local wage boards. The bill, which was introduced by Chairman Bridges of the Senate Appropriations Committee, would extend the wage board procedure to cover virtually all of the 95,000 civilians whose salaries are now set by the Classification Act.

The committee report on the Bridges bill clearly states that wage boards would fix the salaries of "technical employes of all kinds, draftsmen, including chief draftsmen, assistant draftsmen, and chargemen; administrative and supervisory clerical positions; clerical, police, messenger, shorehouse forces, and telephone and telegraph operators." That just about covers the waterfront. Very few jobs, if any, are excepted from it. The salaries of the jobs mentioned above are all fixed now by the Classification Act.

It could turn out, of course, that all Navy employes would get better salaries under a wage board system. But the excited Navy people who called the bill to my attention do not want to take that chance—what with Congress in the frame of mind to vote them a good raise within a matter of weeks.

The bill as introduced by Senator Bridges was aimed toward giving employe union representation on the local Navy wage boards. His measure was amended in committee to give wage boards salary jurisdiction over nearly all Navy civilian jobs.

The committee report states that it is convinced that most Navy employes are union members and that

Harding College Head Insured For $1 Million

Little Rock, Ark., May 1 (AP).—The life of Dr. George Benson, 49-year-old president of Harding College, Searcy, Ark., has been insured for one million dollars.

In disclosing this today, John H. Greene, general agent for the Washington Insurance Co., Chicago, said it was the first such policy ever written in Arkansas and the first in the Nation in five years.

The policy was taken out by the board of trustees of Harding.

Greene said his company and about 30 other insurance firms, some of them in foreign lands, had approved the term policy and it was delivered to Dr. Benson today.

The annual premium is $16,500.

French Restoring Maginot Line As Atom Defense

Paris, May 1 (U.P.)—The government has undertaken to restore the principal parts of the Maginot Line in the belief that its vast, heavily reinforced underground installations may be the only answer to atomic bombs, it was made known today.

Value of the 200-mile line, built at a cost of $400,000,000, as a fixed defense also was not disproved by World War II, in the opinion of many French military men, despite the fact it was successfully outflanked.

50 Cents More a Day

Hotels Quick to Raise Rates On Transients as Controls End

The Statler Hotel and at least three others yesterday raised rates on most rooms for transients and it appeared likely that others would increase prices this week.

The new rate adds about 50 cents to the cost of each room, each day.

The increase was disclosed soon after the new rent control bill became effective. It removes controls from transient hotel rooms and nonhousekeeping rooms in private houses with more than two paying guests.

In addition to the Statler, hotels which raised prices were the Dodge, Burlington and Commodore. A spokesman at the Mayflower indicated a similar raise might begin there Monday.

P. R. Zachary, assistant manager of the Statler, said prices were raised on 90 per cent of the 823 sleeping rooms.

Rates on 40 per cent of the Commodore's 140 rooms were raised. The Burlington increased prices about 10 per cent and the Dodge Hotel raised about half its rooms 50 cents.

Twenty-five Senators and Representatives who live at the Dodge were not affected by the increase. No change is being made in rates for permanent residents who remain under protection of the rent control law.

An anonymous source declared that hotelmen held a conference last week and some opposed increases, although all hotels have waiting lists.

3 Cabinet Members Reported Bomb Plot Targets; Athens Put Under Martial Law

Athens, May 1 (AP).—Greek Minister of Justice Christos Ladas was assassinated today in what the government said was part of a Communist May Day plot to kill three members of the cabinet. The government established martial law in Athens.

Plans for the national midnight mass were not changed. Sunday is the Greek Easter, the nation's greatest holiday, transcending even Christmas.

A secretary to Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said a letter had been received recently from a "repentant Communist" saying the party had planned to kill Sophoulis, Ladas, and Minister of Public Order Constantine Rentis. Sophoulis and Rentis were not attacked today, however.

Under Orders to Kill

Ladas died 13 hours after a 22-year-old factory worker threw three grenades at him. Police said the assassin had admitted he was a member of the OPLA, Communist execution squad, and was under orders to kill Ladas.

The letter from "the repentant Communist" said the Communists decided on the plot because the Liberal Party joined the government and "persecuted the (Communist) party."

The 56-year-old Ladas, who approved 125 executions, mostly of leftists, since he took office last September, died after an emergency operation.

One Explodes in Car

Police said the assailant, identified as Efstratos Moutsoyanis, threw three grenades as Ladas was leaving his house. The first went through the rear window of the car and exploded, wounding Ladas about the head.

Two policemen wounded Moutsoyanis then he threw a second grenade, which failed to explode. The third wounded himself, killed one of the policemen and wounded a civilian.

Ladas represented Samuel Insull when the late American utilities magnate was fighting extradition to the United States in the 1930's.

Communist-Led Koreans War On U. S.-Held Island

Sequol, Korea, May 2 (Sunday) (U.P.).—Communist-led Koreans opened full-scale guerilla warfare on American-occupied Cheju Island today. They attacked one town for three hours, encircled three villages and murdered at least seven persons, including four women.

Police said they beat back guerillas raiding the village of Ora, 3 miles inland from Cheju Town, after a 3-hour battle.

United States Army observation fliers reported guerillas had encircled and perhaps already attacked Pyungni, Hakmi and Sinsam, all within 10 miles of Cheju Town.

American Camp Beset by Indians Reported Relieved

Details were meager. One report said a detachment of civil guard officers had arrived from Riobamba

It Has a Confused Air

Smoke Cleared Away For Look at Defense

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Are you confused over the Capitol Hill fight on the preparedness program?

Have you sometimes wondered exactly what this 55, 66 or 70 air group row was all about?

If so, you're in good company, for many a Senator, newsman and, yes, defense chief, often has been in the same boat.

There have been many causes for the confusion and complications. It started with President Truman. For, when he asked Congress on St. Patrick's Day for additional defense forces, the President gave military officials little warning. No program was ready.

Defense heads are partly responsible for the mix-up, with their constant references to Russian submarine activity, plane strength, etc. Such headline-grabbing while explaining the program to Congress distracted attention from the plan itself.

The press and radio are not without blame for falling for such sensationalism—much of which was not news. Congress has contributed, by damning service chiefs on the one hand for not getting together, and insisting on their individual views on the other.

But let's look at the record and see if we can't straighten out some of the confusion. To understand what happened later it is necessary to know what the Armed Services first proposed as necessary for national security when Mr. Truman called for their recommendations in mid-March.

The Army asked 837,000 officers and men—nearly 300,000 more than now—a stopgap draft to get them, and universal military training to provide a trained National Guard and Reserve. Eighteen divisions are required, said the General Staff, including 12 in the Regular Army and

Soviet Parades Arms Might in Doubled Force

Big Bomber Fleet 5 Times That Ever Seen at Red Square

By Walter Cronkite

Moscow, May 1 (U.P.)—Superfortress-type long-range bombers, five times as many as ever before shown here, swept majestically over Red Square today as part of a mighty May Day parade of Soviet armed strength.

The numbers of infantry, artillery and tank forces that passed by the tomb of Lenin and the warplanes that flew over it were nearly double those of 1946 and 1947.

Single-engined fighters buzzed protectively around the big strategic bombers. Twin-engined bombers roared overhead. Two different types of jet fighters streaked across the sky.

Foreign diplomats agreed the parade was one of the most impressive military displays ever seen in Moscow.

Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin, Soviet Minister of Armed Forces, in a speech opening the parade, said the power was intended to keep the peace and would be multiplied.

Generalissimo Josef Stalin, Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and nearly all members of the Politbureau were in the reviewing stand to watch the hour-long military

Truman Vows U.S. Will Bring World Peace

Atom Developments Soon to Improve Life, He Tells Health Group

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

This country has and will fulfill a God-given mission to lead the world to peace, President Truman solemnly told the National Health Assembly here last night.

For himself, the President said, that is all he has worked for in the past three years.

The Chief Executive's dedication to peace in the world, uttered in sincere and emotional tones, came after he told the 800 delegates that he had been informed this country is on the brink of great discoveries in the peaceful use of atomic energy which will "make the world a better place in which to live."

God, he said, has chosen this Nation to set an example of how life should be lived.

"I think He set this great Nation of ours as an example of what is forecast in the Testament of the millenium that is to come," President Truman said in an extemporaneous address.

"And I think we can lead the world to peace and quiet with honor. That is exactly what I want to do.

"That is all I have worked for for the past three years . . . to get peace in the world."

Mr. Truman said he was not giv-

Peacetime Lend-Lease

European Bloc Due to Submit 'Must' Arms List to U. S. Soon

London, May 1 (AP).—Responsible British government sources today said the Western European Alliance would submit to the United States soon a list of "must" requirements for military supplies on a peacetime lend-lease basis.

Discussions of the permanent military organization set up by Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg remained an official secret, but the situation could be analyzed in brief: short of equipment, strong on manpower.

Meanwhile, in another phase of the European picture, the United States, Britain and France reported that no agreement had been reached on the political structure of western Germany.

The military alliance was seen as organizing swift retaliation by land, sea and air in event of attack.

The plans drew together a land force secondary in numbers only to that of Russia and the Soviet satellites, naval strength exceeded only by the United States, and an air force lacking in planes but strong in experience and bases.

Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg could muster on short notice an armed force of about 2 million men, a big percentage battle-seasoned in the last war.

Such a force lacks standardized equipment and arms and the facilities to produce them. Much depends primarily on what aid the alliance can count upon from the United States.

The material sought from the United States via lend-lease was expected to include chiefly heavy weapons—tanks, planes and motorized artillery. They would be used to outfit about 30 divisions strategically located throughout western Europe, informants said.

At the outset, these forces would preserve their national identity, but would be directed by a supreme high command, still to be named, on which each of the five countries would have representatives.

In return for American equipment, the western alliance countries would set up a network of air bases with standardized equipment.

Armies From Syria, Lebanon and Egypt Said to Have Driven Into Palestine

Villages Attacked

(From Press Dispatches)

Jerusalem, May 1.—The Jewish militia Haganah tonight ordered the mobilization of all Jews between the ages of 25 and 45 for fulltime duty as Jewish and Arab sources reported Arab armies invading Palestine.

Haganah broadcast that Jewish forces had repelled a two-day attack inside northern Palestine by strong units of regular army troops of Syria and Lebanon.

Jewish and Arab accounts said Syria, Lebanon and Egypt sent powerful military formations sweeping across the Palestine border at dawn Saturday, 15 days before termination of the British mandate.

Troops Ordered to Battle

Saudi Arabia, Trans-Jordan and Iraq were reported ordering troops to the battle zone or completing final preparations for the drive against the Jews.

Arab officials in Cairo, Egypt, Beirut, Lebanon, and an official announcement from the British War Office in London all denied earlier unconfirmed reports that Palestine had been invaded by any Arab state.

Tel Aviv headquarters of Haganah, the Jewish militia, said tanks and armored cars of the Syrian and Lebanese armies crossed the border and engaged Jewish outposts at the settlements of Defne, Ramot Naftali and Dan in Palestine's northern extremity. Jews in Haifa gave a similar account of the operations taking place in Upper Galilee.

Later reports said the settlement of Lahovoth Habashan also was attacked.

There was no indication tonight whether the four villages had been able to beat off the assaults. Dan, built in the ruins of a Biblical city, has a population of 200 while approximately 300 Jews live in Dafne. Military authorities said all British troops withdrew from the area four days ago.

Half of Entire Strength in Fray

A Damascus dispatch said the Syrian army apparently threw half its entire strength into the invasion. The big Syrian camp at Ketana was almost completely emptied by a lightning military movement. A few days ago 6000 regulars and a few hundred volunteers were based there. Residents of the area said the troops and guns had "gone to Palestine."

Sources in Cairo who wished to be described as unofficial said the Egyptian army struck across the southern Palestine border into the desert at Friday midnight.

Arab dispatches to Damascus said King Abdullah of Trans-jordan had ordered the simultaneous invasion of the Holy Land by the armies of the six Arab countries.

Troopers in Mufti To Trap Autoists In Maryland

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—Motorists who break traffic laws when they think the police are not around soon may be in for a surprise.

Beginning next Saturday, plainclothes State troopers will patrol Maryland highways in unmarked standard model automobiles.

State Police Superintendent Col. Beverly Ober said the new patrol plan had been prompted by investigations that showed "a small group of drivers is responsible for a large percentage of highway accidents and traffic snarls . . ."

"Usually," he added, "this group is made up of persons who by use of their mirror attachments spot identified police cars, and when none are in sight take liberties with existing traffic regulations."

The "plainclothes" cars will work with marked cars by means of radio communication.

When they spot a violation they will advise an identified car to pick up the driver. The department hopes that this will avoid dangerous chases by the unmarked automobile.

New President of D. C. Board of Trade Is Its Biggest Booster at 195 Pounds

You don't have to be a native of Washington to be president of the Board of Trade—but it helps.

Leon Chatelain, jr., who came by the office yesterday in a Board-shaking election, has watched the District bloom along the Connecticut ave. vine all the way to Magnolia Parkway. As what his mother calls "a big, big baby," he was born on Connecticut ave., across from where the Mayflower Hotel now stands.

LEON CHATELAIN

He weighed, she says, 10¼ pounds when he was born "March 8, 1902, at 12:30 p. m." The man the Board of Trade elected undoubtedly has honors as its biggest booster—he's 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 195 pounds.

He was native Washington until he moved to Maryland—a fact that dismays him not a whit. Some of Washington's biggest boosters live in Maryland—current Board President John A. Reilly, for instance.

Chatelain, son of a tailor, attended Force School, McKinley Tech High School and George Washington University. His degree in architecture at George Washington was gleaned from night school, while he worked as a draftsman during the day. He has been practicing since graduation in 1926 and has offices at 1727 K st. nw.

His firm's work runs the range of commercial and residential buildings and includes the Washington Gas Light Co. building at 11th and H sts. nw. and several Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. structures.

He dresses conservatively, but has "the best natured disposition of anyone," Mrs. Chatelain proclaims. He is "too busy" for sports, but likes photography, travel and old coins.

Chatelain is a past president of the Washington chapter, American Institute of Architects, and past president of the Washington Building Congress. He joined the Board of Trade in 1930, is on the membership committee, chairman of a special committee on Board headquarters and a former chairman of the committee on architecture and architectural awards. Other affiliations:

Kiwanis Club, Reciprocity Club, Cosmos, Congressional Country Club, Royal Order of Jesters, Early Birds' Breakfast Club, Theta Delta Chi fraternity; director of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club the Shrine and Scottish Rite and past master of the Theodore Roosevelt Lodge of the Masons.

The Chatelains have two children, Jo Ann, 8½, and Buddy, who is Leon 3d, 2½. His parents live at 4124 Edmunds st. nw.

the group's bitter opposition to changes he has advocated.

The Board of Trade issued the following statement from Chatelain following the election:

"My election as president came as a complete surprise to me . . . I recognize that I have been elected to a very important and difficult assignment, and I will devote the next year to making a success of the task ahead.

"I do not care to make any comments today with respect to public issues until I have had an opportunity to review previous actions of the Board of Directors and established Board of Trade policies."

Chatelain could not be reached for direct comment.

Elected to serve with him were:

First vice president, Frederick P. H. Siddons, who moved up from second vice president. A member of the Trade Board since 1934, he has served as assistant treasurer, treasurer and secretary. He is vice president of the American Security & Trust Co.

Second vice president, Thornton W. Owen, who moved up from secretary. Joining the Board of Trade in 1933, he has served as assistant treasurer and had been a member of the board of directors for 6 years. He is proprietor of Thomas J. Owen & Son, real estate auctioneers.

Secretary, Thomas J. Groom, a director since 1942. He has been a member of the Trade Board since 1935. He is president of the Bank of Commerce & Savings.

Treasurer, Robert V. Fleming, reelected. A past president of the Board of Trade, he became a director in 1931. He is president of Riggs National Bank.

Assistant treasurer, James A. Cassidy, reelected. He has been a director since 1945 and was reelected to the board Friday night. He heads James A. Cassidy & Co., a building materials firm.

General Counsel, Edward F. Colladay, reelected. He twice served as president of the Board of Trade. He has been practicing law here since 1898.

Initial Revolt Test Coming In Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., May 1 (AP).—Alabama's Democrats Tuesday will provide the first primary test of the South's revolt against President Truman over civil rights.

This will come about in two ways. One is extremely rare, if not unprecedented, in the history of the two-party system in the United States.

Since the Alabama primary is tantamount to election, the Democrats will nominate 11 electoral candidates who will be free to vote as they please. The State Supreme Court has so ruled.

In addition, the State's approximately 400,000 Democrats will be asked to select 26 delegates to the national convention from among 84 candidates.

Twenty-eight candidates for convention delegate have pledged to walk out of the convention if a civil rights plank is included in the platform, 35 are opposed to such action and 21 are uncommitted. And 21 of the 28 candidates for electoral posts have pledged not to vote for President Truman if nominated by the national party, or any other candidate whose platform includes a civil rights plank. The other 7 candidates are noncommittal.

Should the balloting in the electoral college be extremely close, Alabama's 11 votes would be of immense importance.

their key roles in it have been, of course, obvious for many months. But it was not until last week that a competent authority stated flatly that the Communists were "directly responsible" for founding the third party movement.

The speaker was Philip Murray, CIO president, addressing the Textile Workers Union at Atlantic City, N. J., on Wednesday. He said the decision was made at a Communist Party meeting in New York City last October. He gave no further details.

The Washington Post is now able to supply a number of those details, with some exactness.

Its information is mainly from persons who participated directly in the series of meetings where the plans and decisions were made. In addition, there is confirming information from individuals close to the actual participants, who have been told by them what happened.

Story Begins With CIO Parley

The chronology:

The CIO national convention was held in Boston last year, beginning on October 13. Two days later it heard a speech by Secretary of State Marshall. The convention concluded its sessions with a vigorous indorsement of the Marshall Plan.

It refrained from indorsing President Truman for reelection, but it did not lay any foundations, nor even provide an opening for support of a third party movement.

The ERP resolution and the cold shoulder to a third party were distressing in the extreme to the Communist Party.

Such mass support as it has, it should be remembered at this point, is in the 10 or a dozen left-led CIO unions. Its main hope for further mass support, by the same token, lies in organized labor, mainly in the CIO. For a decade the party's principal prospect for growing strong has been to gain ultimate control of the whole CIO.

CIO Communists Summoned

Accordingly, the CIO convention action was a body blow. Party leaders immediately summoned a meeting of the top Communist members and sympathizers among CIO union officers. The meeting was held within a few days of the convention's close, when union leaders were still in the area.

The meeting, in New York, lasted all day and well into the night. The theme was how to recover the loss just suffered in the convention.

There was a long discussion of how to put pressure on the unions and on Congress to defeat passage of the ERP.

At this meeting, the organization of a third party was not discussed in concrete terms. But delegates from Illinois and California noted that they would move to organize third-party campaigns in their States.

Quill Suggests Wallace

Wallace was mentioned as a possible candidate by Michael A. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, who—only in the last month—has now broken with the Communists.

In general terms there was a discussion of how to get the CIO to reverse its convention stand and to accept the idea of dumping Mr. Truman and helping a third party get under way.

Very soon after this meeting—still in October—there was a meeting in New York of the Central Committee of the Communist Party. This is the party organ which frames all high policy decisions.

It consists of William Z. Foster, national chairman of the party; Eugene Dennis, the executive secretary; John Williamson, chief labor official of the party, and several CIO union officials.

December 15 Meeting Described

The Central Committee decided to create a third party and to obtain Wallace as its candidate.

The best evidence of what transpired at that meeting are descriptives given to The Washington Post of a subsequent gathering at which the official orders were handed out.

It took place about December 15. Those in attendance were the Communist-minded leaders of unions in the New York area.

Some 26 persons were present. There were from one to three representatives of every CIO union in New York except the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Party Chairman Foster was not present, but Dennis, generally considered the best brains of the organization, was there.

The most active figure, however, was Robert Thompson, Communist Party chairman for New York State.

Thompson Announces 3d Party

He opened the meeting with a long speech, saying that it had been decided to create a third party, with Wallace as its head.

Therefore, he continued, the Communist Party wanted all union leaders to get busy preparing petitions for his candidacy, and literature to be distributed immediately Wallace's formal announcement of acceptance was made. This event was anticipated — correctly, as it turned out—some time during the next couple of weeks.

CIO unions, Thompson said, should be ready to follow the announcement with an immediate indorsement of Wallace.

Quill thereupon spoke out in what now seems to have been the beginning of his breakaway from the party.

Quill Attacks Decision

[Quill has denied that he has ever been a card-carrying member of the party, but he has never denied that he was high in its councils.

[His ultimate break came recently over the issue of a raise in New York City subway and transit fares. The raise was opposed by the Communist Party, but it was essential if Quill's union members were to get a pay increase. Quill would have lost his union at once had he supported the Communist position.—Editor's note.]

"Red Mike"—or, more properly, "Ex-Red Mike"—demanded to know who had made such a decision.

The Central Committee, said Thompson.

Quill attacked it bitterly. He said the Central Committee could not tell him or his union that they had to go for Wallace, and that it had no right to do so. He said he would not go along and that the proposed action might split the CIO.

Planned Squeeze on Murray

The Communists in the CIO and those unions which they could influence must pressure for an indorsement of Wallace, Thompson replied, "even if it splits the CIO right down the middle."

"The hell with you and your Central Committee," Quill said. He told Thompson to relay his remarks to "that crackpot" Foster.

The strategy was made clear: The pressure to be created, it was explained, would be such that Philip Murray could not hold out against it. He would be forced to get a reversal of the convention stand. To save the CIO and his position in it, he would have to indorse Wallace and denounce the ERP.

Start the division from the convention policy as soon as possible, delegates were ordered, and stop the Marshall Plan from going into effect.

Must Stop CIO Right Trend

Thompson said the Communists and the unions and locals they led should not be wishy-washy about supporting Wallace. The CIO, he went on, was rapidly moving toward the right and that trend must be stopped. The Communist-led unions should now "stand up and be counted."

Already, Thompson continued, the Communist Parties in France and Italy were making their decision and there would be revolutions in both countries within two weeks.

Whether anyone else at the meeting took Thompson seriously about the imminent revolutions is not known. But Thompson took himself seriously. The support of Wallace and the campaign to that end in the CIO was to "help the revolution."

Wallace's Reliability Questioned

The meeting, it may be noted, took place at about the end of the serious Communist strikes in France and Italy.

At the New York meeting, the talk went on into an hour's discussion on the question of whether Wallace was "reliable."

His meteoric shifts were recalled, as well as an occasion a year or so ago when, at a Madison Square Garden rally, he had made disparaging remarks about the Communists. The question was would he turn against the Communists again, or would he stay in line?

The Washington Post has two accounts, not necessarily inconsistent, on how this question was resolved.

According to one, it was admitted that Wallace was not so adhesively consistent as might be desired, but that he could be held as long as the Communists surrounded him and worked on him. The answer was to the effect that, "To the extent that we encircle him, to that extent he'll stick."

Communists Fooled by Events

According to the second account, it was decided that it did not make much difference if Wallace finally turned against them. The argument was that Wallace was to be used as a tool or lever for Communist foreign policy. The immediate goals were defeat of the Marshall Plan and a Communist victory in the Italian elections. Wallace could be used as the rallying and magnetic point for a great pressure bloc for these goals. He was not going to be elected President, so it didn't matter what position he might take later.

The Communist plans fell far short of expectations.

The CIO reaction was not as hoped. The pressure was less—not enough to bother Murray seriously. The dissent from the CIO convention policy was much less than was anticipated. Only fractions of a few unions fell into the Communist Party line.

Reds Revamping Policy?

When the mattter came to a head in the CIO, at a meeting of its executive board late in January, the board voted a strong denunciation of Wallace and the third party and a vigorous reaffirmation of its ERP support.

The vote was 33 for the resolution and only 11 against, far fewer than the Communists had hoped. It was not enough seriously to disturb the unity of the organization, and not enough to create an effective labor pressure group against American foreign policy.

There are signs abroad that Russia is vamping a new policy to adjust itself to its defeats in Italy and on the ERP. Left Socialist groups are already making friendly overtures to work cooperatively with the Marshall Plan.

Some students of Communist policy think that that policy is indeed in a state of flux, and that reflections of the shift will soon be seen here.

There are some straws in the wind. Recently, locals of the United Office Workers and the United Public Workers, both far to the left in their leadership, found the pressure from their officers swiftly relaxed when the rank-and-file balked at indorsing Wallace. Leaders grew surprisingly "soft." They said that "for the sake of CIO unity" they would drop the suggestion.

The same theme has turned up in a remarkable letter recently sent to Philip Murray. It is signed by a subordinate official of the Fur Workers, the ne-plus-ultra of Communist unions.

The letter says that its contents have been reviewed and approved by the top international officials of the union. For practical purposes, then, the letter has the sanction of union president Ben Gold, member of the Central Committee, and of New York's joint furrier council manager Irving Potash, an important figure in the Communist Party.

Murray Asked to Find Candidate

The letter purports to come from victor to vanquished and to offer a "deal" out of generosity. Actually, it is plain that the reverse is to be understood. The letter suggests that "in the interest of CIO unity" it might be possible for both sides to get together if Murray could find a suitable presidential candidate from within the Democratic Party ranks.

Conceivably, the letter could be a feeler or trial balloon. It might mean that the Communists recognize defeat on their recent objectives, plan to change tactics and are willing to forget Wallace now that their use of him was without results.

Subversive Curb-Bill Step To Fascism, Wallace Says

Topeka, Kans., May 1 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace declared tonight passage of the subversive activities control bill will move the Nation still farther up the street to fascism—which he said is "only a few city blocks away."

"While the legislation is going to be clearly unconstitutional, and, as such, cannot be considered as the final step to fascism," the third party presidential candidate said, "it may provide the means for that final step before a test case ever reaches the Supreme Court of the United States."

Carrying his Midwest campaign into this agricultural State, Wallace charged in a prepared address that the bill is directed "ostensibly, and for propaganda purposes" against American Communists.

Michigan Democrats Selecting Delegates

Battle Creek, Mich., May 1 (AP).—More than a thousand Michigan Democrats gathered here today to select 42 delegates of the party's national convention in Philadelphia.

The Michigan delegation chosen is expected to go uninstructed to the national convention, with its hands free to catch on to the bandwagon of any candidate for the presidential nomination. However, the party is expected to adopt a strong official resolution supporting President Truman for renomination.

Taft, Stassen Both Claim Ohio Victory

Cleveland, May 1 (U.P.).—Conflicting claims of victory in the Ohio primary Tuesday were issued today by Senator Robert A. Taft and Harold E. Stassen.

Except for the last-minute appeals, the campaign was practically over. Taft claimed all the State's delegates. Stassen predicted a majority of his 23 candidates would win.

Before the victory claims were issued, Taft proposed that Federal employes be given at least a 60 per cent increase in wages over the 1939 level. He told a Cleveland City Club meeting the GOP convention would nominate for President a man who helped build its program. He maintained his program is the GOP program.

Through his headquarters here, Stassen said, "If our Ohio volunteers carry on through in their campaign efforts on May 4, I believe a majority of these candidates for delegates will win, in both agricultural and industrial districts of the State."

Dewey Ready To Get Busy On Campaign

Portland, Oreg., May 1 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey arrived from New York today ready to "really get into this campaign" for the Republican nomination for President.

In Oregon it is a clear-cut fight against Harold E. Stassen. The 12 Oregon delegates to be named in the May 21 primary election are almost incidental as Dewey seeks to stem the advance of the former Minnesota Governor. Dewey and Stassen are the only Republican candidates on this State's ballot.

At a press conference at his hotel immediately after arriving from the airport, Dewey said he had time only for five days of campaigning thus far—but with the New York Legislature adjourned and bill signing out of the way, he now would push it hard.

He declined to comment on his chances here: "I'll know more about that two weeks from now."

Within those two weeks he will have covered most of western Oregon's cities and hamlets—35 talks are on the schedule for the first week—and will have moved into eastern Oregon.

ECA Mission Off for Paris

By The Associated Press

The first direct contact between the U. S. agency administering the European Recovery Program and participating countries will be established at Paris this week.

Three advance agents of the Economic Cooperation Administration will leave for Paris today.

Their prime purpose, ECA Administrator Paul C. Hoffman announced, will be to discuss the urgency of European needs and also to outline a uniform system of reporting purchase requests to insure an unbroken flow of recovery supplies.

Meanwhile Hoffman has announced a new $15,969,000 authorization of food, coal and other commodities to be shipped to Austria, France, Italy and the Netherlands. The action brought the total value of ECA-approved shipments to $174,270,000 since Hoffman took office April 9.

The allotments included the first purchases to be made by European countries from elsewhere than the United States. Western Germany will supply 6,455,000 worth of coal and grain seeds to the four countries.

The mission to Paris consists of Col. C. H. Bonesteel 3d, Franklin A. Lindsay, and Robert W. Tufts.

Colonel Bonesteel, a consultant to Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, formerly was a special assistant to the Undersecretary of State on matters of European recovery. Lindsay, also a consultant, formerly held that position with the House Committee on Foreign Aid. He also assisted Bernard M. Baruch when Baruch headed the American delegation to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. Tufts is a State Department official who has been working on European recovery.

May Day Orderly, Noisy World Over

Europe Tense But Calm, U. S. Catholics Pray For Soviet Salvation, '2d Bogotas' Lacking

By The Associated Press

May Day celebrations in Europe, America and Asia produced noise and fury but no major explosions.

Berlin, Trieste, Prague, Rome and a dozen other of Europe's danger spots observed labor's holiday yesterday in an atmosphere of tenseness. But police everywhere prevented serious clashes between Communist and anti-Communist factions of labor organizations.

Chile and Brazil, where authorities feared Communists plotted "another Bogota" uprising, reported no disturbances but much parading and speechmaking.

Along the 38th parallel in Korea, dividing line between American and Soviet-occupied territory, there was fist-shaking by Korean Communists who shouted across the boundary at American troops and South Koreans; "You'll have trouble soon."

Rival Parades in New York

It was a quiet spring day in Tokyo where 350,000 Japanese turned out for the observance.

New York, center of the United States' biggest celebrations, was the scene of two rival parades separated by three long blocks. One up Fifth Avenue was sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars as a "loyalty day" demonstration. The other was by left-wingers.

"Pray for Russia" meetings sponsored by Catholics were held at many places in the United States. At Albany, N. Y. 4000 knelt at the steps of the State Capitol and prayed for the "salvation" of Russia.

In troubled Trieste, police charged crowds with water hoses, night sticks and motorcycles when several thousand pro-Italians clogging the streets attacked a police car.

U. S. Assailed in Warsaw

About 30,000 Communists and anti-Communists staged demonstrations.

In every European land the May Day celebrations emphasized the split of labor movements along east-west lines. In eastern Europe, particularly in Warsaw, the United States was assailed openly as an "aggressor" nation with imperialistic designs.

In western Europe the United States was acclaimed at many demonstrations as a defender of liberty and the savior of the continent.

In Berlin where half a million turned out for rival demonstrations, well-drilled Communists paraded for three hours, chanting "we don't want the Marshall Plan."

About 350,000 turned out in Vienna, the Austrian capital. Police estimated Communists were outnumbered 10 to 1.

Rome's observance was orderly. Catholic and other anti-Communist labor groups left the city's chief celebration, a gathering of 50,000 in Piazza del Popolo, because they said it had been turned into a "leftist political demonstration."

About 25,000 took part in demonstrations in Paris, one of which was addressed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle who demanded an end to France's middle-of-the-road policy.

Britain's liveliest May Day show was in London where police and intermittent showers dampened the enthusiasm of partisans bent on wrecking or supporting an outdoor demonstration by Sir Oswald Mosley's new Anti-Semitic Union Movement. Mosley made an address to a fairly orderly crowd which then participated in parades of trade unionists.

Tito Reviews Parade

Marshal Tito in Belgrade took the salutes of Yugoslav soldiers and workers who passed in a four-hour parade, and in Sofia, Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov viewed 300,000 parading with banners condemning "preparations for a new imperialistic war."

A bomb blast started May Day festivities in Bombay, India, and seven persons were injured. Police dispersed a number of meetings.

In Jogjakarta, in republican Java, a crowd of half a million Indonesians paraded and participated in observances.

One hundred persons were rounded up in Cairo on suspicion of plotting Communist disturbances.

'Land of Fear'

Reds as Bad As Czarists, Attlee Says

Plymouth, England, May 1 (U.P.). Prime Minister Clement Attlee described Russia today as a land of fear and supression. He said it is a police state on a czarist model and uses methods similar to those of the Nazis.

"Russia was always in my young days a supreme example of the police state; a land of fear and suppression; a land where free speech, free thought and a free press were banned," Attlee said at a May Day demonstration here.

"It is the same today as it was then, only with a different set of rulers. It has yet to overtake several centuries of progress which left their mark on western civilization.

"There can be no greater mistake than to imagine that the Communist Party is part of the left. In the wide range of human activity, the Communists are extreme reactionaries," he declared.

5 European Nations Plan Money Pool

London, May 1 (AP).—British government financial experts reported today that the western European five-country alliance soon will establish a big financial pool—in effect an international checking account—to increase trade among its members.

Agreement on the plan, in many ways comparable to the International Monetary Fund, was reached at Brussels during the conference two days ago of the finance ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The plan will be presented to the other 11 Marshall Plan countries in the hope of ultimately removing barriers to trade and establishing a common European currency.

Details are now being worked out by financial experts. They are expected to be completed within 10 days.

Under the plan each of the five countries would contribute to the "pool" an amount of its own currency fixed by its estimated purchases from the other alliance countries over a specified period of time.

Belgium was credited by British officials for working out the basis of the plan.

It is designed to overcome the barriers to trade which arise when one country is short of currency of a country from which it hopes to purchase.

Under the Brussels plan, one country in the alliance could deal directly with another by drawing a check upon the pooled fund.

Missing Russian Is Reported Voluntarily in British Hands

Hamburg, Germany, May 1 (AP). A Russian army officer who disappeared from the American zone of Germany on the eve of his return to Russia was reported tonight to be voluntarily in British custody.

The Soviet agents had accused American agents of kidnaping the officer, Lieut. Col. J. G. Tessajew, chief of a Soviet team supervising the loading of reparation shipments at the American-occupied port of Bremen.

Tessajew is being questioned by British intelligence officers at Hereford, unofficial reports said.

Tessajew disappeared after attending a tea in the home of Stanley A. Clem, American director of the port of Bremen. One informed source said Tessajew had requested to meet a British agent at Clem's home.

General Clay Denies Kidnap Allegation

Berlin, May 1 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor, tonight denied a Russian allegation that the Americans had kidnaped Soviet Lieut. Col. J. G. Tessajew.

"We did not kidnap or in any way restrain a Russian colonel in Bremen. We do not have him in our custody now. We are investigating his disappearance," Clay said.

Air Crash Compensation Is Demanded by Britain

London, May 1 (U.P.).—The government announced today it had sent a note to the Soviet Union demanding full compensation for the crash of a British airship in Berlin, April 5, which cost 15 lives.

The request was handed to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov in Moscow yesterday by British Ambassador Sir Maurice Drummond Peterson.

Methodists Urged to Stress Instruction

Boston, May 1 (AP).—The Board of Education of the Methodist Church today sharply criticized the lack of religious teaching in public schools and called for an intensified program of education of Christian principles.

The board's report was submitted to the quadrennial conference of the Methodist church.

Claiming that both world wars would have been avoided if Christian education had prevailed, the report continued:

"Instead, we kicked religious teachings out of the public schools. The churches centered their major attentions in other directions and failed to provide a system of schools of religion that could teach effectively all the children of the people.

Can Be Laid to Church

"The lack of religious knowledge among church members and the prevalence of religious illiteracy in non-church members can be laid at the door of the church."

The report suggested as goals in the next four years a 1,700,000 increase in religious school membership, enlistment of one million parents in church work and extension of nursery schools and kindergartens.

"The Protestant church," the report stated, "cannot launch out upon a vast program of parochial schools. It is too expensive and it is wrong in principle. Our strategy is to discover how Protestantism can save the public schools, the unifying force, for democracy and freedom of thought."

2,750,000 Enrolled

In a progress report, the board stated there are 2,750,000 enrolled in Methodist-related institutions of higher learning compared with 1,500,000 in 1939.

[Norman O. Makin, Australian Ambassador to the United States and delegate to the United Nations, today called for a meeting of the leaders of the big three nations to discuss international differences, the United Press said.

[Makin proposed the meeting at the Methodist conference at which he is a guest delegate.

[Bishop Alexander P. Shaw of Baltimore presided over the conference business session. He is the second Negro in the history of Methodism to preside over a general conference session.]

Ban on Seating 150 Members Delays Chinese Legislature

Nanking, May 1 (AP).—China's fledgling constitutional government hit a new snag today that threatened to delay its organization indefinitely.

The outgoing legislative yuan ruled at its final meeting that the new legislative yuan could not be enlarged to absorb 150 members who won election by write-in votes last fall.

This enlargement had been suggested by the state council as the only way to avoid a fight over seating.

The new legislative yuan cannot function until the membership question is settled.

The write-in victors, who ran without approval of the Kuomintang one-party regime, immediately protested that failure to seat them would be "a crime against democracy."

The final session heard President Chiang promise national unity and "a government of the people, for the people and by the people."

The new legislative yuan of 700 members was scheduled to open immediately afterward, but was postponed indefinitely.

1000-Shots-a-Minute Machine Gun Produced

Springfield, Mass., May 1 (U.P.).—The Springfield Armory has started production on a new .50-caliber machine gun for jet fighter planes that is capable of firing 1000 shots a minute, Col. Morris K. Barroll announced today.

Within six weeks, he said, 80 per cent of the Government plant's capacity will be used for mass production of the M-3 machine gun.

Arab Invasion Of Palestine

100,000 March In Mexico City's May Day Parade

Mexico City, May 1 (AP).—Mexican workers with labor's red and black banners paraded today before President Miguel Aleman and his cabinet. Thirty abreast, they kept the president on his feet, waving from a national palace balcony, for three hours.

Among all the contingents, with about 100,000 persons in line, the "Amigos (friends) de Wallace" stood out.

The group of 200 had with them two displays. First came a burro-drawn old cart, carrying a sleeping, poorly dressed servant, and his large family. "This is what the war traffickers and Yankee imperialists want for Mexico," a banner said.

Next came a new truck with a miniature oil derrick and some prosperous looking workmen, labeled "this is what Wallace and his people want for Mexico."

As they passed, the President smiled.

The Wallace group marched between two divisions of Communists. The Communists saluted Aleman with clenched fists.

The Wallace group was led by the two artistic and political enemies, Mexico's great painters, Diego Rivera and David Alfaro Siqueiros. Rivera was a Trotsky supporter but joined the Communist party here, left it and applied for re-admission which the party refused. Siqueiros is a member of the party.

The Wallace group says it is raising funds for his campaign. Leaders assert they have rounded up 2000 absentee votes for him in Mexico.

said repeatedly it will resist any invasion while it holds the mandate. A Foreign Office spokesman in London said Saturday the British were standing pat on that position.)

The invasion accounts came as thousands of Arab refugees streamed out of Jerusalem and Jaffa. In both cities the Jews have scored marked military gains.

Jaffa, an Arab port, was completely surrounded and its defense lines pierced. The British by guns and negotiations have prevented the city from falling to the Jews. An estimated 30,000 of Jaffa's 70,000 civilian residents have left the city by sea and road during the past two weeks.

In Jaffa the British said at least 70 warriors of Irgun Zvai Leumi, the Jewish underground organization, were killed when the Arabs broke a truce and the Jews returned the fire.

Irgun defied a British ultimatum to give up positions by noon today in the Jewish-captured Manshieh quarter of Jaffa. Irgun blew up the police station and 10 Arab houses into a wall of debris blocking Hassen Beq street. The British had demanded the opening of the street.

Then Irgun asked Haganah to take over in the Manshieh quarter. The transfer was carried out at noon and Haganah promised to hold the positions.

British troops are now in positions between Arabs and Jews on the Jaffa front.

Units of Haganah, the Jewish militia, have won the first round in the battle for Jerusalem that opened Friday. The Jews have gained commanding positions in the Katamon district in the southern part of the city.

Fighting continued in Jerusalem, where 100,000 Christians of the Greek Orthodox, Coptic, Syrian and Armenian churches prepared for their observance of Easter tomorrow.

In the late afternoon Arab men, women and children streamed onto roads leading to Jericho, Bethlehem and the north. The crash of mortar and rocket bombs and the sputter of gunfire echoed over the city.

The Arabs prepared for another attempt to drive the Jews from the Katamon district. Arab volunteers from Syria and Iraq, identified by their decorations, moved into positions for a counterattack.

Of the operations in northern Palestine, Haganah said the invasion was made into the thumb of the Holy Land, which juts northward between Syria and Lebanon. One invading force crossed the Lebanese frontier and the other moved across the Syrian border a few miles away.

Fighting their way forward, the Arab armor reached the defense rings around Dafne, Dan and Ramot Naftali. Dafne and Dan are adjacent villages two to three miles inside Palestine from the Syrian frontier. Ramot Naftali, to the southwest, is four miles inside Palestine from the Lebanese frontier.

"The attackers are using guns, mortars, machineguns and armored cars," Haganah said. "At Ramot Naftali, six Lebanese tanks have reached the settlement defenses."

Five of the Arab states held a council of war in Transjordan. An Associated Press dispatch from Amman quoted King Abdullah as saying the Arab military leaders were planning operations which "will tighten the ring around the Jewish enemy."

"The time when the Arabs will be masters in Palestine is near," Abdullah's statement said. "In the past there always have been disagreements and mistrust between the various Arab countries, but these have been settled by the Palestine issue."

Debate Goes On

Jews Ask U. N. to Halt Arab Invasion

Lake Success, N. Y., May 1 (UP).—The Jewish Agency appealed to the United Nations Security Council today for urgent action to stem an alleged Arab invasion of Palestine.

Moshe Shertok of the Agency telegraphed Alexandre Parodi, Council president: "Jewish defense forces determined to resist this new phase of the invasion at all costs unless the Security Council intervenes immediately, effectively, to arrest invasion in initial stages. War situation inevitable with large-scale bloodshed, destruction, leading to major conflagration with incalculable consequences.

"We appeal to you as president of Security Council to promote appropriate action with greatest urgency."

Shertok appealed to the Security Council as the General Assembly concluded the second week of emergency debate on Palestine with no solution in sight and with a conviction growing that the U. N. would stand by while the Arabs and Jews "fought it out."

With only 15 days left before Britain ends its responsibility for the Holy Land, delegates listened uneasily to Arab and Jewish warnings today that battles in Palestine, not repetitious oratory in the U. N. would settle the issue.

Representatives of both sides in the 58-nation Political Committee of the Assembly attacked the American trusteeship plan which would replace partition, the Jews flatly rejecting any substitution for an independent state and the Arabs criticizing many of the 47 points of the United States plan.

Warning From Iraq

"The true issue is not the United States plan," Naji Al-Asil of Iraq told the committee, "but it is peace or war in Palestine."

Maj. Aubrey Eban of the Jewish Agency warned that "not even a considerable armed force" could stop the Jews from setting up their own state in Palestine.

A two-day point-by-point discussion of the American trusteeship plan ended with only two nations—Panama and Turkey—giving unqualified support. For most of the other delegations, the main question was: How could it be enforced?

An American official acknowledged that all United States attempts to get the British and French to contribute troops to an international force had failed thus far and that there was no reason to hope for any sudden change of heart in Paris and London. Debate will continue Monday.

'No 2d Term', Peron Tells New Congress

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 1 (UP).—President Juan D. Peron told the opening session of the newly elected Congress today he will complete his administrative task in four more years and does not favor a constitutional amendment to permit his reelection.

"Reelection would be an enormous danger to the political future of the republic," he said.

The constitution bars election of presidents for two or more successive terms.

In recent congressional election, Peron obtained a two-thirds majority in both houses of Congress, necessary to modify the constitution.

Peron said that what was needed was not more presidential terms but more work.

"If a President gets to his office at 10 o'clock and leaves at noon after signing some documents and conversing with friends, he can serve not only two but 10 presidential terms. . . .

"But beginning his labors at 6 in the morning and quitting at 8 or 9 in the evening as we do, I don't believe he can stand more than six years."

Parley Ends

Bogota Pact Signing Set For Today

Bogota, Colombia, May 1 (AP).—The Inter-American Conference, which held its formal closing ceremony yesterday, will actually reach the end of its deliberations Sunday when the delegates assemble to approve and sign a hemisphere economic pact at 10 a. m. (EST.).

Signing of the economic pact was delayed because the economic committee had a difficult time in reaching agreement. Even tonight there were indications Mexico might reopen at the last minute Sunday the question of compensation for foreign properties expropriated by Latin-American governments.

The United States finally succeeded in putting into the draft of the treaty that "all expropriation will be accompanied by the payment of a fair price in prompt, adequate and effective form."

Mexico has objected to the clause because of possible conflict with the Mexican constitution.

Judaism Council Plans Rally For Truce, Peace in Palestine

The Washington Chapter of the American Council for Judaism yesterday called for Protestant and Catholic support of a rally for "Peace in Palestine Through Truce and Trusteeship" it will hold Thursday at 8:30 p. m. at the Shoreham Hotel.

Joseph D. Kaufman, chapter chairman, made the appeal in telegrams to the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington.

"Only through the bringing together of all faiths, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, can we help prevent the destruction of human lives, of sacred places, of the Holy Land and of all that has been built up in Palestine," the telegram said.

Bishop Dun, reached later, said he "regretted" that he'd be unable to attend the rally because of previous commitments. He emphasized, however, that he has supported the cause in public statements. Archbishop O'Boyle was out of town yesterday, and could not be reached for comment.

Speakers at the rally were announced as Rabbi Morris Lazaron of Baltimore, Rabbi Irving Reichert of San Francisco and Kermit Roosevelt. The meeting is open to the public.

Panama Tense for Elections

Panama, May 1 (AP).—Panama will enter a tense election period Sunday when 150,000 men and women cast ballots in the first municipal elections in the history of this central American country.

On May 9 the voters will return to the polls and elect a President, two vice presidents and 42 National Assembly deputies. It will be the first presidential election in eight years.

Insurance salesmen said they had received a large number of applications for riot and civil commotion policies.

The government has announced suspension of sea, land and air traffic between districts beginning at midnight tonight and continuing until 5 p. m. tomorrow. The leaders of various political parties have been invited to discuss measures to prevent disturbances.

Atom Agency Term Showdown Nears

Comedian Doesn't Like Her Cooking

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. ISOBEL MORGAN, who filed suit in New York for separation from her husband, Henry Morgan, was answered yesterday by the radio comedian in an affidavit in which he charged she was a Communist. In addition, Morgan said she took forever dressing in the bathroom while he paced outside and that her capabilities as a cook were extremely "limited." Mrs. Morgan, who is seeking $750 a week temporary alimony, kept him on a steady diet of canned foods, he declared

Approval of 2-Year Extension Now Believed Likely

By the United Press

A bipartisan move in Congress to limit the length of terms which President Truman's atomic energy nominees may serve gets its first test early this week.

Even Administration spokesmen conceded that the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee probably will approve a measure to extend present terms of atomic commissioners for two years when the test comes.

The only committee member to express open opposition thus far is Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), who regards the limitation move as "ridiculous."

The committee is due to begin consideration of the bill before midweek and it was possible that approval will come from the majority of the senators and representatives without extended hearings.

Mr. Truman has insisted he will not accept any compromise. He wants the Senate to confirm his renomination of Chairman David E. Lilienthal to a five-year term and of other commissioners to terms ranging from one to four years.

By-Products Of Atom Help In Leukemia

By the United Press

Radioactive by-products of the atomic bomb are easing the suffering of leukemia victims in its hospitals, the Veterans Administration reported last night.

Dr. George M. Lyon, chief of the agency's radio-isotope section, also reported "encouraging progress" in use of exploding atoms to develop "new methods of diagnosis."

And radio-iodine produced at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant is being used in VA hospitals to treat some thyroid diseases, Lyon said.

Lyon said it may be too much to expect radio-isotope treatment of leukemia—"cancer of the blood"—to cure or even prolong the life of persons suffering from that malady.

"But it certainly does reduce their suffering and make their days more bearable," he said.

Radio-phosphorus is used in the leukemia treatment.

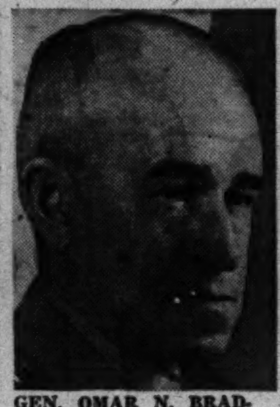
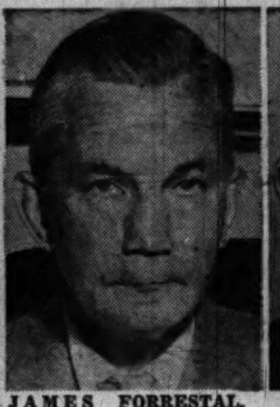
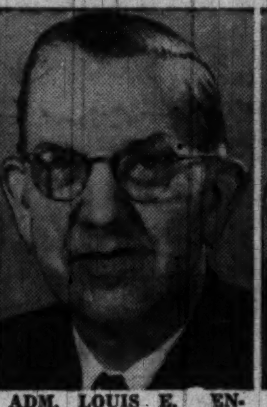
Defense Chiefs Express Their Views on Preparedness Program



GEN. OMAR N. BRADLEY, Army Chief of Staff: "Large and powerful air forces alone do not constitute 'air power.' Only by employment of air forces in concert with land and sea forces can there be such a thing as 'air power.' . . .



JAMES FORRESTAL, Secretary of Defense: "There is no question of the military desirability of the 70-group Air Force . . . (but) building up any one service without commensurate augmentation of its supporting sister services can be as dangerous as the neglect of such a service. . . .

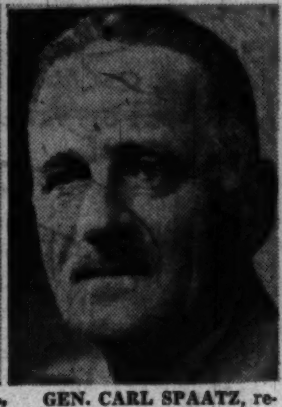


ADM. LOUIS E. DENFELD, Chief of Naval Operations: "If it is the popular mandate that this country shall have a supreme and effective air force, the necessary sea and ground components must be concurrently provided.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, Secretary of the Navy: "I support the 460,000-man Navy with comparable forces for the other services. . . . Secretary Forrestal's proposals probably will be adequate unless the international situation deteriorates. . . .

W. STUART SYMINGTON, Air Force Secretary: "Balancing Army, Navy and Air Forces is not the main issue. It is secondary to what is the balance we have against the only enemy we have today. . . . The only thing the Russians are afraid of is a great (American) Air Force. . . .

KENNETH ROYALL, Secretary of the Army: "The Army feels it needs 837,000 men . . . and $2,088,000 more next year . . . but . . . weighing all considerations, economic and military, we accept the defense proposals as now fixed by Secretary Forrestal"



GEN. CARL SPAATZ, retiring USAF Chief of Staff: "In my opinion the 70-group program, including the National Guard and Reserves, is the minimum force we should have for the security of the United States at this time. . . . If we delay we'll never have an Air Force six ready to go in the Guard.

The Air Force asked for its 70-group program, manned by 502,000 officers and men in active service The program calls for 131 groups in all, including 27 groups in the National Guard and 34 in the Air Reserve—a total of 12,000 planes, not counting stored reserves.

(A group normally consists of three squadrons of from 10 to 25 planes each — depending upon whether bombers or fighters. Seventy groups, however, would total about 6900 planes, including separate squadrons, miscellaneous craft, etc.).

At present the Air Force has 55 groups, approximately 5500 airplanes manned by 365,000 officers and men.

The Navy asked for its full authorized strength of 660,000 officers and men, including 110,000 Marines. Present strength totals 478,000 men, and many warships are badly undermanned.

All three services asked substantial amounts for new planes, ships and weapons. In all the requests totaled nine billion dollars.

This would have boosted the 1949 defense budget to 20 billion dollars, and Mr. Truman said no. He ruled that the supplemental program must be held to three billion dollars—14 billions in all.

Army Chiefs Seemed Pleased

The plan which went to Congress seemed to please Army chiefs. They were the worst off of the three services and fared the best under the division ordered by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Secretary Forrestal. It called for the draft, UMT and a 782,000-man Army.

The Air Force was allowed 400,000 men, and just short of a billion dollars, nearly half for new planes. USAF chiefs had testified previously that they could have a 70-group Air Force with this manpower. Now they said it couldn't be done because of some new missions assigned to them. So, with the men and funds allowed, they decided to "beef" up their present 55 groups and hold to that strength. The airmen were not happy.

The Navy and Marine Corps were given a strength of 552,000 men. This was to permit ships in the active fleet to build up crews to peacetime strength. Naval aviation was blostered by new plane orders and additional groups. Navy chiefs appeared satisfied with the arrangement.

All Backed Over-all Plan

On March 25, eight days after the President asked Congress to strengthen American defense forces, the military chiefs presented their program. Testifying under kleig lights at a packed, public session of the Senate Armed Services Committee, they all backed the over-all plan.

Airforce Secretary W. Stuart Symington and Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz, USAF chief of staff, both stepped forward and spoke their piece, indorsing the draft, UMT and the division of funds.

Only under questioning by several air-minded Senators, and when pressed at that, did Symington and Spaatz state that they felt the 55 groups allowed was insufficient. Both had testified under oath before the Presidential and Congressional Air Policy Boards that they considered the 70-group program the "minimum" necessary for security. When asked about this, they said they still held this view.

At subsequent hearings congressional air power advocates brought out more and more clearly the USAF dissatisfaction with the program. Symington and Spaatz never volunteered any testimony for a larger air force than planned by the Administration. They always officially backed the official plan. But when asked, they did not mince words in arguing their case.

Implied Rebuke Ineffective

An implied rebuke from President Truman, given at a press conference, did not slow down "Stu" Symington. He warned of Russia's growing air strength and the probability the USSR would have the A-bomb in a few years. The funds allowed by the Administration, Symington said, were not enough to match the Soviet. We'd end up with a second rate Air Force.

His boss, Secretary Forrestal, then came up with a plan to bolster air power without increasing appropriations. He asked Congress to put all the money budgeted for plane procurement into a special spending bill, make it available for expenditure now instead of next year and speed it through to passage.

This would permit orders to be placed several months ahead of schedule. The bill, when sent to the House floor April 14, carried 1.9 billions for new planes, divided 60-40 between the Air Force and Navy.

An understanding of congressional procedure is essential to follow what happened next. Before any action can be taken or money spent by the Government, authorizing legislation must be passed. The regular legislative committees handle such bills. Then when the latter are passed, funds to carry them out are voted in appropriation bills.

Approved Years Ago

The draft, UMT and proposals to increase the manpower of the armed services therefore were referred to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees for consideration. But authority to buy warplanes was approved by Congress years ago. Funds for additional aircraft are considered by the Senate and House Appropriations Committees and if approved, voted in one of the spending bills.

Thus, when the plane procurement appropriation bill reached the floor of the House, the major issue of the defense controversy was taken out of the hands of the legislative committees. The question of authorizing the men for either a 55- or a 70-group Air Force was still under debate in the Senate and House Armed Service Committees, along with other manpower problems of the expansion program.

But money for the planes for a 70-group Air Force could be provided by a simple amendment to the appropriation bill, added on the House floor. Leaders of the fight for greater air power did not miss their opportunity. They proposed increasing next year Air Force's aircraft procurement funds by 822 million dollars. That sum, added to the 1.2 billion dollars, already in the bill, was enough for the first year increment of the 70-group program.

Whooped Through 343-3

That was the way the issue over the 822-million-dollar amendment was presented—a vote for or against a 70-group Air Force. Administration chiefs opposed it, but the entire House Armed Service Committee backed it. In fact, they led the fight, and whooped it through, 343 to 3.

Ignored—or accepted—was the fact that this was only the beginning. Cost of a 70-group Air Force would be 7½ billions a year ultimately—more than double present outlays. Critics charged that the legislators were voting for a big Air Force so they could vote against the politically unpopular UMT and draft. But it is only fair to note that many of the leaders of the House action back all three measures.

Over in the Senate the 70-group juggernaut slowed down a bit. Senators gave more heed to Secretary Forrestal's objections to it, especially the dire threat of deficit financing.

Forrestal's Argument

Forrestal's argument is this:

He is for the 70-group program from a purely military point of view, but must consider three factors. First, air power is America's chief offensive weapon, but our bombers cannot attack an enemy from home bases. "Balanced" defence forces, therefore, are necessary. That means sufficient Army, Navy and Merchant Marine to enable the Air Force to operate from overseas bases. Our forces now are in "balance." If we go from 55 to 70 air groups, we must increase the other forces also.

Second: Government economists estimate that the additional three-billion-dollar defense program may be all that our "drum-tight economy" can stand without either "runaway" inflation or controls.

Third, military aircraft are now in a process of evolution from piston engines to jet propulsion. As some of the orders under this year's appropriations will not be let for many months, why not wait until next year to vote it? Perhaps then some improved jet bombers will be ready for production, in lieu of B-50s (improved B-29).

Symington's Case

Symington's case is as follow:

First, he acknowledges that Army and Navy forces are essential to Air Force operations, but contends the most important "balance" to be achieved is not between our armed forces.

It is our balance with Russia, our only possible enemy, that is vital, says the Air Secretary. We can't hope to match Soviet land power and our Navy is the greatest in the world. The only way we can get at Russia and Russia at us is through the air, says Symington. We must therefore concentrate on a great air force.

Second, on the economic argument, Symington discounts the need for Government controls if defense funds are boosted only for the larger USAF program.

Third, he says that we'll never have an Air Force if we keep waiting for the "perfect" plane. It will take four years to modernize our present groups—largely filled with wartime planes. Experts say the Russians may have the atomic bomb and planes capable of carrying it to the United States by then. We must start now if we are to be ready to meet the threat.

The spectacle of top Defense Chief Forrestal and Air Secretary Symington disagreeing publicly on Capitol Hill aroused much criticism in editorial columns and among members of Congress. Unification was a failure, it was said.

Agreement Demanded

Other congressional leaders declared that unification "must succeed," and demanded that Pentagon chiefs come to an agreement. Forrestal sent word they were working on it.

On April 21, Secretary Forrestal and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Omar Bradley, Admiral Louis Denfeld and General Spaatz, appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee. They presented what was hailed as an agreement—the "one-package" preparedness recommendation.

It called for 481 million dollars more than the original three-billion-dollar supplemental defense proposal—a total of $14,481,000,000 for the armed services in 1949. The additional money gave the Air Force 53,000 more men, or 453,000, and the Army 8000 extra, a total of 790,000. Nothing was added for the Navy.

The compromise gave the Air Force 66 active groups—compared to the 70 they wanted and the 55 previously allowed. Ten of the additional groups are to be formed by taking 300 B-29s out of storage. The four units of the 70-group program that were "deferred" were all to be used for support of the Army, so the Air Force gave up little here.

No More Funds Allowed

But no additional funds were allowed for new aircraft under the Pentagon agreement. Not a nickel of the 822 millions voted by the House was included.

Hardly had the new program been presented before Congressional air power advocates were calling it a "mothball air force." They said they were going to insist on funds for modernization of the USAF.

Last week, the Senate Appropriations Committee held hearings on the question. Forrestal, Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan and Army Secretary Kenneth Royall urged that the Administration program be accepted.

Symington and Spaatz, under questioning, said they were satisfied with the 66-group program for the present, but that the 822 millions must be voted if America is to have the air force it needs for defense. Thus the issue now, strictly speaking, is not 66 vs. 70 groups, but whether or not to undertake a big aircraft modernization program.

The committee voted, 16 to 1, Friday, in favor of the larger Air Force. Early this week, the big issue of the defense program will be settled on the floor of the Senate. And it is a safe bet that the air power program will win by an overwhelming majority.

Draft Issue Nears Floor

This week, also, there is a good chance that the other major issue of the preparedness program will reach the floor of both Houses. The House Armed Services Committee is expected to approve a straight 19 through 25 draft bill. The Senate committee may indorse an 18 through 25 combined draft-training bill. Congressional experts are betting the former will pass late this month.

Now that settlement of the controversial defense program seems in sight, congressional observers are pondering these questions:

1. How much part did partisan politics play in deciding the preparedness plan, with President Truman emphasizing UMT and trained reserves and Senator Taft and Speaker Martin backing a big Air Force? The answer seems to be plenty, though other factors were involved.

(2) Was Forrestal's division of funds and emphasis on "balanced" forces largely an effort to "keep peace in the family?" This charge is uninformed and superficial. A complete discussion of the forces at play in the Pentagon decisions would take volumes. Are we not seeing an inevitable revolution in our defense establishment — brought about by technological developments — in which the Air Force is replacing the Navy as "our old first line of defense?"

(3) Has Symington been insubordinate in speaking out so strongly for an all-powerful Air Force? The answer is no. He has been "correct" all along in not volunteering anything, but only answering questions. He asked and got permission from Forrestal to tell what he thought. Of course, he could have hedged, and dodged some of the questions. Many of his answers became strong pleas for his cause. But always he was legally in the clear.

(4) Should Forrestal have cracked down on Symington? The only thing he could have done was ask President Truman to fire the Air Secretary. This would have produced another "Billy Mitchell case" and an unending row.

Lies in Understanding

The answer to both of the above questions and the criticism of the "lack of unity" in the armed services lies in a proper understanding of the unification act passed last year by Congress. Many people, including Senators who should know better, seem to think that the services were "merged" last summer. Actually Congress intended to build a "defense team"—not a single military unit—and left for its own decision just such questions as the present issue.

(5) Has Forrestal really been trying to stop Symington? Has he been dodging his responsibility, playing both ends against the middle, warning against economic trouble but wanting to see the big air programs adopted? There has been talk along this line. That is, if economic trouble comes for oversize defense spending, Forrestal can say that he warned the Nation. And on the other hand, he won't have to worry that if we get into a war unprepared, he can be held responsible for our not having an air force.

Those who know Forrestal scoff at this, as being utterly unlike the man. More objectively, Congressmen who have been fighting the Air Force cause say that he has pulled no punches, missed no opportunity to push his case.

(Moscow radio said Stalin received a "tremendous ovation" when he appeared in the stand. The broadcast said the air display was commanded by Stalin's son, Maj. Gen. of the Guards Vasily I. Stalin.)

The day was cloudless and warm as self-propelled guns, heavy field guns, giant guns pulled by tractors and guns the size of railway long-range siege guns—so large it took four tractors to tow one—rumbled across the sand-strewn cobblestones.

But it was in the air that Russia's new postwar military power was displayed at its best. According to the Soviet press, similar displays were seen in Leningrad, Minsk, Kiev, Odessa and other capitals of the republics.

Bulganin declared the Soviet people were interested in a "lasting and stable peace." The difficulty of this peace policy, Bulganin said, is that it is "resisted by imperialist and war propagandist blocs which are increasing their arms and breaking the peace obligations."

Izvestia's May Day editorial was even stronger.

"The imperialistic beasts of prey again are shaking their weapons and want again to hurl humanity into sanguine butchery," the government newspaper said.

18-Year-Olds Only, Is New UMT Plan

Official View

Shortages Unlikely in Air Program

Building the proposed 70-group Air Force would not be likely to revive rationing or cause a labor shortage, high Air Force officials said last night.

In the first place, they said, the aircraft industry doesn't use enough steel and other materials that go into automobiles, refrigerators, stoves and other household items to make a difference to the civilian economy. In the second place, the Air Force expansion will move too slowly to have any material immediate effect on the Nation's labor supply.

Nor do officials believe the draft will hamper production of aircraft. They said draft-age youths usually are the least skilled and they can be replaced by women.

The most-used material in building planes is aluminum, which is abundant in the United States. Since the war ended, the aluminum industry has been running at far less than capacity.

And the 70-group expansion won't even begin to bring aluminum production up to its wartime peak, the sources said. In World War II, aluminum production in terms of airframe pounds — the way it's described when it's used for airplanes — was 1,250,000,000.

Officials estimated that peak production when the new program is rolling at top speed will be about one hundred eleven million airframe pounds. And peak production won't be reached for four or five years.

12-Month Training Period Proposed, Gurney Announces

By The Associated Press

Only 18-year-olds would be subject to the one-year training under the latest version of the compromise plan for universal military training, announced yesterday by Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.).

At the same time Gurney said the age limits on the two-year temporary draft plan in the Senate bill would be 19 years through 25 instead of 19½ through 25.

"We learn there is not enough available manpower between 19½ and 25 to fill expected needs of the two-year draft plan," the Senate Armed Services Committee chairman told a reporter. "Too many of them are veterans, married or exempt as members of the National Guard or other Class A reserve units."

Originally Senators wanted to apply the one-year training to the regular forces to youths between 18 and 19½ with two-year draft terms on men 19½ through 25. Both President Truman and Secretary of Defense Forrestal have backed the Senate compromise as a substitute for their original long-range separate UMT program.

Gurney said a complete draft of the new manpower bill will be ready for committee action Tuesday morning.

He said the over-all totals remain unchanged. These call for one year of training of 161,000 of the 18-year-olds for one year. Of these the Army would get 110,000, the Navy 30,000, the Marines 6000 and the Air Forces 15,000.

The Senate bill also carries these top manpower limits, which do not include the one-year trainees, for the regular services: Army, 790,000; Navy and Marines, 552,000, and Air Force, 453,000. These total 1,795,000.

U. N. Changes To Be Sought By Senate Unit

By The Associated Press

Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) said yesterday the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will consider proposals to change United Nations procedures before Congress adjourns.

His statement indicated that Senators who have been demanding that some action be taken to get around the Soviet vetoes in the U. N. will get a hearing before the committee. It also pointed the way toward possible action on as-yet unoffered proposals to line this country up in something akin to a military alliance with western Europe.

Vandenberg himself has said repeatedly that action should be taken to abolish the big power veto on all U. N. efforts to settle international disputes short of war.

He has not called for complete abolition of the veto where warlike measures are concerned. There is no indication he plans to do so, although Senator Taft (R., Ohio) last week urged that the U. N. charter be amended to eliminate all vetoes.

There are indications that when present studies have been completed Vandenberg may sponsor a resolution aimed at giving this country's military help to the western nations outside of the Communist orbit if any emergency arises.

Peace Parley Asked By Swedish Churches

Stockholm, May 1 (AP).—The Church of Sweden and other major Swedish religious groups today asked the chiefs of state in the United States, Britain and Russia to convene a conference for peace and understanding.

The church groups said they were making the appeal in the spirit of Christianity and in the name of humanity. They asked for a joint conference "to remove the present crisis of faith and prevent the catastrophe which a new world war would result in."

Anti-Red Bill Described as Sane Approach

By the United Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee last night urged enactment of its anti-Communist bill to cut "the threads which bind the international Communist conspiracy together."

The committee, in a formal report, emphasized that it is not seeking to deal with "theoretical communism."

"We are seeking rather to strike a body blow at the American cadre of the foreign-directed Communist conspiracy," the group said.

Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) author of the report, told reporters he believes the measure is "a sane, middle of the road" approach. Anything tougher, he said, would run afoul of the American Constitution.

The measure would outlaw "any conspiracy" to establish a foreign-controlled dictatorship in the United States. The Communist Party could operate legally by severing foreign ties and by registering annually with the Justice full membership lists.

Nixon said he hopes to bring the bill before the House Rules Committee this week, either Monday or Wednesday. He said it will probably go to the floor early next week.

Fired on False Grounds, Rodzinski Declares

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—Dr. Artur Rodzinski, dismissed conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, today said: "I was arbitrarily cashiered without a hearing or notice; defamatory and false statements were published about me."

The conductor said "charges of this sort have as their source a misinformed president (of the orchestra association), acting under the suggestion of an incompetent manager, disloyal to the president, the trustees—and to me."

Bill to Declassify Navy Jobs Perils Pay Hikes for 90,000

their representatives should be given a voice in fixing salaries. The Navy opposes the bill. Its officials say less than 20 per cent of its employes are union members.

STORY: The stories are legion about William S. Knudsen, who died the other day. But the best one, I believe, occurred when Knudsen was head of the War Production Board.

A WPB official was excited over a "scandal" in the war agency. He told Knudsen that several girls in the agency's priorities division had accepted candy, flowers, etc., from business men to speed up their applications for priorities.

The official, a long-time Government career man, proposed that the girls be fired immediately. Knudsen calmed him down with this question:

"What do these business men want from the girls—do they want priorities in the daytime, or do they want priorities for the nighttime?"

PERSONALS: Commerce has assigned James J. Riley, a placement officer, to find other jobs for Commerce employes who are being laid off . . . E. C. Turney is the new director of Commerce's Liquidation Division . . . Cash awards have been given to these Internal Revenue employes here for worthy suggestions: James R. Adair, Elna Anderson, Joseph Howell, Lucy Omohundro, Clarence Cooley, and Forrest T. Conley . . . Lynda Beagle is retiring from VA's procurement division after 30 years of service.

NOTES: The Ford Motor Co. has adopted the Navy's system of personnel classification . . . AFL's State, County and Municipal Employes are launching a Public Servants Week to begin on June 7 . . . Veterans Administration is still hiring stenographers who can take 65-words-a-minute dictation. Salaries will be raised from $37 to $41 a week when they can take 80 words a minute . . . At the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., jobs are open for P-2 through P-5 physicists and engineers, Grade 2 and 3 typists, Grade 3 and 4 stenos, and for instrument makers, machinists and electricians. Apply to the personnel office at the Naval Gun Factory.

PAY REPORT: AFL's Joint Conference of Affiliated Postal Employes of New York has called off plans for its march to Capitol Hill this week. It planned to urge immediate action on the pay raise bill.

However, AFL's Affiliated National Postal Groups disavowed the march; it said such a mass meeting would be ill advised and untimely. But in canceling their plans, the New Yorkers served notice that they want an $800 pay raise for postal workers, or else.

SHAKEDOWN: Civil Service has ordered the replacement of some, but not all, of the war service and temporaries here who took and failed these open competitive tests:

CAF-3 and 4 clerk; CAF-5 accountant; CAF-1 to 4 photostat and microphotographers; CAF-7 to 12 budget and organization and methods examiner; several kinds of engineers from P-2 to P-5; legal assistants, junior chemists, geographers, mathematicians, and social science analysts.

Flour Export License Rules Not to Be Eased

The Commerce Department announced yesterday it had decided against dropping requirements for individual licenses to ship wheat flour to the Philippines and Latin America during the second quarter of 1948. Flour exporters had requested that the requirements be eased.

2 Industries Stiffen Against Wage Boosts

By The Associated Press

Managements in two industries stiffened their opposition yesterday to demands of labor for wage increases.

Tension over this issue also remained high in several other key American industries as labor celebrated its fifty-ninth May Day throughout the world.

The newest signs of management resistance were in the meat packing and electrical appliances fields. All of the "big four" meat packers took steps to speed up meat production, despite the 48-day strike of nearly 100,000 CIO meat handlers.

The packers notified their regular workers the plants would be reopened and that the 9 cents an hour wage increase the union previously rejected would be put into effect. One of the packers, Wilson, said that unless their Chicago employes return by Monday they face the risk of being replaced. The packers say operations already have been restored in some of their plants.

Ralph Helstein, president of the striking CIO United Packinghouse Workers Union, called a meeting of the union's strike strategy committee for Sunday. He said the group will work out plans for "continued effective action."

At the same time a threat of a possible strike was directed at the Chicago Stockyards, largest in the world. CIO stockhandlers called a meeting for Tuesday to consider possible strike action stemming from a wage dispute. A strike of the 400 stockhandlers would affect some 25,000 employes and paralyze operations at the stockyards.

The General Electric Co. in New York said it would stand on its opposition against a third round of wage increases, even though the CIO United Electrical Workers Union has announced completion of all legal requirements for an industry-wide strike.

A strike of 75,000 CIO United Auto Workers against Chrysler Corp. has been set for May 12.

Reece Talks Impeachment Over Condon

By the United Press

Republican National Committee Chairman Carroll Reece said last night he hopes Congress won't have to impeach anybody to get the Condon loyalty letter.

But, he said in a letter to GOP party workers, Congress has "ample weapons" to get its hands on the disputed document which is being withheld from the House Un-American Activities Committee on direct orders of President Truman.

If all else fails, Reece said "there is always the ultimate power of impeachment by which Congress can reach any Federal official from the highest to the lowest. It is hoped that resort to drastic measures will be unnecessary."

The Condon letter was from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to the Commerce Department loyalty board. It concerns Dr. Edward U. Condon, wartime atomic scientist and director of the department's National Bureau of Standards.

The Un-American Activities Committee has been investigating Dr. Condon's loyalty.

Seek Roadblock

Rail Strike Mediators Still Stalled

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—Government mediators tried anew today to head off the scheduled May 11 Nation-wide railroad strike, but they had no progress to report.

"We're still looking for some foothold that might form the basis for a settlement," said Frank P. Douglass, chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board. Douglass conferred for several hours with representatives of three operating unions that have called the strike.

The three unions—engineers, firemen and enginemen, and switchmen—claim a membership of 190,000 key railroad workers. They are seeking wage boosts of 30 per cent with a daily minimum of $3. The unions have rejected a recommendation of a presidential emergency board for hourly boosts of 15½ cents.

The mediation efforts are the last step for averting a strike provided by the national railway labor law. Railroad workers do not come under the Taft-Hartley law, which provides for injunctions to halt major strikes.

Miss Kellems Defies U. S. on Tax Violation

Saugatuck, Conn., May 1 (AP).—Vivien Kellems, outspoken woman manufacturer, today challenged the Federal Government to indict her and force a test of the legality of the withholding tax law.

Miss Kellems, who announced last February that she no longer would deduct withholding taxes from 100 employes' pay envelopes at her Connecticut plant, said in a letter to Secretary of the Treasury Snyder that "I am deliberately violating this law."

She said that unions had paid for political advertisements in newspapers to test the Taft-Hartley labor law and that "these unions were quickly indicted and are well on their way to court."

"I feel sure that the Government will wish to extend the same cooperation and courtesy to me even though I am only a small employer.

"Therefore, I respectfully request that you please indict me."

Next Pay Check to Be Bigger, Thanks to Tax Reductions

By the United Press

Take a good look at your next paycheck; chances are good it's bigger than the last one.

The reason is the new Federal income tax cut which went into effect yesterday, giving about 45 million American a boost in take-home pay.

This was done by reducing the Federal withholding tax—the bite the Government takes out of paychecks under the withholding system.

Any paycheck issued yesterday and henceforth—no matter when the money was earned—will reflect the new, lower withholding rates. Most of us will notice the difference for the first time in the check we get next week.

This is the first noticeable effect of the $4,800,000,000 tax cut voted by Congress early last month over President Truman's veto. Everybody who pays a Federal income tax gets some benefit.

About 7,400,000 small taxpayers will go off the tax rolls entirely. Henceforth nothing will be withheld from their paychecks. All the rest of the withholding taxpayers get reductions in the amount withheld.

Generally speaking, the more that has been withheld from your paycheck, the bigger your withholding reduction will be.

The new withholding rates have been worked out so as to give you credit for reductions in your total 1948 tax payment. You will, of course, have to go ahead and file a tax return as usual for 1948.

If it turns out you have paid too much withholding tax, despite the new lower rates, that's when you can ask for a refund.

Farewell Parties, Presents Given Scores Of U. S. Employes Retiring After 30 Years

Scores of Federal Government employes ended 30 or more years of service with retirement this weekend.

Many were given farewell parties and gifts by their fellow workers on the last day on the job. Among them were:

Dean of the group in years of service, William Frederick Smith, 69, of the Office of Business Economics, Commerce Department, who has 50 years to his credit.

Smith joined the Army in 1898, later served on the Manila police force and fire department in the Philippines. After three years as clerk to the American Commercial Attache in Melbourne, Australia, he joined the Commerce Department here in 1918, becoming chief of general files, in the office of business economics, a position he held until his retirement. Fellow-workers gave him a typewriter and a poker set. He lives at the Roosevelt Hotel.

A close second with 48 years of service was Archibald Runner, 66, an employe of the memorial division, Office of the Quartermaster General, Department of the Army. Runner, who lives at 2641 15th st. nw., joined the Patent Office in 1900 and three years later transferred to the Office of the Secretary of War. He joined the Office of the Quartermaster General in 1909. He was presented the Meritorious Civilian Service Award yesterday.

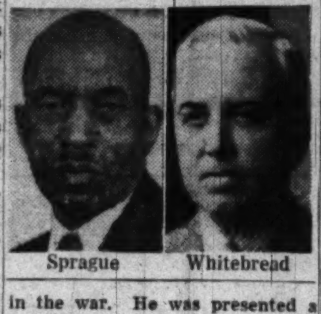
H. G. Porter, chief of the Office Service Division of the Civil Service Commission, retired after 46 years of service. Friends and co-workers, who previously had given him an outboard motorboat for use at his home at Bay Ridge, near Annapolis, said farewell at a small party.

Forty-three years of service ended for Harry J. Biondi, a civil engineer, Naval Gun Factory and Bureau of Ordnance, who received the Meritorious Civilian Service Award and a radio. Biondi lives in Gaithersburg, Md.

Miss Agnes M. Holland, assistant chief of the Division of Office Services, Office of the Secretary of the Treasury, completed 41 years of Federal service. She has served in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Bureau of the Mint and the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Vice president of the Treasury Welfare Association for many years, she lives at 6405 31st pl. nw.

Miss Birdie Hill, 4020 Hamilton st., Hyattsville, and Allen B. Sprague, 2016 5th st. nw., retired after 40 years of service. In the Office of Education as an assistant personnel officer for 30 years, Miss Hill has sworn in almost all of the present employes of the agency. Prior to that, she worked 10 years with the Patent Office. At a party in the Social Security building cafeteria, she was presented a gold watch, a pocketbook and a savings bond. Sprague was a clerk in the Mail Center, executive office of the Secretary of the Navy. He was given a gift of cash.

Realy Wesley, 300 B st. se., had 36 years of service. He joined the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department, as a messenger in 1908. Retiring in 1938, he returned to service three years later because he felt he could be of use in the war. He was presented a traveling bag and wallet and a testimonial scroll.



Sprague Whitebread

Thirty years of service ended for Mrs. Bertha Robertson, 70, chemical statistical specialist, United States Tariff Commission, and Dr. Charles Whitebread, 70, curator of Medicine and Public Health, Smithsonian Institution. Mrs. Robertson, of 1441 Clifton st. nw., received a traveling bag and a savings bond. Dr. Whitehead, 144 C st. se., was presented with a gold watch.

The Naval Gun Factory announced the following persons retired as of yesterday:

Charles T. Lawrence, inspector, 38 years of service; Cecil S. Gilbert, machinist, 36; John W. Trusheim, machinist, 36; Fred T. Watson, machinist, 40; William J. Speiden, toolmaker, 44; Otis H. Easterday, toolmaker, 36; John J. Anderson, boilermaker, 32; George Axman, machinist, 47.

Clarence Phelps, machinist, 31; William P. Reuss, electrician, 33; Charles A. Hausman, instrument maker, 30; Samuel J. Auguste, leadingman machinist, 44; John F. O'Brien, master mechanic, 43; George G. Holmes, machinist, 36; James H. Early, clerk, 43; William W. Burrell, ordnance engineer, 46; Harry C. Dauterick, clerk-typist, 38, and Mrs. Nellie M. Stein, employe relations officer, 34.

Navy Ships to Vie For Awards From Fund Dime Started

A schoolgirl's dime started a Navy trust fund that this year will give $2000 to the two most efficient ships in the fleet.

Back in 1916, Marjorie Sterrett wrote a New York newspaper (Tribune) offering her week's spending money of 10 cents "to help build a battleship for Uncle Sam."

A fund of $22,178.57 was eventually raised by a large number of newspapers that joined in the campaign and income from the money provided annual prizes for gunnery and torpedo firing.

During World War II, no prizes were awarded and the income accumulated. Now the Navy is holding battle efficiency competitions in the Atlantic and Pacific fleets.

X-Ray Drive Expected to Show 5000 Have Tuberculosis

the hold of the disease on the victim, according to Dr. Coulter.

The District, both publicly and privately, is unprepared to cope with a problem of such magnitude. This opinion by officials in both groups is based on the present inadequacy of facilities and personnel.

For instance, Dr. Coulter disclosed yesterday the list of "desperate tuberculosis cases which we are unable to hospitalize has been steadily increasing."

100 More Beds Available

This, he explained, was occurring despite a drastic program of spreading personnel at the Glenn Dale Sanatorium in the past six months to make 100 additional beds available.

In January, the District list of tuberculosis patients urgently needing hospitalization was 55. In February it was 64 and in March, 80. Last month the waiting list reached 91, and judging by survey returns, it is expected to mount sharply.

But this is not the entire picture of the present plight. Dr. Coulter freely admits these figures cover only those patients whom he has informed that immediate hospitalization is essential. In addition, there are at least another 200 "who would be much better off in the hospital."

Dr. Coulter feels that disclosing to the victims the need for hospitalization without being able to furnish it will place them under additional mental distress, thereby further hindering recovery.

Usually Curable

Tuberculosis is usually curable. But the cure is a long, hard pull dragging out over periods from eight months to two years. It requires absolute discipline of the patient's daily life accompanied by mental and physical rest.

Tuberculosis patients quartered in sanatoriums live in a world apart, existing as it were on an island of unreality from which an attempt is made to exclude toil and turmoil.

Discovering the disease and providing treatment for the victim, whether at home or in a hospital, is only part of the problem of curing the patient. His recovery is greatly dependent on his peace of mind. Often a bed-ridden patient may be mentally hitting the ceiling because of worries, and, of course, this hinders his improvement.

So, the corps of doctors, nurses and laboratory technicians must include social workers and specialists in rehabilitation. It is their responsibility to see to it that a patient's worries about his family, its income and other problems suddenly shouldered by it, are kept at a minimum.

Social Workers Assist

Since tuberculosis usually strikes hardest at persons in their work years, worries over their job weigh heavily on victims. Here, the able social worker can accomplish much by explaining the difficulty to the employer and attempting to obtain his cooperation in holding a job open for the victim.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. makes a practice of placing victims on leave, so that their recovery, undoubtedly, is hastened by their knowledge that they have a job to go back to.

Helping the family budget its income, obtaining public welfare help and, in general, assisting in reorganizing family affairs, calls for real ingenuity and enterprise on the part of the social worker.

Upon recovery, assistance rendered in locating a proper position which will not tax the former patient and bring a return of the disease, is also within the province of the specialists supplementing medical efforts. The situation in this area of tuberculosis care is serious. There is a definite shortage of trained workers in Washington.

Another handicap is the lack of public funds to support the family of a victim. According to staff members of the District Tuberculosis Association, penny-pinching here may be wasteful.

They object particularly to the "means test," by which governmental officials are directed to uncover and force use of all existing funds before public aid may be given. Frequently they charge this results in wiping out the few savings the patient has been able to accumulate over the years and causes him great mental anxiety.

They point out that in several States, such as New York, this has been recognized and the "means test" canceled.

What these subsidiary workers do can best be shown by a few case histories:

A 29-year-old car cleaner suddenly learned that he had incurred tuberculosis. He lived with his wife and 8-month-old child in a two-room flat, sparsely furnished.

They Accept Situation

Although emotionally numbed at first, in the words of a Public Health Bureau worker, the couple, learning that chances of recovery were good, accepted the situation. The wife was told she would have to take on additional responsibility. She offered to go to work, but this raised the problem of hiring someone to care for the infant, which would cost more than the wife could earn.

The social worker, who came next, helped the couple apply for public welfare, which amounted to about $25 a week, or half the patient's previous income. This meant changing an already fairly low standard of living to a much lower one. The couple did not like the idea of going on relief because of the stigma attached, but finally agreed with the worker's recommendation. The children, friends and close relatives of the worker were given X-ray checkups and advised against close contact with the victim.

Another case involved a teen-age girl, and when informed of her unexpected affliction, refused to accept the diagnosis. The principal reason for this was a driving ambition with which hospitalization would interfere.

A worker was assigned and managed to help the girl accept the situation. Eventually, a plan for continued education while recuperating was worked out. The student later became art editor of the patients' newspaper and a member of the Patients' Council.

60% Here Go "AWOL"

Unless the social and rehabilitation workers accomplish their missions, the patient frequently goes AWOL or "leaves against medical advice," as health officials term it. This, of course, hinders the patient's recovery; in fact, may undo all previous good accomplished.

About 60 per cent of the District's tuberculosis patients now go AWOL, because of various worries, according to Edward K. Funkhouser, executive secretary of the District Tuberculosis Association. Of this number about 45 per cent return for further treatment.

Tuberculosis, while found in all parts of the world, is particularly prevalent in cities, and in their most overcrowded districts. Washington, which has a substantial number of such areas, has been faced with the T. B. problem for many years.

In 1900, the tuberculosis death rate here was 200 per 100,000 population. In 1944, the rate was cut to 66 and last year it was 62.3, or almost double the national average of 35.9. It was the District's fifth ranking cause of death.

Survey Is First Step

The mass X-ray survey was the first step toward controlling, and perhaps, eventualy, eradicating the disease. The victims must be found before they can be cured. And the sooner they are found, the fewer they pass the disease to.

About three months after the survey is completed the District will have a detailed picture of the total tuberculosis problem. The delay is caused by follow-up interviews and tests when X-ray indicate suspicious areas.

Present indications, according to Dr. Coulter and Funkhouser, are that unless drastic action to provide care and treatment are taken now, Greater Washington residents will be in daily danger of contacting the disease from known carriers who have not been isolated.

Senators Seek River Bill Cut Of 200 Million

By the United Press

The chairman and two other Republicans on the Senate Appropriations Committee charged last night that a $708,586,666 bill for flood control and rivers and harbors work would permit "waste and extravagance on a large scale."

Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Reed (R., Kans.) joined Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) in a fight to whack $200 million off the money bill. They plan to ask the Senate this week to send the measure back to committee with instructions to trim the total by that much.

The economy-minded trio was given virtually no chance of success. One of them admitted privately that their fight was a lost cause.

Under their proposal, Army engineers would be ordered to designate projects to be eliminated or given less money. The three Senators declined to name any project for which they thought the appropriation should be cut.

17 Girls' Training School Employes Forced On Payless Furloughs as Inmates Drop to 8

Employes at the National Training School for Girls have been forced to take three-month payless furloughs became only eight girls are being cared for in facilities for 35, Superintendent Rose Cooper revealed last night.

Sources close to the Senate District Committee said they plan steps to make better use of the facilities. The present Receiving Home for Children may be used by the school after the new receiving home now under construction is occupied next August, they indicated.

Kimball Sanborn, member of the professional staff of the Senate Appropriations Committee, assigned to the District, said he favored moving girls from a privately operated home at Croome, Md., to the training school if the receiving home can be converted.

Welfare officials said approximately 50 girls had been sent to Croome by the Welfare Board.

Sanborn said the girls would have better living conditions, schooling and "benefits" at the training school, which offers instruction in handicrafts, cooking, sewing and beauty culture.

Employes' furloughs began last November, Mrs. Smith said. Although a staff of 21 is authorized by this year's $70,000 budget, only 17 are employed. Every three months seven of them are required to rotate on the payless furlough plan, she revealed.

Daily average population between last July and the end of March was 20 girls, she said. But the number actually under care since February has been eight a day. When the school is full, it costs the District about $1200 a year for each inmate, but with reduced numbers this year it has amounted to approximately $2000 an inmate, she said.

Approximately $6000 has been saved by the furlough rotation plan, she added.

Detroit Teachers Told To Spank if Necessary

Detroit, May 1 (AP).—Teachers in Detroit's public schools were told today to give Junior a spanking if he gets smart in class. That goes for his sister, too.

The matter came to a head when the mother of a 10-year-old boy complained he had been spanked in school for pulling a little girl's hair.

Superintendent Arthur Dondinea, in a formal statement, said "the teacher stands in the place of the parent toward pupils during school hours."

In other words, what works in the woodshed also works in the schoolroom.

Writer Is Facing Charge Arising From Accident

Joseph A. Livingston, 43, of 3227 "olta pl. nw., business columnist of The Washington Post, has been asked to appear at the Corporation Counsel's office at the Municipal Center May 11 to answer charges arising out a traffic accident which injured a pedestrian Friday.

Livingston was charged with driving the wrong way on a one-way street after his station wagon struck William W. Smith, 33, of 421 N. Thomas st., Arlington, in the 1700 block of G st. nw. Smith, who suffered a fractured left foot, was reported in good condition yesterday at Emergency Hospital.

Smith, operator of a parking lot near the scene of the accident, stepped from between two parked cars to cross the street, according to police, colliding with the side of the station wagon.

Bed Breaks Fall From Attic

A 37-year-old woman narrowly escaped serious injury last week when she fell through an opening in an attic and landed on a bed in the room below.

She was one of 87 persons treated at local hospitals last week for home accident injuries, the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported.

A 30-year-old man who was burned to death when his mattress caught fire from a cigarette was one of three fatalities from home accidents during the week.

Persons injured included a man who suffered a skull fracture in a fall from a third-floor window, a 5-year-old girl who swallowed a lollipop, and two brothers who were punctured with nails.

Deaths from home accidents total 104 so far this year, as compared with 85 this time last year. Injuries have been 1698 to date, as compared with 1531 on this date last year.

Earl K. Long Due In Capital Today

Governor-Elect Earl K. Long of Louisiana is due in Washington today for a round of conferences with various Government department heads.

Great Atom Discoveries Will Help U. S. Lead World to Peace, Truman Tells Health Parley

ing away any secrets in disclosing that this country is on the verge of amazing discoveries in the use of atomic energy.

So many people, he said, think only of the destructive nature of the breaking of the atom, but for himself, he said, he didn't think of it that way. He believed unparalleled good for the world was coming soon from this discovery, he said.

President Truman reiterated his demands for universal training, national health insurance, a department of health and welfare, a new hospital program, a very great extension of social security and a greater attention to rehabilitation of the crippled.

He said he still believed in the 21-point program on health and welfare which he had sent Congress on September 6, 1945, and added:

"I hope that the Congress sometime or other will come to the conclusion that it is right and will give us the things that I asked for in that message."

He was interrupted with prolonged applause.

Mr. Truman's speech before a distinguished audience of 800 of the Nation's leading health authorities is his first major extemporaneous speech on the record for many months.

It was frequently interrupted with vigorous and prolonged applause. Its success, observers believed, is such that it will be a pattern for the President's scheduled slow campaign trip through the West.

Follows ASNE Success

Recently after the President delivered an off-the-cuff but also off-the-record speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors here in Washington there were innumerable questions as to why he did not speak more frequently without following a prepared script.

This, it is clear, is the President's answer to that ASNE success.

President Truman traced his interest in health and welfare back to 1917 when he tried to recruit young men for a National Guard regiment and found so many unfit for the service of their country.

One of the most disgraceful revelations of World War II, he said, was the fact that one third of the Nation's young men were rejected for military service as physically or mentally unfit.

That, he said, is one of the primary reasons he asked for universal training, because he hoped those defects could be corrected.

His experience as a county commissioner in Missouri had shown him years ago, Mr. Truman declared, that only the rich and the indigent can get adequate medical care.

This Nation must, he said, make health and hospital services available to the middle class who are the people who make this Nation great.

"The fact that we have a well informed so-called middle class in this country," he said, "is what makes us the greatest republic the sun has ever shown upon or ever will shine on again, and I want to keep that republic going just as it has gone in the past, by any small or great contribution I can make to that end."

Several times Mr. Truman drew laughter from his audience with a quick shift from the serious to a lighter mood.

Right after his demand for universal training, for example, he said most people are not physically fit because they are too lazy to take care of themselves.

"We sit down and wait until this paunch comes," he said, "and we get bent over and then we try to correct it by heroic methods and 9 times out of 10, if you did go along and do what you ought to in the first place, you wouldn't have that situation."

Sees Eventual Cancer Cure

President Truman predicted that a cure for cancer would come in time.

He was convinced, he said, that most heart trouble now is caused "by the fact that we are living in an age that makes day before yesterday day after tomorrow in about 10 minutes."

He couldn't suggest a cure for that, he said.

One of his great interests is the rehabilitation of the 23 million disabled persons in the United States, he said. He referred to the automobile as one of the most terrible weapons ever invented in this country. It has killed more persons, he said, in the past 20 years than were killed in all the wars we ever fought, including the last one.

Citations to Four

President Truman spoke after Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing presented special citations of merit to Al Capp, cartoonist of L'il Abner; to Walter Winchell and to Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, famed dancer.

A citation in absentia was given to Ralph Edwards of the Truth and Consequences program.

Ewing said the citations were given for services in raising millions of dollars to improve the health of the Nation.

In responding, Winchell, organizer of the Damon Runyon fund to fight cancer, disclosed that a large allocation of funds is to be made next week to Howard University. The fund has already reached the two-million-dollar mark.

Robinson said he had been born in Richmond, Va., May 28, 1878. Thus, he said, he had spent 69 years waiting for this scroll and he said he will spend the next 40 years trying to show he is worthy of it.

Holds Education Key to Peace

Earlier delegates heard Dr. Brock Chisholm, executive secretary, Interim Commission, World Health Organization, warn 800 delegates that another war will mean world suicide.

Survival of the human race, Chisholm said, depends upon whether the world's children can be educated for peace during the next 25 years.

His speech was delivered at a luncheon in observance of Child Health Day. Dr. Lee Forrest Hill, president of the American Academy of Pediatrics presided, and Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder-president of the National Council of Negro Women, read President Truman's proclamation setting May 1 as Child Health Day.

Not only atomic warfare, Chisholm declared, but the far grimmer prospect of biological warfare, means that only a very small minority of mankind can survive another war.

Therefore, if the world is not to go up in flames in another 25 years, the children of the world must be trained in a far different manner from the present generation, "who got the world into the mess it is in now," Dr. Chisholm warned.

Chisholm, a psychiatrist of international distinction, and World War II director general of the medical service of the Canadian army, traced the fundamental trouble in the world to a lack of security, and that security, he said, must be established from infancy.

It is lack of that basic security, he said, which makes so many willing to be followers of "those neurotics driven by a need for power," who plunge the world into war.

To avoid war which will destroy civilization, Chisholm declared, children must be given first of all a sense of security.

Mere food supply and shelter will not supply that sense of security in small infancy on which all future attitudes are based, he said.

In addition, infants must have "unquestioned, all-embracing and obvious love and nothing else will do."

If the infant does not have this, the child and man will spend the rest of his life searching for it and be ready to follow some power-drunk neurotic to world destruction, Chisholm told his audience of doctors, public health specialists and mental hygiene experts.

Secondly, the child must be given the opportunity for a pattern of behavior stretching out from the family to the municipality, the nation and now the world.

Even now few persons in this generation, he declared, have reached a status of national citizenship which requires "the deepest sense of loyalty to all the members of the national community irrespective of race, creed or color."

If the world is to survive, however, Chisholm said, the children of today must learn to be world citizens with concern for the welfare of the peoples of the whole world.

These concepts are difficult for people of this generation, said Chisholm, but must be taught the next if humanity is to live.

He said above all, children of today must be taught to face realities, however bitter, and never seek refuge in the symbol of this generation — the three monkeys, "See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil."

That, he said, is the ghastly symbol of a generation which shut its eyes to the coming of war because reality was too unpleasant not yet far enough ahead in its social health.

Sixty-four nations have now signed the constitution of the World Health Organization, Chisholm told his audience, and agreed to a definition of health as:

"A state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity."

Assembly Called by Ewing

The National Health Assembly which has brought together the Nation's leading medical, dental, public health and mental hygiene authorities for a four-day session which opened yesterday was called by Ewing, in response to a request from President Truman to develop a 10-year national health program.

The 800 physicians, dentists and psychiatrists are divided up into 14 different sections for exchange of ideas on different health problems.

The mental health group, Section 12, of which famed Psychiatrist Dr. William C. Menninger is chairman, met yesterday at the Mayflower.

Dr. H. Edmund Bullis, executive director of the Delaware State Society for Mental Hygiene, told Section 12 about a Delaware plan to strengthen resistance to psychological disorders by "human relations classes" in the sixth and seventh grades of Delaware's public schools.

Health Insurance Backed

One of the most controversial sections of the whole assembly is that dealing with the Nation's need for medical care. That group, Section 8, met in the Statler yesterday with Dr. Hugh Leavell, professor of public health practice, Harvard School of Public Health, as chairman.

Delegates were handed a statement from the agenda committee on the problem of medical care. The committee agreed on three major conclusions:

1. That adequate medical service for the prevention of illness, the care and relief of sickness, and the promotion of a high level physical and mental health should be available to all.

2. That sound financing of personal health services requires (a) effective application of the principle of prepayment or insurance, and (b) the use of public resources for services not covered in the prepayment or insurance program and for persons for whose care public responsibility is acknowledged.

3. That high standards and reasonable costs require close coordination of the services of physicians, hospitals and other health agencies, in all phases of prevention, diagnosis and treatment.

Dr. Fishbein on Hand

Delegates expected to spend four days battling over the question of socialized medicine. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, is on hand to present AMA's opposition.

Section 8 also heard Dr. W. Montague Cobb, professor of anatomy, Howard University, declare that racial discrimination is a barrier to the availability of medical care.

Tired, "All-In"—Listless Feeling Brought To Halt

As Vibrant Energy is Released To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Do you get up in the mornings still tired, feel down-and-out all day? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Overwork, undue worry, cold, flu or other illness often wears down the red-blood-cells.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

That, he said, is the ghastly symbol of a generation which shut its eyes to the coming of war because reality was too unpleasant to face.

It is in the field of mental and social health that the world is most deficient, Chisholm warned. The responsibility of properly selecting elected leaders is more important than in any other period of history, he declared, "since we put our lives and the lives of our children in their hands."

"Man must learn no longer to drift, but to take care of his own destiny if the children are to survive," he said.

It is failure in the field of social and mental health which is most responsible for the spread of diseases like malaria, Chisholm asserted. Sufficient medical knowledge exists, he declared, to wipe out such disease but the world is not yet far enough ahead in its social health.

Sixty-four nations have now signed the constitution of the World Health Organization, Chisholm told his audience, and agreed to a definition of health as:

Tired, "All-In"—Listless Feeling Brought To Halt

As Vibrant Energy is Released To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Do you get up in the mornings still tired, feel down-and-out all day? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Overwork, undue worry, cold, flu or other illness often wears down the red-blood-cells.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

The better you live,
the more oil you need...

A report on the biggest, hardest, most useful year we ever had!...

In this country and through the world, human progress calls for more and more oil. To do their part in meeting the great need for oil in 1947, Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) and its affiliates performed the biggest job in their history. They produced more oil and delivered more products; took in and paid out more money; employed more workers and served more people than ever before. And far more than ever was spent for facilities to meet growing needs—426 million dollars in a single year, paid for out of past and current earnings of the business. It was a year of great accomplishment; great progress. Here are some highlights from this significant year, based on the Company's Annual Report to its 171,000 stockholders, which has just been issued...

1 World-wide, the need for oil surpassed all records. To help meet the need, crude oil production by Jersey Company affiliates was increased 8% over 1946, setting another new record. Their production was 14% of the world's total for the year.

2 In the U.S., too, the need was at record levels. Three million more cars to fuel than pre-war; twice as many tractors and trucks on farms; a million and a half more oil-heated homes; five times as many diesel locomotives. Total U.S. consumption of oil products was 11% greater than 1946, 12% greater even than the peak war year. In meeting this need, we set new output records month after month, accounting for 9% of U.S. total crude oil, and 14% of total refinery runs.

3 The unusually hard winter made heating oil and kerosene supply a special problem. By extraordinary effort in refineries and hard work and long hours by people all along the line, we were able to deliver about 25% more of these products than in the winter before.

4 With such big demand, big supply, and rising prices, money came in—and was paid out—in all-time record figures. Total dollar income reached $2,387,000,000—45% over 1946. Operating charges and other deductions from income reached $2,118,040,000—44% over 1946. A record sum of $466,954,000 was paid to our employees.

5 Net consolidated earnings of the Company and affiliates—$269,000,000—equalled $9.83 per share, or 11.3% of total income as compared to 10.8% in 1946. Dividends of $4.00 per share were paid by the parent Company.

6 Most important dollar figure of the year was the 426 million dollars spent for new wells, plants, tankers, pipelines and all the other things it takes to get the oil you need. Part of a billion dollar program covering the two years 1947-48, it was by far the greatest capital investment we have ever faced. The money came almost entirely from earnings, past and current—money made on the job went back into the job.

7 Transportation of oil was a big job. During the year, we bought 23 ocean-going tankers from the U. S. Maritime Commission, and early this year we ordered 6 new 26,000-ton, 16-knot ships, the largest we ever operated. Pipelines were pushed to new records—our trunk lines delivering 83 billion barrel-miles, or 11 billion more than in 1946.

8 In discovering new oil, we spent 5 times as much as pre-war—16% more than last year. (Altogether, the country's known oil reserves were increased by 600 million barrels during the year, in spite of record consumption.)

9 Cost of research also increased—$18,200,000 was spent for new knowledge. Considerable progress was made in finding more efficient and lower-cost processes for making gasoline and other liquid fuels synthetically from natural gas, oil shale, and coal.

10 Labor-management relations remained excellent, continuing our exceptional record of industrial harmony. Employee compensation was adjusted upward during the year to help meet rising living costs. A total of $55,396,000 was saved in employee Thrift Plans, of which $20,987,000 was saved by employees and $34,409,000 contributed by the Company and its affiliates.

THE 1947 JOB WAS A BIG ONE. The jobs ahead are bigger still. In a democracy the responsibility for making a better world rests with the individual and the individual enterprise. It is clear that an enterprise like Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) must exercise a full realization of the social responsibilities of profit—must understand that the peace, advancement, and the security of the people of the world are the best guarantee of the Company's own progress and security. We intend now, as always, to demonstrate in action that the free, competitive American enterprise system is far superior to any other. We believe that the Company and its affiliates are so organized, and their business so conducted, that they will continue to serve people well.

Half Sessions Will Continue In Arlington

School Board Says 'Severe' Budget Cut Forces Action in 1st and 2d Grades

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

Arlington's school board will be forced to continue half-day sessions in county first and second grades because of a "severe" cut in the 1948-49 school budget, Chairman Barnard Joy said yesterday.

The budget was trimmed by the Arlington County board Friday night from about $1,975,000 asked by schools to a lump sum allocation of $1,750,000.

Shortly before Chairman Joy made his statement, County Board Member Alfred Frisbie said he would vote for a $100,000 supplementary appropriation to the schools when two anticipated Arlington taxes are levied by the county.

Frisbie, who had voted for the school budget cut Friday night, referred to taxes on Arlington businesses and to an auto license tax, both of which are expected to raise between $300,000 and $400,000 annually.

According to School Board Chairman Joy, the school appropriation cut ends plans to place all first and second graders on a full-day basis this fall.

The school board had drawn up elaborate plans to find space for the full-day session, including use of nearby churches, temporary buildings, and conversion of present school space now used for other purposes.

Following a school board meeting yesterday morning to discuss the budget slash, Joy also announced that the $54,000 item in the school budget for county recreation purposes "will be deleted."

Since education "is more important than recreation," Joy said, the money will be used for school purposes instead.

He pointed out that the school board controlled the way in which the $1,750,000 sum is spent.

Deletion of the recreation fund will end Arlington's supervised summer playground program by June 30 "unless some other provision is made," Joy said.

In yesterday's school board meeting it was announced that the $1,750,000 appropriation gives the schools the equivalent of a 19-cent increase over its share last year, in the $3.25 tax rate.

However, Joy emphasized that 15 cents of this increase would be needed to carry on schools at their present level, and that the school board had asked an increase of 35 cents.

4 Firemen Hurt at Blaze On 15th St.

SECONDS BEFORE FALLS—Firemen are pictured fighting the fire at 3033 15th st. nw., yesterday a few seconds before two of them were hurled from the ladder on a second-story porch roof

Two firemen were hurt yesterday afternoon when catapaulted from their ladder while fighting flames from above a second-story porch roof at 3033 15th st. nw.

A third fireman, knocked from the roof by the falling ladder, resumed firefighting but collapsed four hours later at the stationhouse and was taken home. Another fireman was hit by falling slate during the blaze.

Injured were:

Pvt. John Richards, 35, of 611 Quintana pl. nw., hurtled from his ladder perch to the crotch of a tree. He suffered a severe blow across the forehead, apparently from the hose nozzle, and injuries to his back.

Pvt. John F. Perry, 27, of 101 Spring st., Chevy Chase, Md., tumbled to the ground in the same mishap. He suffered back injuries in the fall.

Sergt. H. W. Swanner, 38, of 1342 Rittenhouse st. nw., of Engine Company No. 11, knocked to the ground by the ladder's fall. He was examined at the scene for apparently minor injuries and returned to duty. At 9 p. m., however, he complained of feeling ill and was taken home, reportedly "in a state of collapse."

Pvt. Robert E. Casey, 27, of 18 Gallatin st. ne., cut on the hand by a piece of falling slate. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

An occupant, Mrs. Peggy Bird, 43, was carried from her room partially overcome by smoke inhalation after the fire was virtually out. Firemen said she stayed in her room rather than flee in her bathrobe. She was released after treatment at Emergency Hospital.

Firemen witnesses said Richards and Perry were on a ladder perched on the porch roof directing water through an attic window when the hose "kicked" on them, due to change in water pressure. The force threw the ladder backward, spilling them in midair.

Richard was thrown into the tree, where he lay conscious but unable to help himself. A heavy man, he was removed only after two ladders were raised and two firemen on each ladder carried him down between them.

The two injured firemen, both members of No. 11 Engine Company, 1338 Park rd. nw., were taken to Emergency Hospital in a Fire Department ambulance.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, was confined to the attic of the 8-room, 2½-story frame dwelling owned by Mrs. Madeleine T. Long. Mrs. Long said she could give no immediate estimate of damages but said the attic was almost destroyed and water and smoke damage was "heavy" throughout.

Young Urges Peace 'Alert' For Disaster

The District should explore the possibility of using war-developed methods in dealing with "peacetime disasters" like the Empire Building collapse, Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said yesterday.

The suggestion was made in Young's final report on the Empire disaster, which killed four here last December 16. It recommended no disciplinary action against District employes. Young said he would ask the Commissioners' approval of the report Monday.

Young noted that even with "no avoidable delay" it took 48 hours for the District to obtain a privately owned "powerful crane with a long boom" to begin removing the building's roof and make it safe for workers to probe the debris.

The crane "could have been gotten there faster if there had already been in existence some system or organization by which we could have put our hands immediately on the right man with the right equipment," he said.

"Moreover, the time thus saved might, in some other case, make the difference between life and death, although in this case it would not have," he added.

He made no specific recommendation, but said a "simplified form" of wartime civil defense organization "might be applicable." The city, for example, might keep an up-to-date list of contractors with equipment suitable for removing debris and bodies—like the one kept for use during the war in the event of bombing, he indicated.

To forestall similar disasters, he revealed, a "competent structural engineer" is being assigned to check approximately 250 applications a year involving structural changes to buildings of more than three stories that have "bearing walls."

(These buildings rest their entire weight on masonry rather than modern steel framework, he explained.)

Young concurred with the five-man investigating board that reported March 17 that the "principal cause" of the collapse was failure of a first-floor wall section, which had not been reinforced to comply with District regulations.

He attributed this "error" to failure of two District employes to "achieve a 'meeting of minds'" over instructions requiring rebuilding of the wall section.

Steps are being taken to improve the inspection department's filing system, he revealed.

Fast Naming Of Steinem Criticized

Citizens Group Had no Voice in Appointment to Education Board

The Federation of Citizens' Associations last night "deplored the haste" in which Albert E. Steinem was appointed to fill a vacancy on the District Board of Education.

Appointment of Steinem, 55-year-old local attorney and the resignation of his predecessor Dr. Robert A. Maurer, was announced Thursday by Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws following a general term session meeting of District Court justices.

The federation in a resolution offered by Ralph W. Donnelly, chairman of its national and local suffrage committee, said Steinem's appointment was announced so quickly that citizens had no "chance to even suggest likely successors."

Northeast Held Slighted

The resolution also expressed "regret that the court failed to give Northeast Washington representation on the board, containing the present inequitable representation of 8 members from Northeast Washington out of 9 on the board."

In other action at its meeting in the District Building the federation went on record as favoring stricter rules for obtaining driver's licenses, including fingerprinting.

The fingerprinting of holders of drivers' licenses was urged in a report offered by Baxter Smith, chairman of the organization's safety, highways and waterways committee.

Other Recommendations

The report also recommended: reexamination of those with a driver's license who are involved in accidents involving personal injury or property damage over $50, and of those arrested for five or more traffic violations within a 12-month period.

The report also requested Congress to provide funds for employment of personnel necessary to put the program into effect.

The federation also urged action to relieve traffic congestion on Independence ave. by cutting back the Capitol grounds west of South Capitol st. so that Independence ave. can be widened between 1st st. nw. and S. Capitol st. to bring the north curb into line with the north curb east of S. Capitol st.

In making its recommendation, Smith's committee said "the time is not in sight when the plans for the East Capitol st. development will be agreed upon by all concerned" and that further continuation of the bottle neck is "inexcusable."

The federation also favored making 10th st. and 12th st. nw. between Vermont and Pennsylvania aves. one-way streets, and widening of the north approach to the Eleventh Street Bridge over the Anacostia River on the east side of the river so that four full lines of traffic can use that approach.

The federation, in addition, urged the District Commissioners to speed completion of the South Capitol Street Bridge.

Four Escape Serious Injury In Car Plunge

Four persons escaped serious injury about 9:30 o'clock last night when a sedan driven by Boleslaus A. Lyczak, 28, chief gunner's mate at Anacostia Naval Receiving Station, overturned in Rock Creek Park below Pierce Mill Bridge.

A woman who identified herself to park police as Miss Marsha Daniel of 6000 13th st. nw. was trapped inside the car when it overturned. She was pulled out through a window by Rescue Squad No. 2. Miss Daniel was treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

Plunges Over Embankment

The car plunged over a 4-foot embankment on Blagden ave. near Beech dr. Lyczak and two other occupants, whose names were not immediately available, were uninjured.

Four-year-old Raymond Gibbons, of 116 Pierce st. nw., suffered head injuries at 2:30 p. m. yesterday when he was struck by an automobile near his home, police said, after running out from in front of a parked truck. He was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital in undetermined condition. Police identified the automobile driver as Alfred Jones, 28, of 110 3d st. ne.

Mother, Daughter Hurt

A mother and her 20-year-old daughter were seriously hurt at 2:55 p. m. at 18th and Taylor sts. ne., when their car was struck by another which police said passed through a stop sign. Injured were the driver, Mrs. Dorothy H. Bletch, 46, and daughter, Marjorie, both of 4000 19th pl. ne.

Mrs. Bletch was admitted to Casualty Hospital with possible fractures of the ribs; her daughter, for injuries of the head and right shoulder. Police charged the other driver, John E. Eisler, 39, of 2749 Macomb st. nw., with failure to stop at a stop sign.

Joint Meeting Planned

The women's auxiliary of the Arlington County Medical Society will meet with its Alexandria counterpart on Tuesday at 12:15 p. m. at the Collingwood Restaurant, Mount Vernon hwy., Alexandria.

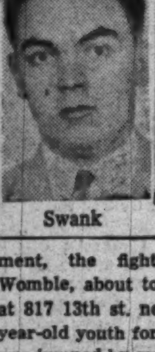
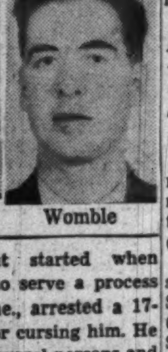
Brawl Lands 8 in Custody And 2 Policemen in Hospital



Swank



Womble

A free-for-all fight in the 800 block of 13th st. ne., early yesterday landed eight persons in police custody and two policemen in Casualty Hospital.

The brawl began when a policeman tried to take a 17-year-old boy into custody for alleged disorderly conduct, according to statements filed at Municipal Court by the two policemen.

Hospitalized were Pvts. Harvey C. Womble and Ray L. Swank of the Ninth Precinct.

Arrested and placed under $500 bond for court appearances Thursday on charges of assault on an officer were:

Mrs. Minnie Lou Jackson, 44, of 821 13th st. ne.; George E. Washington, 22, of 817 13th st. ne.; Roland Smith, 27, 712 13th st. ne., and Caesar N. Stevenson, 34, of 817 13th st. ne.

Charged with disorderly conduct was Willie Nelson, 44, of 643 Acker st. ne., who forfeited $25.

The other three arrested were juveniles.

According to the police statement, the fight started when Womble, about to serve a process at 817 13th st. ne., arrested a 17-year-old youth for cursing him. He was jumped by several persons and thrown to the sidewalk.

Swank came to his rescue and was felled by a paving brick. Seven scout cars, two patrol wagons and several motorcycles were needed to quiet the affray.

After hospitalization for numerous cuts and bruises, Womble and Swank were released from Casualty.

Bodies in Wrecked Trainer West of Leesburg; Search Plane Forced Down

By Charles J. Yarbrough
Post Reporter

The bodies of two missing Air Force men were found in their wrecked plane on a wooded, cloud-blanketed mountaintop 52 miles west of Washington yesterday afternoon.

One of the victims is Col. Richard A. Warner, 42, of 445 Argyle dr., Arlington, Va. The other is Air Force Reserve Pilot Lieut. Edward Jay of Orchard Place Airport, Chicago.

Sought since early Wednesday by weather-hindered Air Rescue Service and Pennsylvania National Guard aricraft, the wreckage was found near the Appalachian Trail by Bolling Field Maj. Louis W. (Bozie) Berger, former major league baseball star.

Major Berger, visiting the mountain home of his father-in-law, Dr. C. D. Lowe, 3429 Oakwood ter. nw.; an Agriculture Department scientist, came upon the wreck on a little-used trail.

With Major Berger was Maj. William Broome, also of Bolling Field.

The crash scene is in the same general area where a Capital Air Lines transport crashed last June killing 50 persons, west of Leesburg, Va., near Round Hill.

Bolling Field's Commanding Gen. B. M. Hovey, in announcing discovery of the plane, advanced no probable cause of the crash. The single-engine advanced trainer, based at the Orchard Place airport, had been missing since Tuesday on a flight from Chicago through Wright Field at Dayton to Bolling. General Hovey said a board of inquiry would begin investigation of the crash and that the Air Rescue Service would remove the bodies today.

Shortly before the wreckage was found, near-disaster stalked a crippled B-25 Pennsylvania National Guard bomber which had come to participate in the search.

Bad weather, which has hindered a thorough air search most of the week, was virtually hanging on the rims of the hills surrounding the Elkins, W. Va., airport where Air Rescue had set up an advanced base.

Air crews, impatient at the weather delay, went into action when the B-25, piloted by Capt. James Kuntz, reported itself in trouble

One engine was throwing oil and smoke, Kuntz reported by radio as he tried to find a hole in the leaden sky. Radio reception was poor and a B-17 search plane, out of sight in the murk, volunteered to relay ground instructions.

Judging only by the sound of the engine, Air Rescue unit members told him he appeared to be directly over the airport and advised a cautious letdown through the fog.

As the two-engine bomber came into sight, smoke and oil trailed from the engine. Though ground crews and a para-rescue team stood by on the ground. Kuntz brought the cripple in without mishap.

Head of Home Considered For Huff Post

John Tramburg, superintendent of the District Industrial Home School, is being considered as possible successor to succeed the late Ray Huff as director of the District Welfare Department.

Fred S. Kogod, assistant chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, last night admitted that Tramburg's name "has been discussed" by "some members" of the board.

Col. Waldron E. Leonard, head of the D. C. Veterans' Center, has also been mentioned for the post along with several other candidates, Kogod said

Tramburg declared only.

"I have not applied for the job, nor have I been offered it."

Kogod indicated that a majority of board members favor advancement of some official already in the District Government rather than calling in an outsider to head the welfare department. The board's first and sole nominee, Assistant Director Raymond Clapp, was rejected reecntly by District Commissioners as not acceptable.

Falls Church Boy Wins Scholarship To Gonzaga High

A Falls Church, Va., youth last night was judged scholarship winner of annual competitive and entrance examinations to Gonzaga Catholic High School here.

The four-year scholarship to the school was awarded to James Shreve of 913 Park ave., Falls Church, eighth grade graduate of St. James School there. He won out in a field of 260 entrance applicants from public and parochial schools.

Runners-up, who were each awarded two-year scholarships, included: Russell Shaw of 1654 Irving st. nw., from Sacred Heart School; Gilbert Winner of 1361 Rittenhouse st. nw., from Nativity School, and Ludwig Kuttner of 1600 Otis st. ne., from Campus School of Catholic University.

Family Doctors 'Revolt' Against Drop in Esteem

Specialist Trend Produces Acute General Practice Problem in D. C.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The family physician—that faithful standby for all emergencies—is in a state of rebellion.

It's not a revolt against authority. Rather, it's a protest by the general practitioner agains being taken for granted, against being regarded by the public as inferior to the medical specialist.

There's more than personal dignity and prestige at stake in this unique rebellion. Community health is directly involved.

Young doctors have been turning to the specialties at a high rate in the past few years, with the result there are fewer general practitioners to go around.

The problem is particularly acute in the District according to Dr. R. Lee Spire, 4800 Blagden ave., chairman of the newly formed section on general practice of the District Medical Society.

Here in the Capital, says Dr. Spire, there are only 400 general physicians to care for the needs of 600,000 (white) patients, as against 800 specialists.

Dr. Spire, a family physician here for 42 years, feels strongly that the general practitioners must regain some of the prestige they lost to the specialists in order to attract young medical men into the basic field of the profession.

"The specialists are running away with themselves," insists Dr. Spire.

"The result is that the community health suffers from the lack of general physicians."

Action Urged by AMA

The American Medical Association took official notice of the trend toward specialization two years ago, and urged action to raise the esteem of the family doctor to the high place he held in the days before the specialists.

Thus encouraged, family physicians began to organize in special-interest groups, as have the heart specialists, chest specialists, nerve specialists, etc., etc., setting up a section on general practice within their local medical societies, and esablishing on the national level an American Academy of General Practice.

In Washington, formal organization of the special section for family physicians did not take place until last November. Since then, the local section has been increasing in numbers—over half of the general practitioners here have already joined—and in activity.

Some local general practitioners believe that the medical schools are to some degree to blame for the trend of specialization. They point out that the medical students are being trained by specialists, therefore they are influenced into becoming specialists.

Deans Have Answer

The medical school deans respond to this argument that the teachers must of necessity be specialists if the medical students are to get the best training.

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the George Washington University School of Medicine, believes that the pendulum is already swinging back, with students recognizing the importance of the general practitioner to the community.

The medical schools of George Washington and Georgetown Universities, he said, have set up two-year interneships at Gallinger Hospital for general practitioners to encourage graduates to enter that field.

Medical leaders have been giving thought to ways of relieving the family physician of his long, arduous hours of work.

A partial solution, suggests Dr. Walter R. Stokes, chairman of the District Medical Society's public relations committee, is the formation of clinics and associations, through which the general practitioners relieve one another to obtain regular hours of rest and relaxation.

Discrimination Felt

Some general practitioners here feel they are being discriminated against in the matter of hospital beds, to the benefit of the specialist. They feel they are being squeezed out of treating their own patients once they get them into the hospital.

"The hospitals here have steadily decreased the number of general practitioners permitted to treat patients in the hospitals," insists a leading family physician, who asked that his name be withheld. "They've steadily increased the restrictions.

"In fact, it's getting to be so that after we rush out into the night to treat an acute case and then rush him to the hospital, we'll be stopped at the hospital door and the patient will be turned over to a specialist."

This belief is not shared, however, by Dr. Spire, chairman of the newly organized general practitioners. He feels that the family physicians are not being discriminated against but that general physicians and specialists alike suffer from a shortage of beds here. Dr. Spire estimates 1500 more hospital beds are needed to meet the local shortage.

William R. Castle, chairman of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area, dismisses as "nonsense" claims of discrimination. He, too, declares there are just not enough beds to go around.

Castle, who is also president of Garfield Hospital, points out that although Garfield has only 400 beds, it has 900 doctors on its courtesy staff, with the privilege of obtaining hospital beds for their patients when bed space is available.

Others point out that teaching hospitals, such as Georgetown University and George Washington University hospitals, have so many doctors on their teaching faculties, and so many resident physicians in training, that there are few beds left available for other practitioners.

The main immediate problem, according to Dr. Spire, is more hospital beds, the over-all need is for more general practitioners.

"The family doctor is the heart and soul of medical practice in America," declares Dr. Spire.

District Area Makes Shift To Fast Time

NOVELLA SAMPERTON, of 623 Maryland ave. ne., sets her clock ahead and prepares to lose an hour's sleep

The Nation's Capital moved its clock forward one hour at 2 a. m. today, one week after most other communities.

The City of Alexandria and Arlington, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties also went on daylight-saving time at 2 a. m.

Fairfax County will act officially at a county board meeting Wednesday. However, Executive Secretary R. N. Loughborough announced yesterday that schools will start on daylight time Monday and county workers will report an hour earlier for work.

All of Maryland, with the exception of five counties, will be on summer time today. The five are Garrett, Kent, Queen Annes, Caroline and Talbot counties. In Virginia only Winchester and Norfolk in addition to the nearby counties will be on daylight saving time today.

Except for some commuter services train, bus and airline schedules will continue to operate on Eastern Standard Time. However, schedules have been rearranged to conform to travel requirements of patrons.

Steeple Clocks Changed

The men who climb steeples twice each year to change clocks expected a busy night. C. Howard Hunt, a co-owner of the Precision Clock & Electric Co., 1531 17th st. nw., said his firm would change 19 steeple clocks between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m.

It's done inside the steeple by manipulating the clutch arrangements. The most delicate part of the job is to have the chimes ring out the same hour shown on the clock.

"It's getting tougher to find the men who can do it," he said. Sometimes, he added, the job becomes a battle with pigeons and other birds which make the clockworks their home.

There'll be one isolated island in Washington where life goes on its own leisurely way. Senator Overton (D., La.) said he'll have nothing to do with the newfangled ideas and refused permission for three clocks to be changed in his office.

He'll be back in step again September 26, when clocks are moved back again and you regain that lost hour of sleep.

Policeman to Study

Motorcycle Policeman Lee S. Hinsley of the Police Department's traffic division, will study traffic police administration of the Milwaukee police department for one week beginning tomorrow. It's part of his recently won scholarship to Northwestern University Traffic Institute, Evanston, Ill.

Area News in Brief

D. C. Health Official Warns Against Ticks

The Health Department yesterday issued a "call to tweezers" against ticks.

Cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever are beginning to occur in the Greater Washington area and the "period of greatest prevalence" is due in June and July, warned Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases.

Best preventive is a careful "deticking" twice a day, since infected ticks can pass the infection to the person he bites only after being on the body six to eight hours, he said. Immunization does not give perfect protection against infection, he warned.

Remove ticks with eyebrow tweezers, a piece of paper or cloth. Use rubber gloves. Paint the area of the bite with iodine. Wash hands, tweezers, and gloves well with soap and water or rinse hands and tweezers with alcohol, urged Dr. Cumming.

Sentenced to Bathtub

Judge Thomas D. Quinn of Municipal Court, sent a man to jail yesterday to take a bath— and if possible a five-day bath.

The ablution sentence was given Floyd H. Wilkins, 58-year-old cripple who has been living in Lafayette Park. He came into court encrusted with what appeared to be park turf.

He said he liked the park because he would see President Truman there someday and have a chat about veterans' pensions.

Police charged Wilkins with disorderly conduct. Judge Quinn said:

"Man, you need a bath: I'll make it $5 or five days, but I want you to go to jail and get cleaned up. It may take five days to do it."

Wilkins agreed to try the bathtub at District jail.

Candied Fruit Condemned

Candied citrus fruits and broccoli headed a list of 11,462 pounds of food condemned and ordered destroyed last week by Health Department food inspectors. Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the Bureau of Food Inspection, said 1865 establishments were inspected and 15 violators taken to Municipal Court, where they paid fines amounting to $550.

VFW Membership Drive

A membership campaign to obtain 5000 new members during May was ordered yesterday by Charles B. Buscher, Silver Spring, Md., State Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Buscher asked each of the 99 post commanders in Maryland to put on an extensive membership drive in his respective area. He also called upon all overseas veterans interested in any part of the seven-point National VFW program to join his local post.

Bakery Strike Headed Off At Conference

A threatened strike of AFL bakery workers that would cut off an estimated 80 per cent of Washington bread production was headed off yesterday in a management-labor-Government meeting.

Federal Conciliator James A. Holden said that union leaders and representatives of the Employing Bakers Association agreed at a morning conference to continue negotations. An understanding was reached, however, that Bakery Workers Local 118 (AFL) retains the right to give the employers 24-hour notice of intent to strike.

Holden said the negotiators for both sides will make another try at resolving wage differences at a meeting Monday night.

About 1200 workers are seeking a 50 cents an hour raise. Management offered 10. It was understood yesterday that the labor leaders were to sound out membership feeling on a tentative offer of 25 cents.

New Pact Hikes Wages of Workers In Beer Industry

Union and company officials in the local beer industry agreed yesterday on a new contract awarding weekly wage increases of $5 to $8 to brewery workers and other boosts to drivers.

The terms were offered by a group representing the Heurich brewery and 23 distributors on Friday after six weeks of negotiations aided by a Federal conciliator. About 270 members of the Brewery and Beverage Drivers and Workers (AFL), Local 67, accepted the offer that night, just before midnight expiration of the old contract. Formal agreement was concluded yesterday.

Keg drivers won $5 weekly raise in their basic pay of $39. They operate on wages and commissions of 10 cents per keg. Bottle drivers' pay stayed at $39 plus 8 cents commission on each case.

Also in the contract is a $10 increase in weekly vacation pay, bringing it to $50 for all drivers and helpers.

McLean Residence Visited by 500 in Auction Preview

About 500 persons yesterday visited Friendship, home of the late Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean at Wisconsin ave. and R st. nw., for a preview of $800,000 worth of possessions that go on sale May 8-15.

The exhibit, to last through Friday, is being held by the Meredith Galleries of New York, which is handling the sale. Admission is $1, and proceeds go to the Washington Community Chest.

Prospective buyers at the sale, according to Mrs. George Solon, of the New York firm, will be required to deposit $10 at the door toward their purchases. Those buying nothing forfeit the fee.

Sale of the fabulous collection of art objects and furnishings was authorized by District Court after former Senator Robert Reynolds, Mrs. McLean's son-in-law, surrendered the right to use the house and its contents.

Jap Textbooks Shown

Changes in illustrated Japanese textbooks during the past 80 years are shown in an exhibit that began yesterday at the Library of Congress. The exhibit covers the early foreign influence on textbooks, the period of militarism, and democratization under the American occupation. The exhibit will close May 24.

D. C. Clean-Up Is Assured Ample Force

The District will hire as many extra workers as necessary to help pick up the added volume of trash expected this week during Clean-up, Paint-up Week, William Xanten, superintendent of the Division of Sanitation, said yesterday.

The campaign to improve the appearance of the Nation's Capital, headed by the Board of Trade's Clean-up Washington Committee, will begin today and end Saturday.

Xanten urged all persons to put "large, accumulations" of debris out to be picked up on their regular trash collection day. It should either be "bundled" or placed in receptacles, he said.

"It's no 'clean up' to clean a back yard and throw all the debris in the alley," he declared. Persons also should refrain from dumping trash in streets, he added.

The Commissioners Friday granted permission for the Division of Sanitation to put up special posters on city trash receptacles urging the public to "sweep up, pick up, and clean up."

Edward P. Brooke, superintendent of District buildings, said the city government will follow its own edict to "clean up." Painters will complete work on the interior of the Juvenile Court Building and begin on the District Building next week.

Streit's Daughter Wed to Newsman

Colette Defrance Streit of Washington and Thomas N. Schroth of Brooklyn were married in the rectory of St. Matthew's Cathedral at 3 p. m. yesterday.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence K. Streit, also of Washington. Streit is author of "Union Now" and editor of Freedom and Union magazine. Frank D. Schroth, father of the bridegroom, is publisher of the Brooklyn Eagle.

After a wedding trip to Savannah, Ga., the couple will make their home in Brooklyn. Schroth is a member of the news staff of the Eagle.

Driver's License Suspension on Forfeit Is Legal

It's legal for the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operator's Permits to suspend a motorist's driving permit solely on the arresting officer's report of arrest and the motorist's decision to forfeit collateral.

This is the legal opinion of Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, released yesterday by the Commissioners.

The opinion was requested by Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, who said it was "purely something I wanted to clarify in my own mind."

West said such action by the board did not deprive a driver of his right to a public hearing. "If his license is suspended in this manner," he said, "he can appeal for a hearing within five days." An appeal automatically holds up the suspension until the hearing is held, he explained.

Recreation Day Marks Close of Boy-Girl Week

The District's first "Boys and Girls Week" ended yesteday with observance of Health and Recreation Day.

Opening of the District Recreation Department's Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball Schools in 24 local playgrounds, and the District American Legion youth committee's young people's rally at Turner's Arena highlighted the day.

Six boys and girls representing Community Chest agencies and the Recreation Department were honored at the rally.

They and their organizations were Diane Divers, Recreation Department; Carol Price, Campfire Girls; Edward Smallwood, Boys Club of Washington; Betty Posten, Georgetown House; James Henderson, Boy Scouts, and Jacquelyne Harding, Girl Scouts.

The six were presented to Capt. Robert L. Dennison, naval aide to President Truman and former captain of the USS Missouri, who represented the White House in an official tribute.

Long in Ill Health

Knife Death Of Divorcee Held Suicide

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death early yesterday of Mrs. Doris Martin, 36, mother of a 15-year-old boy.

Mrs. Martin was found with her throat slashed in the kitchen of her parents' home, 206 3d st. se., at 3:30 a. m. She died less than two hours later at Gallinger Hospital.

Her mother, Mrs. Lula Mansfield, told police she became alarmed during the night when her daughter passed through her bedroom without speaking. She investigated and found Mrs. Martin on the kitchen floor, a butcher knife clutched in her hand.

Police said Mrs. Martin was a divorcee, and had been in ill health for a number of years.

An all-white "Blanca" and a variegated bronze "Afterglow," both Darwin types, were selected.

Miss Barbara McClain, 218 Spruce ave., Takoma Park, Md., with her exhibit of a deep pink "Princess Elizabeth," also a Darwin, won the third best. She also was the highest point winner with five firsts, second and a third in ribbons awards for tulips. Second place was won by J. Preston Swecker, 1352 Iris st. nw., with two firsts, a second and three thirds. J. Everett Schrider, 1515 Grace Church rd., Silver Spring, Md., was third, holding one first and six seconds.

The club's certificate of recognition for an outstanding collection of wildflowers, 25 species in all, went to Mrs. Henry Ewing, 220 Willow ave., Takoma Park, Md.

In the children's exhibits, Gail Veerhoff was first, with Judith Albertson and Mary Lou Veerhoff second and third.

'Child Crusade' Campaign to Ask Day's Pay Here

Washington area residents will be asked to give a day's pay in the "Crusade for Children" campaign, which will get under way here May 17 with a program at the Sylvan Theater.

Money raised during the drive will go to the United Nations Children's Emergency Fund and 25 other overeas agencies that aid the hungry and homeless children of Europe. The Nation-wide drive is for 60 million dollars.

Mrs. Raymond Clapper is chairman of public relations. Attorney General Tom C. Clark will head the Government employes' fund-raising unit.

The campaign is based on official surveys that show that more than one billion of the world's population are existing on the line of starvation and that 40 per cent of them are children, Mrs. Clapper said.

'Peacemaker' In Wedding Fight Gets Court Break

A disorderly charge placed against the "peacemaker" in the American Legion Club wedding-reception fight April 24 was nolle prossed in Municipal Court yesterday.

The Corporation Counsel's office requested the nolle prosse for Robert L. Kramer, 902 K st. ne. He had received a black eye after trying to stop the fight, it was said.

A continuance until Wednesday was granted for the bridegroom, James A. Manning, of 101 7th se. se., who was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

At a wedding reception for Manning and his bride, the former Miss Catherine C. Sullivan, 1622 34th st. nw., a riot developed in which several people were injured. Milton Mace, manager of the club, was hit over the head with a bottle. Manning was charged with this assault.

Bus Driver Jailed, Fined In Girl's Death

A Capital Transit bus driver was sentenced here yesterday to serve three months in jail and pay a $500 fine for negligent homicide in the traffic death last year of a 16-year-old girl.

Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court imposed sentence, saying, "So far as the unfortunate victim of a fatal traffic accident is concerned, there is no difference between a capital charge of first degree-murder and a misdemeanor charge of negligent homicide."

Defendant was John A. Prezzi, 30, of 2424 North Capital st. nw., who was released under $1000 bond pending appeal. The deceased victim was Harriet Winslow, of 15 E. Lenox st., Chevy Chase, Md.

On Way to Girl Friend

She was going to a girl-friend's house with her date who had taken her to a dance at St. Albans School when the bus Prezzi drove struck broadside the automobile in which she was a passenger.

The collision took place at 13th and Farragut sts. nw. in February, 1947. The automobile was dragged 82 feet by the bus, which went more than 20 feet farther, mounted the curb and struck the corner of a house. The automobile was a total wreck.

Miss Winslow died of a fractured skull. Charles L. Goodrich, 16, who was at the wheel, was injured.

New Trial Denied

The case was tried before Judge Nathan Margold who died a few days after the jury found Prezzi guilty in December. Judge Neilson overruled a motion for a new trial yesterday and pronounced sentence. Prosecution was by Assistant United States Attorney Richard Roberts.

Judge Neilson urged Prezzi's attorney to take the case to the Municipal Court of Appeals. The jurist says that the law needs clarification.

He commented that at present there are no controlling decisions in the law of negligent homicide here.

Frank Young Funeral Rites Set Monday

Funeral services will be conducted Monday for Frank William Young, 41, pianist and radio announcer known throughout nightclubs here and to his radio audience.

Mr. Young

Perhaps better known to his radio friends as "Senator" Young, he was found dead of congestive heart trouble in his bed at 6909 Woodland ave., Takoma Park, Md., Friday. He had been recuperating after a week of hospitalization for the ailment.

Services will be held at the Takoma funeral home, 254 Carroll st. nw. at 9 a. m., followed by interment at National Capital Memorial Park

Although less widely known for the accomplishments, Mr. Young also was a composer and poet. He left behind him a collection of some 80 poems and rhythmic prose he never had published.

Mr. Young was born April 28, 1907, at Manistee, Mich., and showed his aptitude for the piano at an early age. Before he was 7, friends said, he had developed into a competent pianist. At the age of 12, he gave a recital in Carnegie Hall, New York.

At 15, when most children are active in sports, he was playing the scores and improvising at theaters showing the silent films. It was here that he was found by the late Charlie Chase, vaudeville and Hollywood comedian, with whom he toured for many years.

Mr. Young came to Washington in the late 20s, starting a circuit of Washington nightclubs that gained him a local following. His first engagement here was in the nightclub over the Gayety Theater operated by Jimmy Lake.

He later entered radio work, as announcer and disc jockey, handling the between-records patter for five years for the old "Dawn Patrol" program that WOL carried through the night. Several years ago, he returned to nightclub work as pianist and master of ceremonies. He was engaged at the Brown Derby, here, when stricken.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Robert E. Turner, of Willow Run, Mich.; a sister, Georgia Young, of Milwaukee, Wis., and a brother, Allen Young, of Chicago, Ill.

Tom Breneman

Glendale, Calif., May 1 (AP).—Weeping women in hats, some flowered or brightly plumed—but not the crazy headgear he loved to don for a laugh—filed grieving past Tom Breneman's casket today.

It was a respectful fans' funeral for the nationally beloved master of ceremonies of radio's "Breakfast in Hollywood," who died Wednesday of a heart attack.

A Forest Lawn spokesman estimated there were 3000 mourners. It took the file an hour and 15 minutes to pass the bier. The body will be cremated, and the ashes inurned in Forest Lawn's mausoleum.

There were four or five women to every man, and most of them were gray haired. A number of celebrities were in the crowd. They included Jack Benny, Arthur Treacher, Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Andy Devine.

Vice Squad Raiders Get a Wrong Number

Pasadena, Calif., May 1 (AP). — A couple of vice squad officers confessed a bit sheepishly today that appearances are sometimes deceptive.

For several days, they had under surveillance a small building on Colorado ave. They noticed that young women would approach, talk briefly over a wall telephone, enter through a door opened by a buzzer from the inside.

Finally they decided to move in. "Open up," they shouted into the telephone. The buzzer buzzed.

The pair found themselves inside the telephone company's new information switchboard office.

Ankle Sprain Brings Arrest of Suspect

A prowler who escaped four blasts from the gun of a pursuing landlord, only to sprain his ankle as he jumped several feet to a concrete sidewalk in his flight, was arrested by police early yesterday at Sibley Hospital where he was being treated.

Police said the suspect, Carl W. Blankenbaker, 24, of 1804 Belmont rd. nw., could not explain what he was doing on the fire escape of a Connecticut ave. nw. apartment house shortly before midnight Friday.

Maurice Crosley, 40, who operates the Crestwood Club apartments, 4107 Connecticut ave. nw., said he heard a noise in back of the apartment house shortly before midnight.

Because he had been troubled by prowlers in the past two weeks, he said, he grabbed a German "P-38" automatic which he had brought back from his Army service in Europe, and ran to the rear of the house.

As a figure ran down the fire escape and around to the front lawn, Crosley fired four times, but the man escaped down a bank to the street and drove off in a car. The landlord reported the tag number to police, who traced it and phoned Blankenbaker.

In the meantime, a lookout had been sent to District hospitals to watch for a man with injuries from a fall. Blankenbaker was picked up at Sibley Hospital and brought to the Eighth Precinct station.

Police said he told them he had no court record other than traffic cases.

Crosley said that about six months ago a prowler on the same fire escape had attemtped to steal a purse through the window of a first-floor room at the Crestwood Club occupied by Miss Thelma Oswald, a teacher. Miss Oswald reported she heard the prowler on Friday night as she was getting undressed.

AAUW Here Votes Local Autonomy

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women has voted 448 to 297 for local autonomy in answer to the national AAUW's ultimatum to change its by-laws or get out.

The referendum, results of which were disclosed last night, followed an 18-month controversy centering on the exclusion from membership of Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, Washington Negro leader. The parent body had ordered the local group to change its by-laws to include all persons with degrees from listed colleges or universities or stop operating under the AAUW name.

In the record vote, the Washington branch declared, in effect, it has the right to "approve candidates for local membership from among those eligible."

The local branch pointed out that "the ultimatum delivered by the national board of directors represents an attempted unlawful exercise of authority."

The branch's board of directors also declared that the referendum was not a vote upon the admission of any individual but upon the question of local autonomy, of whether or not the branch would conform to the ruling of the national board that branches must accept for membership all eligible applicants.

Next move is up to the national AAUW board of directors, Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm, Washington president, said last night. The national board has set May 6 as the date by which the District group must amend its by-laws or be excluded.

Science Education Called South's Hope for Future

Milledgeville, Ga., May 1 (AP).—More science education in Southern schools is the South's only hope for full industrial development, a Virginia scientist says.

"We simply cannot compete successfully with other sections unless Southern youth may have an equal chance in science education with all others in the country," Dr. Wortley F. Rudd, dean emeritus of the Medical College of Virginia's School of Pharmacy, said in an address prepared for delivery tonight.

Rudd's address was a feature of the annual Herty Day observance of the Georgia section of the American Chemical Society. The Virginian received the Herty Medal for outstanding contributions to chemistry in the Southeast.

Rep. Flannagan's Chance Held Good

By the Associated Press

Will his vote for the oleo tax repeal affect the chances of Representative Flannagan (D., Va.) to be appointed Secretary of Agriculture?

Several House members sponsoring the Virginian for the Cabinet post said they believe not.

Representative Cooley (D., N. C.), one of those starting the move for Flannagan said he feels sure the vote will have no effect.

"We have checked among leaders in the oleo-butter fight," he said, "and received reassurances on this score."

Miss Bokoles' apartment search succeeded in seven days
SHE USED A POST WANT AD

Her parents were off to California, the family home was broken up, and Miss Helen Bokoles was face-to-face with Washington's housing problem. But Miss Bokoles, an administrative assistant in the Munsey Building, didn't let the problem defeat her. She stated her needs in a Post want ad, scheduled it to run for two weeks, and found the right place on the seventh day. "The location is fine (Chevy Chase), the rent is within my limits ($65), and I'm really delighted with my new apartment," states this advertiser.

Your "Apartment Wanted" ad in The Post may be just as effective. Place it today. Call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad writer.

'50-Year Men' Feted . . .

FAITHFUL FOUR—This foursome represents at total of 220 years of service to Woodward & Lothrop department store. Honored last night by the store's Twenty Year Club at a dinner in the Mayflower Hotel, they are (from left) John F. Pyle, 58 years of service; Leonard Robinette, an employe of 56 years; William J. McMahon, also 56 years, and Frank P. Scott, 50 years a worker.

The Washington Post

Woodward & Lothrop's Twenty Year Club last night admitted 37 new members, feted its four active "50-year men," and installed 1948 officers at its annual dinner at the Mayflower Hotel.

Initiation of the "Class of 1948" followed dinner and installation of new officers. Both incoming president Miss Abbie V. M. Marseglia, controller's office employe, and outgoing head Jesse C. Godwin, controller, drew warm applause as the presidency changed hands.

Other officers installed were Hamilton V. Myers, vice president; Miss Emily V. Dunn, secretary, and Mrs. Gertrude H. Shay, treasurer.

More than 400 Woodward & Lothrop employes and their friends also cheered the company's four veterans of half a century with the store as they were introduced. They are:

John F. Pyle, 70, of 1429 Monroe st. nw., a credit office worker. Pyle will have spent 58 years at the store next month.

William J. McMahon, 72, of West Chevy Chase. McMahon, a floor manager, has 56 years to his credit.

Leonard H. B. Robinette, 68, of Kenwood, Md., the store's executive clerk. Robinette has been with Woodward & Lothrop's for 56 years.

Frank P. Scott, 64, of 1706 N. Adams st., Arlington, credit manager. Scott's service passed the half-century mark last month.

On hand for last night's festivities was William Davies, 87, only living employe who worked at the firm's first store at 705 Market sp. nw., when it was opened February 25, 1880. Davies retired several years ago.

Fulbright Asks Senate Speed On Oleo Bill

By The Associated Press

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) declared yesterday it would be "inexcusable" for the Senate to hold long and repetitious hearings on the margarine tax repeal bill.

He urged that the measure, which has passed the House, be referred to the Senate Finance Committee and then reported to the Senate "in ample time for consideration during this session."

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Senate president, said he will hand down a ruling next week on whether the measure should go to the Finance or Agriculture Committee. He will then invite an immediate vote on his decision which is certan to touch off a floor battle.

The Senate acton in referring the repealer is regarded as a strong tip-off as to its probable fate. Repeal advocates say it is a tax bill and therefore should go to the Finance Committee. They also figure they will get faster action there.

Teacher's Home Target for Attack

Hurling of Rocks Probed as Possible Student Reprisal

The shattering of two window panes and a screen at the home of an Alice Deal Junior High School teacher Friday night is being investigated by police as a possible case of "reprisal" on the part of some of his students.

Stanley A. Lyles, 31, French teacher at the Fort dr. and Nebraska ave. nw. school, was correcting papers in his room at 6643 Western ave. nw., at about 11:20 p. m., when the incident occurred.

His father, Leslie A. Lyles, an employe of the Division of Equipment and Supplies at the Postoffice Department, was in the basement recreation room with Mrs. Lyles and some friends, he said, when they heard a "commotion" in the first floor living room.

They found two good-sized rocks in the room, the window and screen broken, and another stone outside, the father reported. He called police. When no one came, he went to bed at 1:15 a. m., he said.

Police at No. 8 Precinct explained that two men had been sent out in answer to the call, but they thought the Lyles home was on the Maryland side of Western ave., which forms the boundary of the District.

Lyles, who was at a school dance earlier in the evening, had reported a group of boys whom he had caught smoking in the school building about a month ago, his father said, and he believed they may have thrown the stones last night in "reprisal."

"They probably read about those students in Brooklyn who fired some shots at their teacher's house because she flunked them in algebra," remarked the father, who was busy repairing the windows and the screens yesterday.

The father said he had seen a car drive away from the scene immediately after the window was broken.

Stanley Lyles, who taught at Jefferson Junior High School, 8th and H sts. sw., before serving as a lieutenant in the Navy during the war, would not discuss the incident yesterday.

2 Teachers Get Awards for Aid To Part-Blind

Two elementary school teachers of the Washington area have been awarded scholarships for special courses in education of the partially sighted.

One of the awards, made yesterday by the Washington Alumnae Chapter of the Delta Gamma fraternity, went to Mrs. Grace B. Hall of the Bowie (Md.) Elementary School, whose discovery that her own 10-year-old son was almost blind gave her a special reason for applying for the scholarship.

The other award was won by Miss Lucille Harris of the Park View Elementary School, a teacher in the District public schools for more than 20 years.

Although they knew their son, James, was near-sighted, Mrs. Hall and her husband, Albert C. Hall, a World War II disabled veteran, did not know the boy's sight was almost gone until he put away a new bicycle which he had wanted a long time.

"I can't see to ride it any more," he said simply in answer to his mother's questions.

An eye specialist said a congenital deterioration of James' retina, dating from birth, had become so bad that he had only 22/100 vision, the upper limit of legal blindness.

Mrs. Hall sent James to Overlea School for the Blind, where he has shown some improvement and has learned to read Braille.

If she had lived in the District, routine annual preschool vision testing might have revealed James' handicap, according to the Community Chest Federation, whose D. C. Society for the Prevention of Blindness helped to make yesterday's awards.

OUT TO HELP—Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, named honorary chairman of the Salvation Army drive, meets two members of the Women's Volunteer Division. They are Mrs. Thad Brown, jr. (left) and Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, jr. The campaign opens May 14 with a $350,000 goal for rebuilding purposes

Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America and former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the local Salvation Army campaign to raise $350,000 for rebuilding of housing facilities.

Though the Salvation Army is an agency of the Community Chest it receives only operational funds from the chest.

"The Salvation Army has made no appeal to repair its housing facilities in the last 25 years," said Johnston in a first meeting yesterday to discuss preliminary plans for the drive.

"It seems to me any organization that comes to the public of Washington once in a generation, particularly in view of the great services it performs, will receive the sympathetic and active support of every citizen," said Johnston.

Under present plans, the campaign will begin in the Government agencies on May 10 under Postmaster General J. M. Donaldson, Government Division chairman, while other divisions will follow on May 18, when a kick-off luncheon will be held.

Frank A. Birgfeld, campaign chairman, has announced the drive has the complete approval of the Community Chest, which also has endorsed the rebuilding program.

Board Probes Realty Deals

Charges that Larry Steele, 927 15th st. nw., should lose his real estate broker's license for employing an unlicensed agent will be heard by the District Real Estate Commission at 10 a. m. Monday, a commission member revealed yesterday.

Steele, the District charges, engaged Jerome Clarke, who is not licensed as a broker, to obtain buyers for properties at 2117 and 2120 1st st. nw. in April, 1945. In both cases, Steele paid Clarke one-half the broker's commission in violation of the law, it is alleged.

Edward Gaines, 1424 K st. nw., another local real estate broker, will appear before the Real Estate Commission Monday, May 10, to answer charges he failed to remit money allegedly due another man "within a reasonable time."

Gaines, the District says, received a $500 deposit from a prospective buyer for property in Fairfax County and entered into a sale contract with the owner's agent. When the deal fell through, Gaines returned the entire $500 to the buyer instead of splitting the amount between the buyer and the owner's agent as specified in the contract, the District alleges.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward A. Beard will handle the cases for the District.

Ronne, Wife Shared Tasks in Antarctic

Even at 40 Below First Woman on Continent Had Job

Sharing the job, even if it's in weather 40 degrees below zero, is an old story to Commander Finn Ronne and his wife, Edith.

Both returned recently from a year's stay in the Antarctic, where he headed a private expedition and she served as assistant scientist and recorder.

Yesterday they gave their first interview in Washington, which both consider their home town.

Commander Ronne told how they were frozen in for an area 200 miles around, their only contact with the outside world a short-wave radio. In the summer, the temperature ranged from zero to 10 degree below. In the winter it reached 40 degrees below.

Ronne returned with the claim that the Antarctic is not divided by any strait of water but is one continent. Expedition members found, too, that because of the rarified atmosphere there is more sun there in 24 hours than at the Equator and that cosmic rays increase in the amount of intensity the nearer you approach to the pole.

The expedition found some metal, such as iron, copper, aluminum, and even some gold and silver, but no traces of human life, he said. During the year, they took more than 14,000 pictures of 700,000 square miles of the continent, 25,000 square miles of which has never been explored.

Mrs. Ronne, the first woman to set foot on Antarctica, at times ran the seismological station in addition to her other duties.

Although she found the year there interesting, she does not particularly want to go back for that long a stretch again, she said.

A graduate of George Washington University, she will return there as a guest lecturer Wednesday night. She will appear as the final speaker on the Colonial Program Series at 8:15 at Lisner Auditorium.

Police Keep Patrol on Numbers Centers

a reporter found to be operating openly.

"We're trying our best to break it up, but if you can't get evidence that will stand up in court, what can you do?" said Lieutenant Blick.

"We have even gone to the building owners in cases like this and tried to get them to close the places down. That doesn't help either."

"Our best evidence is through the use of marked money," said Blick, "but if you cannot get a 'play' through undercover men, you don't have very much of anything."

And even in some of the cases where marked money is obtained for evidence, he said, "sometimes its only 15 or 20 cents and we are told, 'Why do you bother with this petty stuff—why don't you get the big boys, the backers?'"

Lieutenant Blick said undercover men have tried to make "plays" with marked money at the Florida ave. address "many, many times—they just won't do business with us."

Files in The Washington Post library show that 902 Florida ave. nw. was raided by police at least twice, in August, 1945, and November, 1945. Each time, one man was arrested.

Police records show that William H. T. (Sunshine) Boldware, operator of the store at 902 Florida ave., which bears his nickname, was arrested three times for operating a lottery there, but his only "penalty" was being placed on probation. Boldware was killed Thursday when one of his expensive automobiles crashed into a streetcar.

There has been no hint here yet that efforts to smash Washington's gambling have approached attempts made in 1937, when police undercover men assigned to gather racket information operated in such secrecy that they were even forbidden to enter police headquarters.

For four months they mingled with gamblers here and were forbidden to reveal their jobs to their own families, who did not know they had been sworn in as police privates. Even their pay checks did not come through regular channels.

But the bulk of that work went for naught when their most conclusive evidence, obtained by wire-tapping, was ruled out of court. Among those freed on these grounds were five metropolitan policemen who had been named in conspiracy indictments.

3d Witness Held In Pier Slaying

New York, May 1 (UP).—A third material witness was taken into police custody today in the murder of Boss Stevedore Thomas Collentine.

Bail for Harold Lawrence, 35, was set at $10,000. Police said Lawrence replaced Collentine two weeks ago as hiring foreman.

Election Gets Hot At Takoma Park

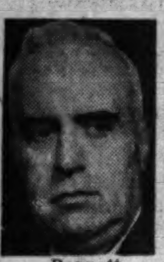
Each of Two Factions Hurl Campaign Charge of Machine Politics; Vote Monday

Takoma Park, whose politics has slumbered for eight years, was deep in a weekend battle of charges and countercharges as candidates squared off for the showdown at the polls Monday.

Each of the two contesting factions has accused the other of machine politics—which both have denied.

The town election, to be held in the Takoma Park Firehouse from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m., will highlight 10 town elections Monday in Montgomery County, at the same time as both major parties hold their primaries throughout Maryland.

Other town elections will be in Glen Echo, Gaithersburg, Barnesville, Somerset, Rockville, Brookeville, Garrett Park, Drummond and Laytonville.



Bennett

Post

Principals in the Takoma Park fight for mayor are John C. Post, incumbent town councilman and Washington businessman, who is backed by the present administration and Luke J. Bennett, jr., a Washington Gas Light Co. supervisor and longtime Democratic organization man.

Retirement of Mayor Oliver W. Youngblood, who has been unopposed for eight years, touched off the scrap.

Post and his running mate for the seven town council posts call themselves the "home rule ticket." They charge that the Bennett faction would like to bring "machine politics" to Takoma Park, abolish the city charter and turn control over to the county Democratic organization.

The accusation is heatedly denied by Bennett, who charges in reply that the Post slate is "a hand-picked batch of politicians in disguise who are controlled by a dictatorial clique."

Bennett was this week reelected to his fourth term as president of the Takoma Park Community League, a civic group. He says he is backed by "a large group of civic minded citizens who want a change. I have been branded as a machine politician and it is absolutely untrue."

In pinning the label on him, opponents point to Bennett's record as former Democratic appointee on the County Liquor Control Board for four years, and justice of the peace, as well as a longtime Democratic precinct chairman.

Four Democrats and four Republicans are on the slate led by Post, whose backers claim the ticket is rigidly nonpartisan, a status which the Bennett ticket also claims.

Developing as a lively campaign issue is a charge by Post supporters that Bennett is in favor of altering the unpaid status of mayor and councilmen. The question was raised at a City Council meeting April 26, but the proposal was killed temporarily by Mayor Youngblood, who is backing Post.

Bennett contends the voters should decide the question in a referendum. The present administration is not in favor of salaries for elective posts in the belief unpaid jobs attract genuinely civic-minded officials. Advocates of the salary issue argue officials should be paid for their efforts.

Listed as Post's running mates for council seats are J. H. Nies, H. C. Heffner, John C. Parkerson, W. H. McClenon, Ross H. Beville, Sherwood Githens, jr., and Brooks H. Perring. Running with Bennett are J. H. Nies, H. C. Heffner, David Agey, James A. Clark, George A. Cook, Fred W. Stevenson and E. J. White. Running unsupported by either side are R. L. Dunn, L. A. Anderson and C. W. Ferrar.

Nies and Heffner are listed on both tickets. Nies announced this week he is supporting the Post slate. Heffner has not clarified his position. The name of one council hopeful, E. Ward Russell, was stricken from the ballot because he was nominated by an unqualified voter.

Md. Campaign Keeps Quiet Tenor to End

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—One of the quietest of Maryland election campaigns came to a close tonight and fewer than 20 per cent of the State's voters are expected to ballot Monday to nominate candidates for its six congressional seats.

There were campaign rallies tonight for the galaxy of candidates seeking the Democratic nomination from the Third and Fourth Districts, which lie inside the Baltimore City limits.

It was in these precincts that the campaign generated the most interest.

There were a few flurries in the race for the Democratic nomination in the Second District, which is partly within the city and partly in Baltimore, Harford and Carroll Counties.

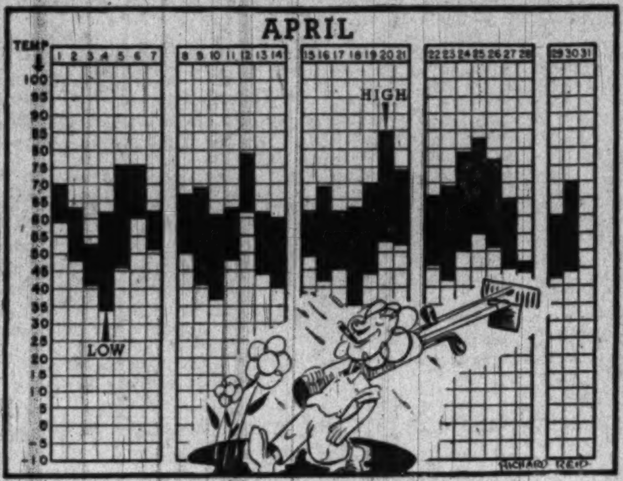
Democrats on the Eastern Shore, whose politicking is sometimes highly inflammable, went quietly about the job of choosing a man to oppose the Republican incumbent in their First District.

Political leaders and poll officials estimated about 170,000 will vote Monday. The booths will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., local time, in most of the counties and from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. daylight time in Baltimore City.

All six of Maryland's Congressmen—four Democrats and two Republicans—are candidates for reelection. The two Republicans—Edward T. Miller in the First District and J. Glenn Beall in Sixth, are unopposed for nomination.

Delegates to the Democratic and Republican State Conventions also will be selected in each county.

April Weather Fails to Equal Records Made in Past Years



SUMMARY—Chart indicates the daily high and low temperatures of April

When that Aprille, with hise Shoures soote
The droghte of March hath perced to the roote . . .

April a few centuries ago may have rated a place in the classic Canterbury Tales, but April in 1948 was barely worth a mention in the District weatherman's book.

Not a weather record was broken on this undistinguished April just ended. Compared with 75 preceding Aprils as to rain, wind, temperature and sunshine, it was noteworthy only in its reflection of what the weatherman considers normal April weather.

There were traces of rain on 19 days of the month, with a total of 2.44 inches recorded, which was .83 inches above normal for April.

The average temperature for the month was 56.9 degrees, or 3.6 degrees above normal. The hottest day was the 20th, when the Weather Bureau's city office recorded 85—nothing like the record for April set in 1915, which was 95. Low for the month was 34 on the 4th, contrasted with the record of 15 made in 1923.

Extreme temperatures recorded in April a year ago were likewise near normal—86 and 37.

The sun shone for 218 hours and 42 minutes, 55 per cent of the possible total of sunshine hours. Just about as expected, the weatherman observed.

Washington had thunderstorms on April 12, 13 and 27.

The prevailing wind was from the northwest, with the strongest blow recorded on April 9—an unimpressive 34 miles an hour.

Nehru Rejects Plan To Stop Kashmir War

New Delhi, May 1. (U.P.).—Premier Jawaharlal Nehru said today that India had found unacceptable a United Nations Security Council proposal to halt the fighting in Kashmir.

Indian troops will be directed to keep on fighting "until the last raider is driven from Kashmir," Nehru said at a press conference.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

High Profits Make Shining Targets

A glance at first-quarter corporation earnings reports explains recent decisions of General Electric, United States Steel, and Westinghouse Electric to reduce prices. There wasn't much else they could do.

Industrial profits are running well ahead of a year ago. Consequently, industrial strategy called for some public relations gesture, especially if it could be made an underlying reason for not granting wage increases.

Livingston

Joel Dean, professor of business economics at Columbia University and a man experienced in the art of industrial pricing, made quite a point of this in a talk to the United States Chamber of Commerce last week during its thirty-sixth annual meeting here. He said:

"We cannot dodge the fact that the level of profits has a bearing on wage negotiations and upon the climate of public and Government opinion. For many [pivotal] firms, a goal of 'socially acceptable' profits is a better pricing guide than maximum profits."

To General Electric goes the distinction of being the first major company to reduce prices this year. GE's first-quarter earnings were up 42 per cent over a year ago—from $17,919,000 to $25,389,000. So it was vulnerable to large wage demands. The company addressed a letter to its suppliers asking them, in turn, to lower prices. A few did. But the chief effect, as GE views it, was to forestall further price increases. Thus GE was able, in some measure, to protect its profit margin and yet win public favor.

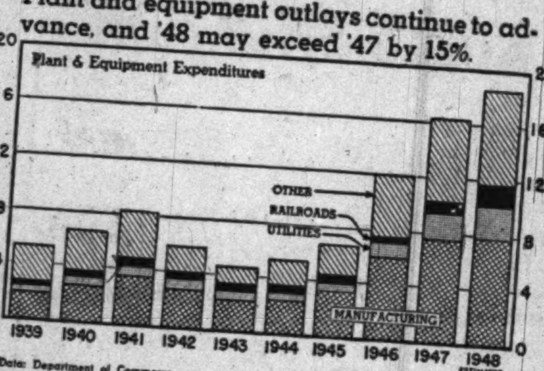
Housewives Not on Warpath

Westinghouse's first-quarter earnings were not up so sharply as GE's—only 19 per cent. And United States Steel showed a 13 per cent decline—$33,957,000 against $39,234,000. A further drop is likely this quarter as the result of the coal strike.

Nevertheless, United States Steel is far from impoverished, as Philip Murray, president of the United Steelworkers of America, was prompt to point out when the company denied him a wage boost. First-quarter earnings came to $3.18 a common share. For the full year, earnings may exceed last year's $11.66, which was the best year since 1929, when the company earned $20.27.

BUSINESS PROP

Plant and equipment outlays continue to advance, and '48 may exceed '47 by 15%.



Data: Department of Commerce

Prepared for J. A. Livingston

Though high profits make shining targets, union leaders aren't in a position to shoot the works and strike. Rank-and-file pressure isn't there. At this time last year, housewives were on the warpath. In a year, living costs had gone up 20 per cent as against 13 per cent for weekly earnings. But now the cost of living has leveled off. In the last 12 months, living costs have gone up only 7 per cent, as against a 10 per cent rise in average weekly earnings. That explains the sudden crystallization of management's attitude against wage boosts. Right now, incidentally, the failure of the United Auto Workers to take the 6-cent-an-hour offer of Chrysler (since withdrawn) looks like a mistake.

Fairless vs. Murray

Phil Murray has jumped several notches in public esteem as a keeper of contracts. He's not going to strike this year even though he was made to look bad last year. After settling with Murray on a two-year contract calling for a 15-cent-an-hour increase, Benjamin Fairless of Big Steel turned around and granted John L. Lewis 31 cents an hour. That puts United States Steel on the spot now.

If, in July, Fairless appeases Lewis again with a wage boost, Murray and the steelworkers will have a grievance which won't augur well for efficiency—for high productivity—in United States Steel's plants. And it would certainly build up a case for a competitive wage demand when the contract expires next April.

The biggest year-to-year gain in profits was in oil. Thirteen companies reported first-quarter net of 144 million dollars as compared with 68 million last year. Enough said for why Wall Street is going crazy over oil shares. Other large gainers include finance companies (61 per cent), which speaks well for the installment-selling business; industrial machinery (46 per cent); and automobile and automobile equipment (41 per cent).

Industries which registered declines included nonferrous metals (—5 per cent); food (—8 per cent); steel (—3 per cent); railroads (—15 per cent), and the public utilities (—6 per cent). The railroads have just had a freight-rate boost which takes effect May 6. That will help their earnings, but will boost costs of other companies. Utilities are still trying to get rate increases from State commissions sufficient to offset rising expenses.

Oil Group in Lead

Here's an industry-by-industry breakdown of early-bird first-quarter earnings covering 319 companies:

Total (319)	690,990	597,851	+ 16

*Does not include General Motors or Chrysler.

The good showing of machinery and building materials companies is readily explained by the high level of business expenditures on new plant and equipment. Expectations are that 1948 will exceed 1947 (see chart), which suggests that production and profits ought to be well sustained. Meanwhile, the immediate test of the wage structure hangs on what the railroads do to stave off a strike. It's not usual for railroad workers to carry the ball.

Jones to Open Silver Spring Branch House

By S. Oliver Goodman

Silver Spring, now rated as the second largest city in Maryland, will get its first investment house when Robert C. Jones & Co. of Washington opens a branch Monday in the new Scrimgeour Building, 8916 Georgia ave.

Becker

The branch will be under the management of Edward M. Becker as resident partner. Richard Bruce will be assistant manager. The branch will be the first opened locally by a Washington investment house.

Robert C. Jones, senior partner of the New York Stock Exchange member, said yesterday that the expansion "is to offer our clients in this area more convenient and accessible service and is in recognition of the tremendous growth of Silver Spring."

Becker, the branch manager, has been associated with the Jones firm since its founding in 1930. He is a life-long resident of Montgomery County. Bruce, the assistant manager, is a registered representative of the New York Stock Exchange.

The new branch, Jones said, will offer complete investment facilities including a small quotation board. Main office of the Jones firm is in the Metropolitan Bank Building on 15th st.

NET IMPROVES: Net income of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. totaled $322,966 in March, a gain of $65,217 over the same month last year. For the first three months C. & P. net totaled $844,766, against $771,902 in the like 1947 period. The company had 419,677 telephones in service here on March 31, an increase of 25,551 for the past 12 months.

QUITS WAA: Edgar A. Buttle has resigned as the New York regional counsel of the War Assets Administration to resume private practice in Washington and New York. In resigning, Buttle gave high praise to his WAA associates. "The limitations on diposals under the Surplus Property Act," he said, "have served to make liquidation difficult and unpopular by reason of the deserving but conflicting interests sponsored." He ported out that Congress could now effect an accelerated liquidation by amending the complicated objectives and priority provisions of the act.

GAS USE GAINS: Net operating revenues of the Washington Gas Light Co. for March amounted to $329,749, an increase of $53,772 over 1947. Reflecting the greater use of gas for heating and the effect of full natural gas operation the net income for the first three months of 1948 amounted to $951,432, an increase of $414,352 over 1947. Net consolidated income (including Maryland and Virginia subsidiaries) for the first quarter was $1,335,561, an increase of $631,286 over 1947.

MINORITY VOICE: Whitney W. Irons, salesman of nearby Seabrook, Md., believes in making himself heard at stockholders meetings. Last April he made a number of suggestions at the Pennsylvania Railroad annual session. This year he has been invited to a special luncheon of PRR officials on May 6 in Philadelphia. The management wants to hear what he has to suggest prior to its annal stockholders meeting on May 11. Irons said yesterday he favors "putting a brake on the upward wage spiral, halting of paternalization in railroad benefits to employes, and better public relations" among other things. Irons, together with his wife, owns 100 shares of PRR stock.

HOW'S BUSINESS: The Census Bureau reported March sales of Washington independent stores averaged 5 per cent higher than in the same 1947 month, while dollar volume for the first three months was 6 per cent improved. Widest gains in the first three months were shown by building materials with 52 per cent, automotive with 25 per cent, fuel and ice with 31 per cent and furniture stores with 14 per cent. Among the losers were book and stationery with 41 per cent, jewelry 22 per cent, optical goods 13 per cent, women's apparel 7 per cent, and drinking places 9 per cent.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Trans World Airline has appointed Kenneth Macker as director of public relations and Sheridan Fahnestock as assistant director . . . Stuart Sherman, general partner in advertising agency of Sherman & Marquette, has been elected a director of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. . . . J. B. Baumann, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, will address the local group at a luncheon on May 12 . . . Ruscoe H. Crowell and Henry S. Owens will represent the District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants at a meeting to be held by the national group this week in Asheville, N. C.

EARNINGS: Anchor Hocking Glass Corp. reported for 12 months ended March 31 net profit of $2,165,131, equal to $2.63 a common share, compared with $4,728,003, or $6.22 a share, in the preceding 12 months. Other income reports included:

Profit Taking, Strikes Check Rise in Stocks

New York, May 1 (AP).—Profit-taking and strike threats clipped the wings of the spring stock rally this week.

The market's setback halted a rise that had progressed through six successive weeks of trading.

Security prices were depressed by the selling activity of those traders cashing in on long-accumulated profits, and by the setting of May strike dates in the railroad and automotive industries.

After a sharp dip on Monday, the market established a narrow pattern that held throughout the other five sessions.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.

Saurday's short session continued this course, with such issues as Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Republic Steel, Texas Co., Southern Railway, Schenley, Phelps Dodge, Mission Corp. and Lockheed showing declines of fractions to around a point. At the same time Mid-Continent Petroleum and Central Railroad of New Jersey pushed to new 1948 highs. Other gainers included Seaboard Oil, Gulf Oil, United Aircraft and General Electric.

Feature of the day was a 29-point jump in St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) common to close at 129, a new high, on odd-lot sales of only 200 shares. This stock, in "thin" supply and therefore subject to wide fluctuation, responded to its showing of first quarter net income of $13.98 a share against $8.95 on a similar basis a year ago. Many other railroads have reported deficits for the same period.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite dropped .1 of a point today to close at 67.1, where it was off .9 on the week, its first weekly loss since March 13.

During the week sales held well above the million-share mark but the total of 7,639,315 shares for the period was far below the 10,544,750 reported in the preceding week.

Industry Scans Steel Cut for Cue to Prices

Pittsburgh, May 1 (AP).—All industry is keeping tabs on the pulse of steel these days to see if the avowed antiinflation experiment will start a chain reaction and save you money.

When the U. S. Steel Corp. refused wage increases to 175,000 production workers last week, it announced it was cutting prices 25 million dollars a year, effective today, to promote a campaign to reduce living costs.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. and Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., two of the Nation's largest independent producers, promptly said the double-barreled weapon of stabilized wages and lowered prices sounded fine to them and announced they were following suit. A half dozen other steel firms likewise refused wage demands of the CIO-United Steelworkers but kept mum on any price cut plans. Two smaller plants have granted wage increases.

Others Act Simultaneously

Segments of the electrical industry—Westinghouse and General Electric—have cut prices and are resisting the wage increase demands of the CIO-United Electrical Workers in current negotiations.

There the matter stands. U. S. Steel and others said experimental low prices would have an unspecified trial period. Presumably, if living costs rise and employes become harder pinched, the firms would be more sympathetic to wage hike requests. Steel officials contended higher wages would force them to raise prices.

That development would be an inglorious end to the experiment. But steelmasters hope the plants which buy their steel will also reduce prices so that the final consumer will pay less for his automobile or washing machine.

Some Exceptions

Some exceptions to the lower price trend in steel are seen as certain by some analysts here. Among them are likely to be smaller plants which buy semifinished steel for processing. The price of semifinished steel was raised some $5 a ton recently and will not be affected by last week's U. S. Steel's announcement.

Price reductions by such steel giants as Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, and J. and L. are bound to have a potent influence on the other companies. But the unprecedented demand tends to offset that influence.

Producers of practically all types of steel have large backlogs of orders which the recent coal shutdown only increased. John L. Lewis ordered his United Mine Workers back to work April 21 but it was only this week that the last of the idled blast furnaces returned to full production.

Glass Merger Approved

Pittsburgh, May 1 (AP).—The American Window Glass Co. announced today stockholders had approved a merger with Glass Products, Inc., Ellwood City, Pa., at a special meeting April 28. The company said the vote was 285,317 to 66,533.

Chicago Grain Quotations

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—A forecast for rain in western Kansas and Oklahoma, where wheat has been deteriorating from lack of moisture, caused selling in wheat futures today. Early gains were wiped out and losses posted. The selling in wheat weakened corn and oats.

Wheat on the Board of Trade closed 2¼ to 3¼ lower, May 2.42¼@2.42⅜; corn was unchanged to 1½ lower, May 2.19@2.19¼; oats were ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, May 1.09⅝@1.09½, and soybeans were 2 to 3 cents lower, May 3.96.

The rain forecast came late in the session, replacing an earlier prediction of fair weather. Showers were expected in western Kansas tonight, with general rain Sunday. Oklahoma was expected to have showers tonight and Sunday.

If the rain comes it will fall in those areas needing it most, grain traders said. During the session good rains were reported in northwestern Kansas.

Before the rain forecast the market had acted firm. On the basis of the present parity, the Government loan on the 1948 wheat crop would be 2.25 a bushel at Chicago. New crop wheat futures are selling only a little above that now.

The production and marketing administration stepped back into the flour market, which also helped wheat in early dealings. The Government agency asked for offers on flour for Atlantic Coast delivery by May 31. It did not say how much flour was desired.

Both corn and oats followed the action of wheat, with corn showing good resistance for a time to the selling in wheat.

New York Cotton

New York, May 1 (AP).—Cotton futures turned lower in late dealings today, closing down 50 cents a bale to $1.35 a bale. Final quotations were at or near the lowest levels of the day.

The sharp selloff followed weakness at New Orleans. Commission house and New Orleans dealers sold in the New York market with lack of buyers and the uncovering of stop loss orders, the setback met little opposition.

The selling centered in the nearby July contracts. Some traders expressed the belief that the decline might represent disappointment over the failure of increased purchases of cotton for export.

There was a considerable amount of liquidation in the nearby May position, but a large portion was absorbed by trde dealers.

While weather reports indicated high temperatures in parts of the cotton belt where moisture was needed, this news to some extent was offset by optimistic ideas on the 1948 cotton crop.

S. Korea Will Vote Anti-Red Within Sound of Soviet Guns

Free politics in Korea. Delegates to a party convention at Seoul signal for the attention of the chair

By Robert T. Oliver

Manager, Korean Pacific Press; author of "Korea, Forgotten Nation," and of many magazine articles on Korea, and guest lecturer at the University of Korea in 1946.

WHEN Kim Hyung Chun of Kaesong, Korea, steps into a private polling booth May 10 to mark his ballot, as one of 8½ million voters participating in the United Nations-sponsored election, he will be helping to make history for his own country and for the rest of the democratic world.

Only three miles north of his polling booth is the Thirty-eighth Parallel, from which the roar of Russian guns in target practice may be clearly heard. It is no light choice that Mr. Kim (the John Smith of Korea) is being called upon to make.

Mr. Kim has been subjected to a tremendous campaign of propaganda and terrorism. More than 350 of his fellow citizens have been killed by Communists. Communist raiders have seized many lists of registered voters. The North Korean radio has proclaimed that the election will be stopped even if it proves necessary to kill every one of the more than 900 candidates.

Posters on the walls of his city warn that "traitors" who participate in the elections will be dealt with after the "People's Republic" of North Korea seizes control of the whole country. He realizes that in the crowds around the polling places will be Communist agents noting the names of all who dare to vote. And he can only guess at the strength of American determination to help maintain a democratic bastion in the South.

For Mr. Kim the day will be one of mingled joy and sadness.

He rejoices that for the first time in his life he will have a chance to help reestablish the independence of his country—an independence that existed for 4235 years until the Japanese annexation of 1905. He is grateful for American and U. N. action to replace with a sovereign government the 2½ years of military occupation. He is heartened by the fact that, for better or for worse, the future of at least half his country will be directed by leaders he will help to choose.

But Mr. Kim is no half-Korean. His loyalties extend far beyond the Thirty-eighth Parallel, on up to the Ever White Mountains that mark an ancient boundary some 400 miles north. He has relatives and friends under Soviet rule. The best markets for his crops, and the main source of his coal, electric power and manufactured goods, are in the Russian zone.

Outcome Is Foregone

DESPITE the threats and the uncertainties, Mr. Kim and his millions of fellows are prepared for their fateful vote. There is no doubt of the result. The anti-Communist National Unity Federation, led by Dr. Syngman Rhee, will be the overwhelming choice.

The unanswered question is what support that new government will have in stabilizing itself against an active Communist underground, and in overcoming the effects of almost three years of economic stagnation.

It is Korea's fate to confront the great crises in its history in the midst of international upheavals.

In 1882 its isolation as a "Hermit Nation" was broken by United States intervention, just on the eve of a frenzied struggle among the great powers for control of the strategic areas of north Asia. The result was a generation of pulling and hauling that resulted in its sacrifice to Japan.

Now, once again, Korean sovereignty is being reestablished in a time of life and death world struggle, this one between democracy and communism and in the only spot on the globe where those two forces stand face to face without the intervention of any third power. Korea is "the country in the middle," where the issue of peace or war may be decided for the world.

Under such circumstances, only tenacious national courage and leadership of the clearest vision can pull the country through. Fortunately, Korea has both.

Resisted From Exile

THE STRENGTH of Korean nationalism was tested by deprivation, torture and death through 40 years of Japanese rule. Forbidden to hold public meetings, to publish newspapers or even to use their own language in their own schools, and disarmed so completely that only one kitchen knife was permitted for every three families, the Korean people never surrendered to Japan. They staged a nation-wide passive rebellion, and organized a provisional republic that became the oldest government-in-exile in the world.

This same insistence on independence has marked their conduct during the past 2½ years. A Moscow-drawn plan for "trusteeship" was presented to them with a "sign it or else" threat. A totalitarian puppet regime was foisted upon them in north Korea and a "coalition" of leftists was persuasively offered to them in the South. All of this the Koreans refused to accept, for none of it squared with their definition of freedom.

It was under these circumstances that the United States last September requested U. N. action to end the deadlock and set up a united and sovereign Korean nation. Russian refusal to accede to this plan brought the question before the United Nations again in February, and led to the decision to hold the May 10 election in the American zone.

The spirit of the Korean people has been matched by the quality of the nationalist leadership. "The name to conjure with in Korea," in the words of K. P. S. Menon, chairman of the U. N. Commission to Korea, is Dr. Syngman Rhee.

Aristocrat's 'Defection'

IT WAS IN 1895 when this only son of an aristocratic family left the career of scholarship chosen for him to join the "Independence Club" and start a battle for democratic reform of the 500-year-old Yi dynasty. His militant editorship of Korea's first daily newspaper, and his leadership of a two-day "sitdown" strike against the palace, led to his imprisonment for seven years.

Following his release, he came to the United States and attended successively George Washington, Harvard and Princeton universities, from the last of which, in 1910, he secured his Ph.D. degree.

In 1919 Dr. Rhee was elected first President of the Korean Republic in exile. He carried the fight for Korean independence to the Washington Disarmament Conference of 1922, to the State Department, and to the League of Nations. In every instance he was rebuffed, on the grounds that the great powers could not intervene for Korea against the friendly government of Japan.

After Pearl Harbor he led a renewed fight for recognition of the exiled Republic of Korea. And since the defeat of Japan he has stood stanchly for an election to permit the Korean people to set up a government of their own choice.

In February, 1946, Dr. Rhee announced a carefully integrated liberal program for Korea, paralleling in important respects the Labor Party program in England. Within the past six weeks the most basic plank in this platform, a breaking-up of the large landed estates and their sale on lenient terms to tenant farmers, has been put into effect.

Other reforms already adopted are universal suffrage, an eight-hour working day, organization of labor unions, a program of adult and universal elementary education and establishment of youth organizations. With the assistance of Dr. Rhee's Viennese-born wife, rapid progress has been made in the emancipation of women.

Key to a Continent

FUNDAMENTAL in Dr. Rhee's political philosophy is recognition of the significance of Korea's location in the strategic heart of north Asia. He knows that just as Japan's possession of Korea led to Japanese conquest of Manchuria and much of China, so would Russian control lead to Soviet domination of all Asia down to the Himalayan Mountains.

He believes that for this reason neither China nor the United States can possibly countenance the domination of Korea by Russia. He knows that any compromise with communism would open the door to a Soviet coup. That was the basis for his

U. S. Will Help De Gasperi Deliver

Some Promises Come Due in Italy

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

BY AN ODD twist of circumstance, the entire western world has a stake in seeing that an Italian politician keeps his promises.

Two weeks ago Premier Alcide De Gasperi rode into unchallenged political power on a wave of anti-Communist patriotism. But he could not have won the election on anti-communism alone.

He also made solemn pledges to his people. He promised that the landless peasants would get their own bit of Italian soil, and that the burdens of taxation would be spread more fairly between rich and poor.

He promised that, with American help, many of the inequalities and miseries in Italy would be corrected. Now, as he seeks to form his new government, the time is coming for De Gasperi to keep his word.

Fodder for Communism

TO OTHER westerners, accustomed to what Wendell Wilkie once called just "campaign oratory," it may seem to be the most local of local issues whether he keeps his promises or not.

Actually his performance will influence the democratic future of Italy and perhaps of other countries. For communism holds almost a third of the seats in the new Italian Parliament. It has had a bad defeat, but it is bound to thrive and grow as long as extreme social inequalities are tolerated.

That is why land reform and tax reform in Italy are so important in the present counterattack against communism. They can be as effective as American supplies or American armaments in rolling back the Kremlin's ideas and in keeping western Europe free.

They can prove democracy's ability to get rid of evils which the Communists have been exploiting in Italy and all over the world.

Our Own Hemisphere

THE PROBLEM of social reform is not, of course, confined to Italy or to Europe. Well-traveled Americans, just returned from Bogota, were appalled at the richness of the rich and the poverty of the poor in Colombia. They were convinced that the Communists were able to exploit the uprising of April 9 precisely because the rich showed so little of the responsibility that goes with power.

The same situation has long been an element in China's turbulence; Secretary Marshall spoke of the evil of "feudal control" when he returned from his fruitless mission there.

It has been one cause of political instability in France, where, as Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., said last January, the rich evade taxation and "are still living on the fat of the land."

But Italy is the place where all such inequalities and discontents are focusing today. In all of western Europe there is no country where the rich live in greater luxury and where the hard-working peasants get so little food or money or security for their labors.

And there is no country in western Europe where social reform has become such a political, economic and religious issue.

Pope Urges Haste

POPE PIUS XII himself took note of the problem immediately after the election, on April 22, with a dramatic appeal to the Italian government to "hasten the social reconstruction of the country, so necessary if justice is to be done to all, especially to the working man and the unemployed."

The United States, as Italy's greatest foreign friend, has kept an anxious eye on the slow progress of Italian land reform. Officials here have been hesitant to intervene directly; they knew that until the election De Gasperi was dependent upon the landowners for financial support, and

Intense 'Numbers Game' in Capitol Cloakrooms Is Based on Digits From 1 to 23

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

IF CONGRESS is losing interest in its work, you can lay it to the numbers game.

Not the 1000-to-1 racket, currently under local investigation, but another game you play for keeps—delegate numbers.

In fact, members are looking to Tuesday's Ohio drawing with more than a gambler's interest.

The acknowledged "boss" of the Republican Congress is on trial with the GOP voters of his own State. Win or lose, he remains a power in Congress. But what number must he draw to remain a Republican convention force?

Or will Harold Stassen again call his shot and turn up the dream number that knocks Senator Robert A. Taft out of the Presidential race?

Bandwagon's in High

SOMEHOW, Ohio has become the proving ground of all that and more. In a line, it may show whether Stassen can continue his Wisconsin and Nebraska giant-killing pace and bash the bogey that a convention deal could stop him.

After Wisconsin and Nebraska, the Taft and Dewey forces could still contend logically that the Stassen victories assured merely an open convention, with the Minnesotan just one more major contender.

But the bandwagon momentum of those victories rolled on to displace Governor Dewey as the Gallup Poll leader for the first time. Last week it produced an even bigger surprise—a "write-in" lead over Dewey and Favorite Son Edward Martin in Pennsylvania.

If Stassen turns up that "number" in Ohio, it will take a powerful Old Guard combination to stop him at Philadelphia. If he repeats against Dewey in Oregon on May 21, the "stop Stassen" combination may run into an acute delegate shortage. Delegates are not easily shepherded when they think they spot a winner, as Taft and Dewey both discovered during Wendell Willkie's stampede of the 1940 convention.

Given five straight primary victories, something Willkie never had, it is at least conceivable that Stassen could duplicate Dewey's 1944 performance and win on the first ballot.

Youth Won't Be Served

THAT'S why Taft is campaigning as never before in his own backyard, to break the Stassen streak in a primary. If he aces Stassen in Ohio, or holds him to four or five delegates, it would put the first serious crimp in the Minnesotan's speed. It would soften him up for Dewey in Oregon, and make him an easy victim at Philadelphia.

For the old line organization men don't want Stassen. That goes for Taft, for Dewey, and very probably for the most likely compromise between the two, Senator Vandenberg. It goes as well for a majority of Republicans in Congress, who vote predominantly for the old line leaders in the polls.

Just why they don't want him is harder to figure, since Stassen has a regular record dating back beyond three terms as Minnesota's Governor to practically knee pants Republican organization work. It isn't just a matter of issues either. Stassen was first and farthest out on world collaboration, but the three are closer together than they seem on domestic policies.

Stassen's heresy is this: He broke with precedent by running openly for President and nothing else for two years, and introduced an entirely novel "meet the people" approach. In orthodox politics, youth, ideas and new methods are always suspect.

The Kindly Challenger

IN OHIO he has added a new wrinkle to a never static technique. When Taft waded in with both arms swinging, pooh-poohing the youthful invader and predicting his convention demise, Stassen turned the other cheek. To wondering Ohio voters, he said only nice things about Taft.

He did something else that sharpened interest in the present anything-can-happen numbers game. Except in New Hampshire, he called his victories on the eve of each primary. He called them so conservatively that his lead invariably was larger than expected.

In Ohio he has taken a numbers flyer that is bolder than all the rest. In Taft's own favorite-son territory, he predicts he will elect a majority of the 23 Stassen delegates entered.

Taft has entered a full slate of 53 delegates, can't help but elect at least 30 who are unopposed. But every delegate Stassen subtracts from Taft's full 53 will be a blow to the Ohioan's prestige.

The numbers game, currently the Capitol's chief cloakroom pastime, consists in figuring just how many delegate losses Taft can survive without a technical knockout. By the same token, how many must Stassen capture to hold the inside track?

The Ohio contingent led off by conceding that Stassen could, and possibly would, win four or five delegates without hurting Taft or doing the Minnesotan any good. Recently this number has strangely risen to nine.

The Stassen backers started low but finally worked up to a public claim of 10 to 12 delegates. Privately they are saying they will take nearly all of the 23 entered and are lamenting the fact they did not file in more districts.

It'll Be 'Analyzed'

WHATEVER number turns up short of a majority for Stassen may set off a dispute over who "won" the election. But there can be no quarrel if Stassen sweeps in his slate.

If that happens, Dewey may be wasting his time in already Stassen-minded Oregon or even in such once undisputed Dewey territory as Washington State.

What happens to Taft's once nearly solid Southern strength if the Senate boss topples, will be of more than passing interest. Southern delegates, and their unlassoed colleagues from all the smaller States, always have to guess fast and right or spend a lean four years. They have been known to race for the bandwagon.

Pick any number, 1 to 23. It's another numbers racket, but you might ride the winnah!

Canadians Debate 'Dollar Union'

By Robert S. Bird

The Kiwanis memorial to the border that binds as well as divides

TWELVE million Canadians, squeezed between an acute shortage of United States dollars and the biggest boom in their history, are giving hard thought these days to the mixed blessings of living next door to this country.

They have discovered, after five months of a national dollar-saving "austerity" program, that the undefended border binds as well as divides the two countries.

Canada got into her dollar difficulty last year when her pent-up desire for American goods and gadgets developed into the biggest buying spree in the American market in all her history. She quadrupled her United States purchases over prewar years, and laid two billion dollars United States cash on the counter to pay for them.

Canada's dollar reserves dropped so fast that in November her government put a stopper in the drain. It decreed a total ban against a wide range of nonessential American products; the very articles the Canadian people most wanted. It permitted certain essentials to trickle through only under strict quota or license.

The result has been to stir up a nation-wide debate over Canada's economic dependence on the United States. The subject is being discussed with abundant good will, but also with much frankness—and with some asperity.

At one end of the debate are the extremists who are demanding selfsufficiency for Canada. They would free the country from the American apron strings. At the other end are the advocates of economic union with the United States.

Canada in Congress

THE fear that economic union would lead to political union is a widespread one. Wynne Plumptre, a leading Canadian commentator, expressed these fears in the national weekly, Saturday Night, in these words:

"If we joined the United States . . . Canada would be divided into, say, five States instead of nine provinces, we should add 10 Senators to the present 96 in Congress, and about 40 Representatives to the present 435. We should be well represented in Congress—better than the average American is at present.

"There is, however, no reason to suppose that our Representatives in Congress would act as a solid block, any more than our House of Commons is normally unanimous on any subject. They would go into the cockpit of American politics as Democrats or Republicans—with perhaps a Henry Wallace Representative from Saskatchewan—and who could say what would come out of it? They would do nothing to remedy the basic weakness of the American political system; that weakness is built into the Constitution."

Whether an effective economic union could be achieved without Canada's relinquishing to Washington not only monetary control but agricultural policy, is another factor discussed. The nation's huge wheat surpluses, for example, could scarcely be absorbed by the United States, according to some opponents of the idea, and acreage control on Canada's prairies would be determined in Washington.

On the other side of the picture, proponents of economic union envisage many American industries, such as the fine-paper industry, moving to Canada to be nearer their raw materials. They see other industries migrating to the low-cost power area in southern Ontario.

Certain Canadian industries, according to advocates of economic union, already are feeling the constriction of a limited market of only 12 million Canadians; with the Dominion's lower industrial costs, they could easily undersell their American counterparts in a new market of more than 150 million people.

Moreover, there is a deep feeling in important quarters in Canada that the dollar shortage may not be overcome for years.

Triangle 'Sprung'

BEHIND all the discussion lies the bald fact of a breakdown—perhaps temporary, perhaps worse—in Canada's traditional pattern of world trade.

It is a world trade which ranks third among all nations in volume. Its share in the economy of this country is greater than that of any other nation. It is a trade which enables Canada to achieve a living standard second only to the United States and which in many ways forms a community of interest with this country.

Canada's trade pattern is called the "North American Triangle." Traditionally she sells most of her surpluses of wheat, timber products and base materials to the United Kingdom and the Continent. With the payments she buys from the United States her principal needs—coal, oil, steel, and an enormous range of consumer products.

Since the dollar famine abroad, Canada has not been able to convert her export surpluses into dollar exchange. Her record-breaking buying in the American market last year was largely paid for out of her dollar savings.

The present "austerity" program has shown Canadians how deeply enmeshed their national life is with that of the United States already. This does not mean that the ban on American imports is causing actual hardship to the individual; the "austerity" label which has been attached to the program is a misnomer in that sense.

But the import ban hits the country in the middle of a postwar boom, when industrial expansion and new construction are reaching all-time high levels in the nation's history, and at a time when the average Canadian is able and in a mood to buy American-made products denied him during the war. These are mostly those consumer goods which make household work lighter and everyday living easier.

Many U. S. Items

REFRIGERATORS, radios, electric mixers, toasters, washing machines and electric shavers—these are only a few of a long list of items, ranging alphabetically from asparagus to zippers, which come under the ban.

Perhaps more than anything else, Canadians have missed the fresh vegetables and fruits which normally are imported from the United States in great quantities during the long seasons when they are not available in Canada.

In its care to maintain adequate nutritional standards, the Canadian government has allowed across the border certain citrus products, carrots, and plenty of cabbage.

But by spring most Canadians found themselves heartily surfeited with these foods. After months of substituting raw cabbage in the salad course, for example, the nation has developed such a longing for California lettuce that a bookful of jokes about lettuce has become current.

But the ban on imports is not the only pill Canadians have had to swallow in combating their dollar ailment. Even Canadian-made automobiles, refrigerators, radios and the like, have been placed beyond the reach of the ordinary wage-earner. When the government imposed the import restrictions, it also levied a 25 per cent excise tax on a large list of these same consumer goods of home manufacture.

Had 'Dollar Content'

THE purpose was to discourage the domestic buying of these nonessential goods so that there would be more Canadian-made products available for export to hard-currency countries. Besides, it was explained, even many of these products had in them some "dollar content," either in parts made in the United States, or in raw materials of American origin, or as the result of American capital investment in Canadian plants and equipment.

American branch plants operating in Canada number more than 2000, and the government estimates that 30 per cent of all equipment and construction in the postwar boom in Canada represented American investment dollars.

These are only a few aspects of the dollar emergency which have brought Canadians to a painful awareness of their dependence on the "Colossus to the South."

To sever this dependence on the one hand, or to effect some form of economic union on the other, would involve staggering changes in Canada's national life, and substantial changes in this country's. But beyond the dollars-and-cents aspects are all the complexities of Canadian temperament, a fierce sense of independence and pride of country, and some deeply clashing judgments on the United States and its national way of life.

Wine Ample, But France Is 'Thirsty'

PARIS, May 1 (AP).—France begins her European Recovery Program no longer hungry but thirsty. And just when she has enough wine and water at last.

The thirst is for two liquids as different as night from day: petroleum and milk. Both for the same curious reason.

Successes overcame her other shortages but created these two.

France is expecting a bumper wheat crop to fill most of her bread needs by the time the Marshall Plan really gets under way. She is well on the road back to becoming the world's vineyard. Even the skies have produced better rainfalls after droughts that dried her power dams year after year.

But France also produced more than she can cater to of two things she lacked—and hoped for—most. They are babies and oil refineries.

In both she succeeded beyond her fondest hopes. For a period of years climaxed by the ruin of war, and up to the liberation, both the population and industrial output had been falling. Today with the birth rate rising and refineries built by miracles of effort, she hopes they will result in manpower supplies and power supplies.

Milk still is in a very big sense the "banner" of the ERP here. Of all the aid products, it is the only one that goes into the home and reaches the family clearly labeled as goods from America. The worker's family receiving a can of powdered or condensed milk for its young members can see by the label where it comes from and is not likely to forget it.

40 Resolutions Before House

'One World' Movement Spans Third of Globe

By Clarke Beach
Associated Press Staff Writer

A LARGE VARIETY of organizations are springing up throughout the country. Many advocate different methods, but all agree that only some kind of international federation will prevent a duel with atom bombs.

Many cities and towns have organized petition campaigns, independent of the national organizations. They have gotten thousands of signatures to pleas to the President or Congress to make a start on whatever action might be necessary to link the world into one community.

Similar movements are spreading abroad even faster than here. One international organization alone, the World Movement for World Federal Government, has affiliated movements in 23 countries—nearly one-third of all the nations on the globe.

The new constitutions of France and Italy have articles providing that they will agree to limitations on their national sovereignty in order to form a world federation on a basis of equality with all other states.

In China, Great Britain, South Africa, Canada and other countries, the heads of states or Prime Ministers have indorsed the movement.

American politics have not yet been affected strongly by it, but about 40 resolutions favoring world government are pending before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Many more are awaiting action in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Hearings in the House measure are expected to begin shortly.

15 States Act

FIFTEEN State Legislatures have adopted resolutions approving world government. In 19 additional States one house of the Legislature has passed such a resolution.

In a referendum in Massachusetts the idea was approved nine to one. Similar referendums are now being prepared in Connecticut, Oklahoma and New York.

Harold E. Stassen was the first presidential candidate to say flatly that he wanted the UN charter rewritten so that the UN would become strong enough to function as a world government.

Another presidential aspirant, Henry A. Wallace, told the Senate Armed Services Committee that Russia and the United States should join in a federation able to police the world.

Plenty of Americans, nevertheless, are opposed to the plan. The Daughters of the American Revolution strongly dissent from the idea of a "super-government" which would limit American sovereignty.

Many Government officials and Congressmen feel that the time is not ripe for fundamental changes in the United Nations charter. If more pressure is added to the present stresses and strains, they fear, the whole UN might blow up.

Many students of international law and political science feel that a world state cannot be established by law but must wait until all nations have similar social viewpoints.

Communists Scornful

COMMUNISTS, both in this country and Russia, are scornful of the world government idea—in curious contrast to their prewar party line, when they sponsored or infiltrated many of the most influential international peace organizations.

The world government plan, they say, diverts attention from the real conflicts in society, among which they list class struggle and economic problems.

World government advocates are not pacifists. Practically all ardently favor preparedness steps necessary to insure United States security during the period the world union is being formed.

They look forward to eventual limitation of arms and disarmament, but only to the extent that other nations disarm at the same time.

Largest of the world government organizations is the United World Federalists, with 168 chapters in 33 States and the District of Columbia. Its affiliated Student Federalists has 165 chapters in colleges and high schools in the same number of States.

Among its vice-presidents and advisory board members are such men as Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and Dr. Albert Einstein.

The United World Federalists want a complete world government, to be accomplished, if possible, through strengthening of the United Nations.

People's Convention

THEY also support the drafting of a world constitution at a world people's convention in Geneva in 1950. A British world government movement is sponsoring the convention.

The 1950 convention is the primary aim of another large movement, the People's World Constitutional Convention. Its affiliates include the Action for World Federation, World Republic and the campaign for world government.

Delegates are to be selected for this convention in an unofficial election. The idea is that private citizens will be able to agree on a world union better than professional diplomats and politicians.

Ely Culbertson, the bridge expert, heads the citizens' committee for United Nations Reform. Culbertson believes that if some kind of federation cannot be achieved quickly, it will be too late to prevent another war.

Rather than a complete world government at the start, as a first step he seeks a simple federation in which small states will provide an international police force and large nations on a quota basis will pare down their military strength.

The American Legion has endorsed the principle of this plan, and its program has been adopted by one of the most vigorous of the local movements, the Middletown (Ohio) Citizens Committee.

The Culbertson idea is also essentially the program of Columnist Dorothy Thompson's World Organization of Mothers of All Nations.

Strait's Movement

CLARENE STREIT's movement, Federal Union, looks forward to eventual world federation but doubts it can be accomplished in time. As a stopgap, it proposes a union of the United States and Western European democracies, leaving the door open to Russia and all the other nations when they subscribe to its principles.

Dr. Robert C. Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, heads the Committee to Frame a World Constitution. After two years' work, he and 10 other prominent educators completed the draft of their constitution on March 20.

The Emergency Committee of Atomic Scientists, headed by Einstein, agrees in general with the programs of both Streit and the United World Federalists. Almost any type of world union would be better than none, they warned on April 11 after the collapse of UN efforts to obtain agreement on international control of atomic energy.

Local petition campaigns and organization drives have been the most striking activities of world government promoters. The most successful has been the Workers for World Security, in Cleveland, where about 300,000 persons have signed simple pledges that they believe in and want a federation of the world.

The Mayors of Chicago and Minneapolis have proclaimed world government weeks. Norwalk, Conn., started a petition movement that spread all over the Atlantic seaboard in the past year. Sinclair Lewis sparked a week-long drive in Sauk Centre, Minn., for which the whole town turned out.

The "bible" of the movement is Emery Reves' "Anatomy of Peace," published in 1945 before the atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima. Next favorite is "Modern Man Is Obsolete," by Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature. This, too, was published shortly after Hiroshima.

De Gasperi and His Butcher Get Along

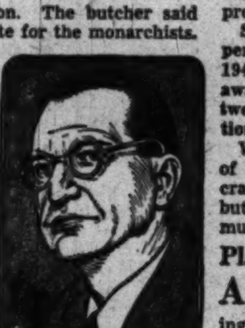
Royalist Soup Doesn't Gag Him

By Philip Clarke
Associated Press Staff Writer

ROME, May 1.—The night before Italy's fateful election, Italy's Premier went out with his wife to buy some soup meat for Sunday dinner.

As usual, Alcide De Gasperi talked with the neighborhood butcher, Giovanni Salvatore. The butcher said the price of the meat was a bit high. The Premier, who cuts sharp corners on his $150 a month salary, agreed. They blamed "world conditions."

They spoke of the election. The butcher said he was sorry but he must vote for the monarchists. His father had always loved the king and so had he. The Premier said that was perfectly all right.



DE GASPERI
. . . sketched by Munhall

Salvatore said he was sorry he hadn't got around to scrubbing off the hammer and sickle someone had painted on the front of his shop. The Premier said that was all right, too.

Then the De Gasperis walked a half block back to their seven-room, $30 a month apartment. The elevator wasn't working so the janitor, Alfredo Bartolini, offered to carry the meat upstairs to the fifth-floor apartment.

The Premier accepted with thanks. He was tired from campaign speechmaking and running the government.

De Gasperi, 67, dry-witted and shrewd, is one of the most Lincolnesque of Europe's present-day leaders. Alpine-born, he has the awkward gait of the mountaineer. Through brown-rimmed glasses he has the piercing, steel-blue glance of an eagle.

Wisps of his abundant brown hair stray over a broad forehead. His heavy frame is usually clothed in a dark, conservative suit, rumpled and worn.

He's hard to get to know. Italians did not take easily to this soft-spoken, scholarly man.

They like his devoutness. De Gasperi heard mass at St. Peter's before he went, with his wife and the family maid, to vote in a neighborhood schoolhouse.

Part-Time 'Jaspar'

DE GASPERI got less than $50 a month in his first clerk's job in the Vatican library in 1929. He worked up to $80 as chief librarian but this still was not enough for a man with a wife and four growing daughters.

So he pieced out his income at night—translating at a nickel a page from German into Italian. He wrote pamphlets on histories of the Popes, the church and its social progress. Because his Vatican job barred outside work, he wrote under the name "Jaspar."

Money matters always have bothered De Gasperi. Taking over as Foreign Minister in December, 1944, he had to ask for an advance on his $100 a month salary to buy a new suit.

He relaxes by bowling and going for long walks with his wife. But he likes best to climb mountains—little ones now because of his age and frail health.

At 54 he climbed his last big mountain—a 9000-foot peak in the Dolomites. Descending, a hook missed a ledge and for a quarter of an hour De Gasperi hung on a rope, spinning thousands of feet above a chasm.

"Waiting to be rescued," he said later, "was like waiting for the end of fascism."

De Gasperi, however, didn't exactly "wait" for fascism's end. He helped end it as an underground newspaper editor and leader and as an opposition deputy in Mussolini's mock parliament.

More than a year and a half of his 20-year fight against fascism was spent in jail on a false charge of trying to flee the country in 1926. Signora De Gasperi also was arrested and spent two weeks in Rome's "Queen of Heaven" jail, a few cells away from her husband.

A Student Politician

DE GASPERI got his first taste of political life in Vienna, where he attended the university four years and received a degree in literature. As a student he was active in the Italian "Irredentist" movement. He was jailed for a month after a demonstration on behalf of Italian laborers in Austria.

At 24 he was editor of the Catholic newspaper Il Nuovo Trentino at Trent. Before he was 30 he was elected to the Austrian Parliament, where he championed Italian minorities.

After the First World War made his homeland Italian, De Gasperi became active in the Italian Popular Party, and later took over its leadership.

Years of opposition to fascism followed. When the Allies liberated Italy, De Gasperi brought his party out into the open again and reorganized it as the Christian Democrats.

He served in various governments that followed, as minister without portfolio, Foreign Minister and, beginning in December, 1945, as "compromise" Premier.

Stung by constant Communist criticism, De Gasperi booted them out of his government in June, 1947. It was the end of "compromise." He got away with the bold move, excluding more than two million Communists from direct representation in the government.

When the Communists reacted in a bloody series of nation-wide strikes last December, De Gasperi cracked down. It was a critical test of strength but the government won. From then on, Communism's star was on the wane in Italy.

Plans Methodical Reforms

AND what does De Gasperi, almost certain to be renamed Premier, have to say about the coming five years?

Communism can remain as a party, he says, but terrorism cannot. Italy's new government even will be willing to deal with Communists on a friendly basis, but the leftists will have to check their pistols at the door.

He plans widespread agrarian reforms in Italy's poverty-ridden south, where large landowners have kept peasants in semi-slavery for centuries or allowed huge tracts of precious soil to go untilled and unkept. But the reforms will be made not in patchwork haste but in slow, methodical fashion.

Conditions in Reich Shock Former POWs

BERLIN, May 1 (AP).—Former German prisoners of war who received schooling in democracy during their confinement in the United States are disillusioned with postwar Germany.

Most of them say they are more shocked by the country's moral collapse than by its enormous physical war damage.

This was the reaction of most of 78 former American-held prisoners who attended a democracy training school at Fort Getty, Newport, R. I. They were chosen for the school on their liberal political outlook and above-average intellect.

Now, three years after the war, the 78 who could be traced have been questioned by the opinion surveys section of the American Military Government's information control division.

The men who were sent back home to Germany as missionaries of democracy reported, the survey said, that "Nazi and militaristic elements are met with everywhere."

Nearly half of them claimed that "widespread corruption, red tape and the low level of both morals and morale in all aspects of public and family life" formed their first and most shocking impression of their homeland. They said they feared these conditions will impede seriously Germany's chances of reconstruction.

Only 25 per cent said the greatest impression upon them was made by Germany's physical war damage. Many said they had been prepared for this by reports they had read in American newspapers while they were prisoners.

Half of those questioned expressed concern over the absence of a sincerely democratic attitude among the German people. They expressed fervent hope for the unification of partitioned Germany, the abolition of occupation zone borders and the establishment of a German government. All thought Germany would be occupied for a long time.

Practically all the former prisoners were pessimistic about Germany's future. About 33 per cent said they thought Germany could recover her former position provided she got outside help, and frequent mention was made of a United States of Europe. Of those who expressed preference for a political party, 35 per cent mentioned the Social Democrats (anti-Communist Socialists).

Forty per cent said they firmly intended to emigrate, another 20 per cent said they had been thinking seriously of it. Most of them said they wanted to go to the United States.

U. S. 'Breadbasket' Sorely Needs DPs

By Edwin R. Armstrong

FOR the past six months a realistic, ground-level study of the possibility of resettling displaced Europeans has been in progress in six Midwestern and two Western States.

The program was inaugurated in Minnesota last November when Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl appointed a 10-man commission, headed by Dr. T. F. Gullixson, president of Luther Theological Seminary, St. Paul.

Youngdahl said his motive was not only humanitarian but included concern for Minnesota's economy. That agricultural State has lost nearly 100,000 rural residents in the past six years.

Rollo Bergenson, Iowa Secretary of State, was named chairman of a similar body of experts for a resettlement survey of that Corn Belt State.

By the first of 1948, the Governors of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Colorado and Wyoming had inaugurated similar studies.

Preliminary returns reveal that beyond any question the breadbasket of the Nation needs new farming people and looks to the displaced persons of Europe as a possible source.

17,000 Have Ties

MINNESOTA and Iowa list 17,000 displaced persons who are friends or relatives of residents, who could be absorbed at once. An additional 1000 families a year for four years could be settled in Iowa, according to a report by Howard Hill, president of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, based on a poll of county agents.

The Governor's study group in South Dakota is now drafting a report which indicates that thousands are wanted there. Wyoming's Gov. Lester C. Hunt said in April, when his committee was appointed, that the State could take "at least 1000 farm families."

Early studies in North Dakota indicated that between 5000 and 10,000 displaced persons would be welcome there. Catholics and Lutherans with relatives in the DP camps showed great eagerness to sponsor them in reaching America.

The Minnesota commission found that 380 residents had 1559 relatives in DP camps, and that 1403 Minnesotans wished to aid a DP family in migrating though they were not related. Only eight Minnesotans wrote in that they were against the program.

In Iowa, the church phase of the survey revealed that 1460 displaced persons were welcome immediately in that many homes. There was additional housing for 875 families. The labor subcommittee reported 3320 jobs open for displaced Europeans in Iowa. An additional 2847 farm positions were discovered.

The study was careful to observe that none of these positions or housing arrangements competed with State residents, and particularly with veterans.

Affinity for Soil

MINNESOTA and Iowa were aware that their population declines were due to young people leaving the farms. Country folk from Europe, it was concluded, would settle on farms and remain content with country life for at least this generation.

In Iowa, the AFL-CIO labor subcommittee also reported:

"The committee believes that some hundreds of displaced persons could be placed in heavy manufacturing industry within the State without disturbing the present labor market."

Population declines in the great valley States were estimated last August by the Census Bureau as follows:

North Dakota	148,417
South Dakota	131,272
Wisconsin	99,528
Minnesota	97,022
Nebraska	92,586
Iowa	83,546

Since the Minnesota loss, for example, was nearly 100,000 and Minnesotans indicate a desire to resettle less than 10,000 displaced persons, the practicality of the program is apparent.

It is unprofitable to speculate as to the total number of displaced Europeans who would be welcome in the eight States, but the figure of 100,000 has been widely discussed.

Channeling Needed

I HAVE spent the best part of a year traveling the wheat sections and rolling plains of the great Missouri Valley. Everywhere I found sentiment for some program which would insure the migration of the right people into each State.

It was understood that some DPs were experienced beet growers. People in Wyoming naturally wanted these beet growers and their families to come there to live.

Governor Youngdahl plans to call a conference of Governors to discuss just this aspect. And if Congress enacts the pending bills to make some DP migration possible, it is likely that an interstate commission will be created to supervise the program.

The House Judiciary Committee last Thursday reported out a bill to admit 200,000 displaced Europeans over a two-year period. The measure would give first priority to farm laborers, doctors, dentists, nurses, domestics, construction and garment workers and persons with scholastic qualifications, and second priority to persons who have blood relatives in this country.

Catholic, Lutheran and Jewish leaders have expressed interest in the creation of a resettlement agency capable of coping with the mechanics of a great migration. Under the several bills being considered, as many as 2000 displaced persons might be arriving in America each week for several years.

Electric Tractors Get Reds' Consideration

MOSCOW (AP). — Soviet agricultural agencies are now experimenting with electric tractors. According to Izvestia, these are the normal Soviet caterpillar tractors but with an electric motor in place of a gasoline or Diesel engine. The tractor also has a small electric motor which turns a drum for winding and unwinding the electric power cable bringing electricity to the tractor.

'Wizard' Ponzi Now in Charity Ward

By Hoyt Ware
Associated Press Staff Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 1.—Charles (Get Rich Quick) Ponzi, the wizard of scrambled finance who hoaxed Americans out of millions of dollars in 1920, is now a charity patient in a Brazilian hospital.

Ponzi is 70 or thereabouts (accounts of his birthdate differ, but most agree he was born in Italy in 1878) and semi-paralyzed. He can not move his left leg or left arm and he has a cataract on his right eye. But he recalls with a chuckle the days when he had millions.

Visitors to the charity ward of the government hospital find it difficult to pick out the man whose operations once caused a major financial scandal. There are 20 beds in a row. On them are 20 sick old men.

Ponzi is not penniless. He receives unemployment compensation under Brazil's liberal social security laws and has managed to make a living teaching English in a modest suburb of Rio.

He has a small apartment which he has had to share with a couple to make ends meet. He pays about $20 monthly rent and until his illness did most of his own cooking.

Wide World Photos.

Opens Airline

PONZI came to Brazil from Italy before the war and opened the Airline Lati (Linha Area Transcontinentale Italiana) here. He had lived in Italy for several years after his deportation from the United States in 1934.

During the war Ponzi was arrested on suspicion when Brazilian authorities broke up an Italian spy ring which was directing the sinking of Brazilian ships. He was soon released, however.

He was stricken with what he thinks was a severe case of food poisoning in February, a hot month here. He said he ate some spoiled meat and fell in a faint, paralyzed.

When he gets stronger he intends to have an operation to remove his cataract. He can see only with his left eye. He likes to think he can doctor himself because he once studied medicine.

Ponzi's bouyant personality makes him a character to hospital attendants although he is half paralyzed and half blind.

"Well, how much do you know about me?" was the way the bald, smiling little man on the hospital bed began the conversation. Here is his story, told without a trace of bitterness:

Had 15 Millions

"I WAS number one in those days before Al Capone. I guess the only news about me that most people want to hear is my death. Once I had 15 million dollars. I used to carry a couple of million in my pockets, in certified checks and cash. Look at me now. I guess a lot of people would say I got what I deserved.

"Well, that was 28 years ago. A lot of water has gone under the bridge since. But I hit the American people where it hurts—in the pocketbook. Those were confused, money-mad days. Everybody wanted to make a killing. I was in it plenty deep, rolling in other people's money.

"I had so many people coming to my office that the other tenants in the building couldn't get in the elevator. They tried to throw me out, but I wouldn't leave my well known address, 27 School st., Boston, next door to City Hall. I told them I would buy the building. They let me stay. People were sending me money from all over.

"My business was simple. It was the old game of robbing Peter to pay Paul. You would give me $100 and I would give you a note to pay $150 in three months. Usually I would redeem my note in 45 days. My notes became more valuable than American money.

"I had to keep the ball rolling and so I bought a bank. I didn't need any advertising. Everybody knew about it. I did a lot of business by mail. That's what got me in trouble. Pretty soon postal inspectors and policemen were dropping in asking questions.

Only 45 Days

"THEY said my business couldn't be honest. I showed them the facts. Fifty per cent on your money in 45 days. Everybody wanted to get rich quick. I was rich too. Only two cars, the mayor's and mine, were allowed on School st. Everything was rosy.

"Then came trouble. The whole thing was broken. They closed my bank to investigate and a lot of money was lost. They indicted me on I don't know how many charges. I turned over everything I had to the bankruptcy court. I could use some of it now!

"Both the Federal Government and the State wanted me. I went to Plymouth and served time for the State. When I came out, I did a 'number' in vaudeville for $1000 a week. Pretty soon they handed me another indictment. I went to Atlanta as a guest of the Federal Government. That was the mail charge.

"I came out and there were still more charges. I conducted my own defense and I fought hard, but I lost. I had never completed my citizenship and they deported me. I think the authorities were too hard on me. Even some of the reporters who won prizes for their papers convicting me agreed. They said I was a good sport and had taken my medicine like a man. I had lots of friends, but I had to go.

"Naturally, I hated to leave. I loved that country. I went there when I was a young man. I turned up in Pittsburgh with $2.50 and not knowing a word of English. The first day I got a job as a mason's helper.

"Then I was a carpenter, grocery clerk and I don't know what all. I could do anything. Still can if I could get up. I will, too. Anyway, I went all over the country, seeing and learning. I worked down in Mobile, Ala., then in Birmingham.

Gives Skin to Nurse

"ONE time in Blocton, Ala., I volunteered to give a lot of skin to a nurse who had been badly burned helping some coal miners in an explosion. The operation was successful and she lived.

"Everybody tried to make me a hero. But I didn't have time. I was moving around.

"Well, I got together $500 traveling around the country as a salesman. I went to New York. I had all kinds of jobs. I said I could do anything. And I could. Once, in my heyday, I bought the entire United States merchant fleet. At least, I almost did.

"It wasn't so large then. England ruled the seas. The Shipping Board was selling out the fleet at a ridiculously low price. I wrote a check for two million as a binder. I tried to get hold of Bernard Baruch to help me. But they didn't sell it. I didn't know anything about shipping, but I would have shown them a thing or two and given the British a race for their money.

"The biggest deal—the one that got away—was aimed at Soviet Russia. By some way or other, I got word that I could have a 5 per cent commission if I would bring (I believe the word is smuggle) in two billion dollars in gold.

"Well, I was interested, all right. Not so much in the 5 per cent. The two billion looked good, though. I could have had it deposited in European banks and drawn it in checks. What a joke on the Communists that would have been. But it didn't go through.

"So, I was deported. I wrote a book called 'The Rise of Mister Ponzi.' I had a hard time getting it published and had to leave it in New York. A lawyer in Fort Worth, Tex., took 750 copies.

"He hasn't had much luck. I think most of them are still on his hands. I started another book, 'The Fall of Mister Ponzi,' but it's still unfinished. I don't think anybody is interested in the subject any more.

"When I got to Italy, I moved in pretty high circles. But I was never in any political party or in politics. I had been away too long. Through a nephew, who was Mussolini's pilot, I came to Brazil in 1939 to open the Airline Lati.

"Then the war came and everything was confiscated. But I got along all right. I had to move from my big house and sell my car, which had belonged to Mussolini. I have worked recently as a correspondent for some English commercial houses. I also teach English. In my neighborhood I am known as 'Professor Carlo Ponzi.' I also give lessons sometimes in Italian and French. I can do anything."

Third Group Below Par

UMT Experiment Scraping Barrel

By Tom Hardie

FORT KNOX, KY., May 1.—The Universal Military Training Experimental Unit here is now undergoing what Army officers call its "acid test."

The current group of teen-age trainees is below the mental and educational level of the Army and the Nation, as well as of the two classes already graduated. Officers therefore feel that if this class makes the grade, the Army should have a strong new argument for UMT.

ZIRKLE

Only 6.6 per cent of the 623 youths have been graduated from high school. Their average score on the Army General Classification Test, on ability to "think accurately and rapidly," was 100 out of 160, almost 10 points below the Army average of the last war.

According to Maj. Paul Zirkle, jr., of 708 N. Wakefield st., Arlington, Va., unit adjutant general and personnel officer, their marks were especially low for two reasons:

The caliber of men enlisting has fallen off since last July 25, when the GI Bill of Rights ceased to apply to new enlistees.

The class now in training joined up in December, a slack recruiting month because of Christmas, when the Army has less appeal for the well-established youth with family ties. Many July-grade enlistees, on the other hand, are recent high school graduates who join in accordance with a well-thought-out plan.

High-Grade Starters

THE first highly publicized class in this experiment was 21 per cent high school graduates, while the second, which began last July 15 days before the GI Bill deadline, was a showcase outfit with 53 per cent high school graduates.

Maj. Maury Hundley, jr., Protestant chaplain, estimates that nearly 150 of the present group are from divorced or separated families, and many are what he calls "flounderers."

Between 10 and 15 per cent joined the Army for "thrills," he says, or admittedly to cash in on overseas black markets and to "cavort with frauleins." He also says that a score of them have reform school or prison records, and that possibly 100 out of the 623 are under the 17-year age minimum.

When one of the six company commanders recently asked all under-age recruits to report to his office, 26 showed up. Those who can produce parental permission may remain.

Food a Factor

WHEN questioned in a mess hall today, however, all 10 trainees at one table agreed they were glad they enlisted and that they wound up here. The chief explanations were that the food is good and that the Army gives many a home for the first time.

A 19-year-old Baltimorean who had been making $125 a week driving an ice cream truck (he gets $75 a month now) didn't know why he enlisted except that "my five buddies got in, and I didn't want to seem like a slacker."

There are others, however, who were graduated with the second group and stayed on as part of the cadre for this one. They are taking advantage of the nonmilitary courses offered by the information and education section.

Nevertheless, there was so little general interest in the academic courses that it was found necessary to change from a voluntary basis to a compulsory four hours a week.

An AGCT score of 100 was required of the first group in this UMT experiment, and 90 of the second. It had to be reduced to as low as 70 for the present batch. Officers here cite that as just one evidence that voluntary enlistment no longer will produce the type of men needed for atomic warfare.

Flame-Spurting Jets Just Fiction

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP).—Jet engines don't spurt flame. At least they shouldn't.

The popular impression that turbojets spew out columns of flame, like giant Fourth-of-July rockets, is just the opposite of what actually happens in a properly functioning engine, according to fuel experts at Bendix Aviation Corp's. products division here.

These experts say the burning gases that produce the propelling thrust in jets must be kept deep within the engine's combustion chambers. Otherwise, the whirling blades of the turbine wheel, as well as the engine's discharge tube, would disintegrate from the extremely high temperatures.

English Woman's Idea

'Peace Train' Has Moscow as Goal

By Richard Tompkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, May 1.—Mrs. Leah Manning told her fellow members of Parliament what she thought of war hysteria. Now she is marshalling a "peace train" to let the ordinary people of the east and west say what they think and prove they want peace.

Thousands of letters have poured in supporting her stand since this motherly but militant peace advocate addressed Parliament in a recent debate on civil defense.

Her idea for the "peace train" came before her speech. She had visualized it to counteract the influence of the "atom train," an exhibition on railway cars of developments in atomic energy.

The "atom train" has this slogan: "There is no defense." Mrs. Manning's "peace train," which she expects to have on the rails this fall, will proclaim: "This is the only defense."

After members had talked of gas masks, flesh burns, deep shelters and dispersal of population, Mrs. Manning startled the House of Commons with a heartfelt outburst.

"If you men can discuss this coldly and scientifically here, the women cannot. It is a shocking commentary on our times that after drawing breath from one war we should be getting ready to fight the next.

"We must stop this juggernaut of war before it is too late."

Mrs. Manning's parents were naturalized Americans who lived in Rockford, Ill., and Grand Rapids, Mich. She was born in Droitwich, Worcestershire, England.

She entered Parliament in 1931, was beaten in the general election that followed soon afterwards. She was again elected in 1945 and now represents the London suburban Epping Forest district.

She is a former president of the National Union of Teachers. She has long been identified with the Labor Party and has lectured widely on educational and political topics.

"I am neither a Communist, a crypto-Communist, a fellow-traveler nor a pacifist," she says.

"It worries me that so many people should be playing up this idea that England and America want peace but that behind the 'iron curtain' they want war. Behind the 'iron curtain' the ordinary people want peace to rebuild their war-devastated countries.

"All the bad feeling began with the refusal of America to share the atom bomb secrets. What I would like is that everybody get together and outlaw the atom bomb."

The "peace train" would take large groups of women and men, including Americans and Canadians, to see what goes on in France, Italy, Yugoslavia, Poland and all European countries—how ordinary people are living and thinking. The eastern destination would be Moscow.

One Stockpile That Won't Dwindle

Rich New Vein of Cliches Found

(With the usual apologies to Frank Sullivan, for the loan of his Mr. Arbuthnot, the cliche expert.)

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

QUESTION: We haven't had the pleasure of any testimony from you, Mr. Arbuthnot, since May 5, 1946. At that time you had mastered the terminology of labor disputes. Can you tell us what you're doing now?

Answer: The same thing, except that I've become a specialist in the field, concentrating on the locutions of coal strikes—or, as we cliche experts say, coal stoppages, walkouts or, occasionally, shutdowns.

Q.: Very Interesting. But tell us, Mr. A., when miners strike . . .

A.: Excuse me. We don't say that the miners strike. We say they put down (or lay down or even throw down) their shovels. And do you know what they do when they end their strikes?

Q.: No; tell me.

A.: They come trooping back to the pits.

Q.: And after that, when the strike is first settled, what hangs over the coal fields?

A.: An uneasy truce. It can also hover.

Q.: During the coal strike, how does resentment among the men run?

A.: High.

Q.: What does anger do?

A.: It flares.

Q.: What kind of violence does this cause?

A.: You mean "provoke," or "touch off." The answer is: Sporadic.

Evolution of a Verb

Q.: DOES the coal strike cause workers in other industries to be laid off?

A.: Yes, except that we always say "idled." We say, "The coal strike idled so-and-so-many workers."

Q.: Of course, I should have remembered that from your last lecture. What happens to supplies of coal during a strike?

A.: Please. There is only one proper way to refer to that matter. The phrase is: "Coal stockpiles dwindled." They always dwindle.

Q.: Now, let's turn to the union president . . .

A.: You mean miners' boss, John L. Lewis.

Q.: Yes. How do you describe him?

A.: That's easy. "Bushy-browed" and, quite often, grim-visaged."

Q.: As I recall, he usually responds to questions with a "No comment."

A.: You mean a brusque, or sometimes a curt, "No comment."

Q.: He often lunches alone at the Carlton Hotel?

A.: I'm afraid you haven't quite caught on. We say that he often lunches in solitary splendor at the swanky (or fashionable) Carlton Hotel.

Q.: I'm sorry. How do you refer to other officials in the union?

A.: They are Lewis' underlings.

Q.: When he is summoned to court . . .

A.: You mean haled before the bar of justice.

Q.: Yes. When that happens, his underlings accompany him?

A.: More properly, he is flanked by them.

Q.: I see. And in court, the presiding judge is Goldsborough?

A.: Really, that's inexcusable. It's always, "Lewis' old nemesis, Judge Goldsborough."

The Implied Curtsy

Q.: FORGIVE me. To continue; when the judge issues a sentence or a subpena, Lewis usually obeys, doesn't he?

A.: You mean that he bows to the court.

Q.: But before that, while he is in court, doesn't he always eat candy?

A.: Let's be more precise. He sits poker-faced, impassive, almost immobile, betraying no emotion. But all the while he pops peppermint candies into his mouth.

Q.: And then, when it's all over, he goes back to his office?

A.: His ornate office, which is only two blocks from the White House.

Q.: How do you describe his desk?

A.: Massive.

Q.: In what does he drive from his ornate office to his house in Alexandria?

A.: It's his mansion in Alexandria, please. He travels there in his chauffeur-driven sleek, black limousine. And do you know what he does then?

Q.: No.

A.: He girds himself for the next bout with the operators.

Q.: What do you experts do meantime?

A.: We file away our cliches for future reference. And now I'll have to leave you. I've got to ready myself to face the next hurdle.

Hit by False Economy

Dope Smuggling Up; Customs Men Taxed

By Leo Branham
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, May 1.—Day and night, squads of armed men carrying flashlights and pocket mirrors swarm aboard ships entering New York Harbor.

The alert, eagle-eyed men of the United States Customs Enforcement Division don't carry the glassware from milady's handbag to use in combing their hair or prettying their features. Pocket mirrors are standard equipment in the grim, unrelenting war on narcotic smuggling.

Placed strategically, a mirror shows up what may be ingeniously hidden behind a lavatory washbowl, a seaman's bunk, or in the machinery of the ship's intricate engine room.

From stem to stern, expert searchers go over a vessel like a fine tooth comb.

Vigilance of these Customs officers has paid off handsomely. In the last year they've confiscated contraband drugs valued at several million dollars in the illicit market, said Harry M. Durning, United States Customs Collector for the New York port.

New York, in law enforcement parlance, is a "hot" port—about the hottest in the world.

International smugglers have renewed efforts to penetrate port surveillance with narcotics for American dope peddling rings. History, said veteran port officials, is repeating itself. A postwar resurgence of narcotic smuggling is comparable to one after the First World War.

Safeguards Weakened

COLLECTOR DURNING attributes the alarming increase to a breakdown of prewar safeguards abroad, world-wide unrest and unsettled economic conditions and the age-old desire for quick, high profits.

In tightening their vigil against smuggling, Customs officers pay particular attention to all ships coming from French and Mediterranean ports. That's where, they said, most shipments of illicit drugs originate.

Ships from Britain and Ireland, the officers said, seldom figure in drug smuggling. Always suspect, however, said Herman Lipski, chief of the United States Customs Enforcement Division, are vessels coming from Naples, Genoa, Marseille, LeHavre and Antwerp.

Lipski's men recently scored their biggest catch of the year when they discovered narcotics valued at one million dollars secreted about a ship from LeHavre.

One bundle of drugs was found in the ship's galley at the bottom of a full barrel of flour. Another batch, encased in a waterproof bag, reposed in a soup tureen full of water. Other packages were discovered inside the lining of the ship's oven and in a box of sea biscuits.

Another recent haul came when shore patrol officers under Durning raided the basement of a dingy waterfront tenement. They found 36 ounces of narcotics and complete equipment for testing, diluting and preparing drugs for illicit sale to addicts.

$200,000 Haul

IN A drainpipe in the basement they found $18,000 in cash and a pistol. From a man caught fleeing the basement they confiscated four more ounces of drugs. Total value of the catch was placed at $200,000.

On March 22, Lipski's port patrol officers arrested two sailors of a Turkish freighter as they went ashore carrying $50,000 worth of drugs.

Customs officials say their forces are insufficient to search all ships that dock here.

They can only "spot" check. Their inspections frequently are prompted by information received from other government agencies, undercover agents or informers abroad.

Durning said his force of 900 men was cut to 75 a year ago by reduced Government appropriations. Last July an additional 475 men were returned to duty.

"We still have a grossly inadequate force to do the job," the collector declared.

To be really effective, Durning said his forces should be enlarged sufficiently to permit search of at least 57 per cent of incoming ships. Under present conditions, he said, coverage is limited to around 18 per cent.

Durning's men not only operate along the waterfront and harbor, but at New York airports as well.

Ninety per cent of enforcement division personnel are war veterans. A small fleet of radio-equipped Coast Guard cutters is at their disposal.

Narcotics smuggling is only one phase of their work. They confiscate all merchandise—jewelry, perfume, silks, etc.—which passengers or crews attempt to smuggle.

Question Of Loyalty

The conclusion of the Commissioners' special committee that there is "no necessity . . . at this time" for a general loyalty check of District employes conforms to common sense. No unusual discernment is essential to see that the vast majority of District employes have no relationship to the Federal agencies that are concerned with our national defense and our foreign policy. It is possible that a check may be desirable as to a few District employes in units or agencies which might possibly attract saboteurs. If so, it can certainly be conducted by a more appropriate agency than the Police Department — the agency originally mentioned by Commissioner John Russell Young to conduct a wider check.

Credit is due the Commissioners for accepting the report of their "Loyalty Committee," but it would have been far more creditable if they had made such a simple and obvious decision for themselves. We do not know what took place within the committee, but it is by no means impossible that it was confronted by the question as to what the loyalty of District employes should consist of. Could they reasonably be asked if they are loyal to the existing makeshift regime at the District Building—an arrangement which deprives them of the right to vote and various other privileges accorded to other American citizens? The big question at the moment is not so much whether District employes and other District residents are loyal to the American system as it is whether the American system is loyal to them in the sense of extending to them rights now regarded as a common American heritage.

Inconstant Consistency

Secretary Marshall in an informal address the other day to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States seems to have spoken regretfully of the frequent vacillations of American foreign policy in contrast to the firmness and consistency of British policy. It was because of this continuity of policy, he said, that Britain was able to retain for centuries the role of one of the greatest powers.

If Mr. Marshall was correctly quoted, it seems to us that his statements need some amendment and amplification. It is true that since the seventeenth century British policy has been historically more or less consistent on two points. (1) To preserve a balance of power on the continent of Europe and (2) to enter into alliances against any nation which appeared likely to disturb the balance of power. It was thus that the British in the eighteenth century entered into one alliance after another against France; it was for the same reason that after rise of imperial Germany Britain entered into alliance with France.

Nothing, however, could have been less consistent with traditional British policy than the behavior of the British Foreign Office throughout the period between 1930 and 1939. To a large extent the erratic character of British policy made possible the aggressions of Japan and the rise of Hitler and thus made inevitable the Second World War, which has resulted in the present exhausted condition of Great Britain and the disintegration of the empire. The policy of this period has been well described as an effort not to enforce the peace by preserving the balance of power but to avoid war at all costs.

It was Britain which blocked the attempt by the League of Nations to employ sanctions against the Japanese after the seizure of Manchuria. It was Britain which acquiesced in Hitler's plan for the large-scale rearmament of Germany. It was Britain which discouraged sanctions against Italy for her war of conquest in Ethiopia. It was Britain which took the initiative in the negotiation of the Hoare-Laval Treaty. It was Britain which concluded a treaty with Nazi Germany which permitted Hitler to rehabilitate the German navy and to rebuild his air strength in direct defiance of the Treaty of Versailles. Again, it was Britain which repudiated the Treaty of Locarno by refusing assistance to France when Hitler's forces reoccupied the Rhineland. It was Britain which, in the hope of localizing the conflagration, instigated the policy of nonintervention in Spain, accepted Hitler's forcible Anschluss with Austria as an accomplished fact and forced Czechoslovakia to accept the terms of the Munich pact.

The point is not merely that these actions were, as the sequel proved, shortsighted and disastrously mistaken, but that they were a radical departure from traditional British policy. The spirit and motive of this departure was well expressed by Mr. Chamberlain on his return from Munich: "Peace for our generation." In other words, the policy was to avoid the immediate danger of war even at the price of making future war certain.

It might also be observed that the United States has had a traditional policy. The cardinal elements of this policy were (1) the Monroe Doctrine, (2) freedom of the seas, (3) no foreign alliances and (4) recognition of all de facto governments. To this policy the United States under successive Administrations adhered with an astonishing consistency until 1898, when it embarked on its first imperial adventure outside the continental limits of North America. The isolationist movement, which dominated American thought between 1920 and Mr. Roosevelt's "quarantine" speech of 1937, was in effect, a desire to return to the traditional policy—an example of what Professor Toynbee has called "archaism."

In two of the four points enumerated, the Monroe Doctrine and freedom of the seas, the United States still holds to its traditional policy. The other two points have been reluctantly surrendered to historical exigencies. We might add that they seem to have been definitely and permanently abandoned in the policy which has been outlined by Secretary Marshall and in which he now desires us to persevere.

Positive Peace

There is much sound advice in the "Positive Program for Peace" submitted to President Truman by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The churchmen sensibly refuse to believe that war is inevitable and place great emphasis upon combating "hysteria or blind hatred" that would tend to make it so. Instead of resigning ourselves to fatalism about war, they say, we should press for positive programs "which have immediate possibilities for peace and justice." We should promote greater economic and social well-being and the observance of human rights throughout the world. Obviously this is sound advice, and if any exception can be taken to this part of the statement it is only because of the indirect manner in which it recognizes that the United States is already following this policy through the European recovery program.

Less clear-cut is the section of the statement dealing with military policy. "Our people should not rely primarily on military strategy," the churchmen say, "to meet Communist aggression. Such reliance is more apt to bring war than prevent it. "If this is intended to imply that the Administration is placing too much emphasis upon military preparedness, or that peace can be assured by economic and social rehabilitation without strong military defense, we think it is misguided. This country did not put arms ahead of recovery. On the contrary, Secretary Marshall suggested nearly a year ago that all European nations, including Russia, pool their resources for recovery, with American help. The Russians not only refused to participate; they also stepped up their aggressive tactics, with the object of destroying the Marshall Plan for the simple reason that communism thrives on misery. It was only when this country's positive and constructive efforts to buttress the peace brought a new wave of Communist aggression that the United States began to rearm.

The inescapable fact is that, in the present international climate, military strength is essential to security. It is equally essential to recovery. No free economy can function effectively under constant threats of revolution or external aggression. Even the churchmen recognize that "national military strength is necessary, while we continually strive for the multilateral reduction and control of armaments through the United Nations." Again they admit that "most of us would fight rather than surrender" our liberties. With a powerful military nation actively destroying those liberties in one country after another, ordinary prudence compels us to prepare to fight if the necessity should arise.

We think there is a lack of realism, too, in the appeal for "greater use of processes of international conversation and negotiation." Certainly it is a fortunate fact that the door to negotiations between the United States and Russia is still open. We hope it will always remain open. But ever since the end of the war negotiations have proved fruitless. In the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, in the four-power council at Berlin and in the Council of Foreign Ministers the western powers have encountered a seemingly impenetrable wall of noncooperation. This does not mean that negotiations should be abandoned as futile. But it does mean that negotiations in the present state of world affairs are a weak reed on which to lean. We wonder also if the churchmen remember Stalin's cynical comment: "Good words are a mask for concealment of bad deeds. Sincere diplomacy is no more possible than dry water or wooden iron."

While we are doing our utmost to discourage hysteria, to preserve the awareness that war is horrible business, and to work for removal of the causes of unrest and human misery, the concurrent necessity of rebuttressing our military strength should not be minimized by wishful thinking. The one certain way to destruction would be to amass all the good will and constructive efforts for peace on one side and a preponderance of armament and aggressive intent on the other.

Conant On Communism

While Mr. Murray was challenging the Communists at Atlantic City, President Conant of Harvard was helping to clarify the problem of American communism at the centenary dinner of the Community Service Society in New York. Three views concerning the nature of communism, said Dr. Conant, are prevalent in the United States: (1) That "the Communists are Slavic followers of Thomas Jefferson." (2) "That they are military gangsters bent on conquering the world by force." (3) That they are "followers of a fairly consistent philosophy, which can be traced through Marx, Engels and Lenin."

The first view appears to represent the official party line as it was promulgated in the reign of Comrade Browder and popularized in the books of Mr. Howard Fast. The second view is being industriously advanced by many ci-devant Communists. The third view, held by Dr. Conant himself, is in our opinion nearer to the correct one, though it seems to us in need of some amendment. What most strikingly distinguishes communism from other radical political movements is not its dialectical materialism or the vision of the classless society, but rather its conspiratorial method of conducting the class war. This is not derived from Marx or Engels, but wholly from the Russian revolutionary tradition.

Mr. David Shub, author of a new and immensely enlightening biography of Lenin (Doubleday & Co.) calls attention to the influence on the mind of the founder of the Communist Party by the doctrines of two earlier apostles of revolution. One of these was Sergei Nechaiev, a follower of the anarchist Bakunin, who preached the abandonment of all moral considerations in furthering the revolution. Murder, robbery, deceit and even treachery, he held, are permissible means to the end.

The other teacher was Peter Tkachev, who proposed the seizure and retention of power by a revolutionary minority. "The capture of government power," he wrote, "does not constitute a revolution . . . The revolution is brought about by revolutionary government which . . . eradicates all the conservative and reactionary elements of society which hinder the establishment of equality and brotherhood . . . The revolutionary role of the people ends the instant they have destroyed the institutions which oppressed them . . . The revolutionary minority will then lay the foundation of a new and more sensible social order."

Mr. Shub's narrative of the events of the months following the October Revolution of 1917 shows how Lenin put these teachings into practice with a ruthlessness that staggers the imagination. The Theses and Statutes of the Third International show how they have been incorporated into the official casuistry of the party.

Congress And Court

An interesting controversy over the relation between the Supreme Court and Congress was aired in the opinions in the South Buffalo Railway Co. case handed down on Monday. Mr. Justice Jackson, speaking for Chief Justice Vinson, Justices Frankfurter, Reed and Burton as well as himself, refused to upset a 1936 decision of the court which the Department of Justice had challenged, because the 12-year-old decision had been considered but not disturbed by Congress. The minority, with Mr. Justice Rutledge as spokesman, vehemently contended that the court should take responsibility for correcting what it regards as the court's previous misconstruction of the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce Act, regardless of Congress' inaction.

The law in question provides that a railroad company may not transport any article or commodity in which it may have any interest, direct or indirect. The "old court" concluded that this did not prevent a railroad whose stock was owned by a holding company from transporting commodities of another company owned by the same holding company, unless the railroad acted as the alter ego of the holding company. If that case were before the present court "as a case of first impression," Justice Jackson wrote, "its doctrine might not now be approved. But we do not write on a clean slate. What the court has written before is but one of a series of events, which convinces us that its overruling or modification should be left to Congress."

This doctrine might result in undue rigidity if carried to extremes. The court hands down a vast number of decisions which Congress never has a chance to consider much less to correct if they depart from the meaning Congress intended to give its legislation. In this case, however, Congress did take up the issue. Some dissatisfaction with the court's ruling was manifested and the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce debated a provision that would have upset the court's 1936 ruling. Other related issues were involved in the proposed amendment, however, and it was eliminated before the Transportation Act of 1940 was passed. Whether this can be interpreted as a congressional determination to let the court's interpretation of the law stand brought sharp disagreement among the justices.

It seems to us, however, that the majority was well advised to resolve whatever doubts remained as to the intent of Congress in favor of upholding the court's previous view. There is much to be said for stability and continuity in the law. Courts have to remember that, however desirable it is to correct past errors and to make the law a living force, much overturning of past decisions detracts from the court's own prestige and leaves litigants in confusion. And that is particularly true when there is danger that the court may seesaw from one position to another by the slender majority of one vote.

Immigration Figures

The letter appearing in The Washington Post of April 19, signed by George W. Williams, is another example of how easily figures can be twisted to tell a distorted story.

The truth is—on the authority of Mr. Ugo Carusi, former United States Commissioner of Immigration—that "the largest number of immigrants to come to this country in any one of the last 15 years was 108,721 in 1946. The annual average in the last decade is 55,157, of whom the quota immigrants comprise 29,463 and the nonquota immigrants 25,694." This is quite at variance with the figure of 500,000 per year given by Mr. Williams.

When Mr. Williams talks about many persons entering the United States he includes—but naturally fails to say so—hundreds of visitors, diplomats, foreign students and others here legally but temporarily. Unless Mr. Williams has a crystal ball with built-in magic I don't know how he can predict that 150,000 of these persons "are to be in permanently."

Militant Foreign Policy

Just happening to be in Washington for the meetings of the American Society of International Law, I have read the column entitled "Man-Run Foreign Policy" by Malvina Lindsay on the editorial page of your issue of April 24. I also read the article entitled "Softening the Armed Forces" signed by U. Grant-Smith on the same page. The first is so right and the second so wrong that I feel impelled to make comment apropos of both.

I am one of the many men mentioned by Miss Lindsay who are deeply concerned over the bellicose talk attending our foreign policy. I am appalled that the professional poltroons who make up our military caste have so largely taken it over. The same insatiable men whose prestige and privileges depend on their succeeding in keeping us scared to death all the time so that we will appropriate more billions now bombard Congress with broadsides for bigger and better "defense" appropriations and Congress meekly submits, granting so many billions for war preparation that there are few of the millions necessary to maintain our first and best line of defense, which is the peaceful pursuit of statesmanship based on thorough knowledge of what is going on in the world. We of the ASIL are therefore told that essential sources of information in the international field cannot be brought up to date because the appropriation for collating and publishing them has been cut and the personnel necessary halved. That is a situation that is really frightening.

Can't Congress realize that the military are constitutionally unable to think of a peaceful world? Can't they realize that communism thrives on chaos and can only be stopped by calm, sane policies? Can't they realize that the funneling of most of our resources into the sewer of war will create the very lack among our population of the good things of life that will make a fertile field for the Communist propaganda of false promises of a quick and easy way to get them?

Instead, let's us all, both men and women, especially those on the Hill, be sane about this, stop thinking that there is a Commie under every bed, realize that when a military man asks for a huge appropriation he is a prejudiced witness, and let's settle down to the complicated and difficult but by no means impossible task of building a world based on informed and intelligent planning and practice of the arts of peaceful progress.

Stassen's Tactics

In replying to K. C. R.'s letter in The Washington Post of April 26 on Stassen-tactics, this is also a reply to Senator Taft who gave him his idea.

When the American people elect a man to the Congress or to a governorship is it cricket for him to spend most of his time campaigning for the Presidency or should he do what he is paid by the people to do? Mr. Stassen holds no office and is campaigning for the Presidency on his own time—his expenses paid by his own earnings and by small contributions from his adherents.

VIRGINIA WALKER.
Washington.

I was glad to read K. C. R.'s April 26 letter. The whole tenor of it characterizes Mr. Stassen's strategy in vote getting. An important question now is, who will choose candidates for President, the party voters or party leaders? If extreme leftists or third party candidates are to be avoided, the safest procedure would be to keep voters well informed, and choose well-qualified party leaders.

"Mothball" Fleet

Publication in your April 24 issue of an Associated Press photo of five of our biggest aircraft carriers laid up side by side will not tell foreign military attaches in this country anything they don't already know, but it may help open the eyes of the American people to the fact that the geniuses in command of the U. S. Navy have learned nothing at all from or since December 7, 1941.

Nonsegregated Schools

Since The Washington Post carried in its news columns rather thorough reports of the resistance of some St. Louis parents to the integration of colored and white children in the parochial schools there, it occurs to me that you might be interested in bringing your readers up to date. I should like to quote from an editorial which appeared recently in the Kansas City Call. The Call's comments could be applied so easily to the District of Columbia, that I need add no further comment.

"Contact between Negro and white students in Catholic schools in St. Louis has resulted in no disturbances that would cause opponents of mixed groups of pupils to say 'I told you so.' No instances of even minor friction have been reported to archdiocesan officials, according to a survey of the situation made by a St. Louis daily.

"While the number of Negro students in these schools are relatively small at present they are becoming active in school affairs. At one school two lads have gone out for the football and basketball teams. The welcome to these Negro students has been warm according to the principal of the school, Sister Clotilda.

"We might think the intermixing of Negro and white students in the Missouri metropolis would be questionable because the State law has always separated the race in public schools. Negroes are barred from theaters and most public places in St. Louis except in those buildings which are operated by the city government.

"Yet we find that the Negro and white school pupils in St. Louis can get along all right when those who are in charge are of the right temperament. The Catholic school authorities have looked for no trouble and have found none."

Art In International Affairs

It is too bad that the German pictures, which drew close to a million visitors to the National Gallery, should have to end their stay here in this country. During the time they were on display, I am sure they added something to our appreciation of the German character. Even though many of them were painted by non-Germans, the fact that they were acquired and appreciated by their German owners points up one of the finer aspects of the German personality, which has been little noticed during the war years.

The suggestion has been made that, even if these particular exhibits must go back, some other collection assembled in Germany, and other paintings from other countries be brought over here on loan. I think in this connection that it would be an excellent idea if our Government, for example, were to invite the Russians to send over some of their famous icons and other masterpieces for exhibition here. It might help to counteract the distortion of the Russian personality in our minds, which is now occurring, in part because of the artificially stimulated "crisis." Cultural interchange now might help to ease some of the Russo-American tensions and prevent war.

The letter of Hortense Amram, printed in your April 26 issue, was all I needed to give voice to ideas that have been building up in my mind through the controversy over the "German" paintings. There must be others who feel the same way.

Suppose you were born in Germany and have become a twice-defeated nation, with all the implications attached to the word "defeat." You and your people are divided up under the administration of four conquering nations. You are faced with the task of rebuilding that world through a haze of weariness and discouragement. On one side of you is a rising tide of communism; on the other side is democracy, and you are watching both to see what they have to offer. Now, whether or not you have any interest in art, you are watching a powerful democracy to see how it will react to the temporary loan of great paintings that have been in the custody of your country. Will they keep faith and return them as they promised?

And the act that Americans keep faith with your country, defeated and torn though it may be, in a relatively small matter of returning paintings, may give you a renewed belief in human kindness, and a desire to pattern your life and country along the "democratic way of life."

I doubt if Americans are fully aware of how closely our every thought and action is watched by Europeans. We are trying to help shattered nations rebuild themselves and are trying to sell them the democratic way of life. In my opinion the only way we can do that is to ask ourselves what it means—how it was conceived, what it stands for, the difference it makes between our everyday lives and that of the average European, and then live our conclusions to the fullest extent, whether in a matter of paintings or of politics.

Hopes And Fears

By Andre Visson

State of Uncertainty

THERE IS A growing belief in Washington that some softening of Soviet pressure is in the wind. There is a growing hope that the American policy of firmness and of supporting all the free nations that are determined to resist Soviet pressure, is beginning to pay dividends. But at the same time there is an equally strong fear that any apparent Soviet softening may prove to be purely an expedient. In other words, there is hope for the easing of the tension in which we have been living since last spring. And there is fear that such easing may not last long, and may even prove to be dangerous if it causes us to soften our counterpressure and decrease our vigilance.

This mixture of hope and fear is probably the very result which the Soviet policy-makers wanted to achieve when they started to wage their cold war against us and our friends in western Europe. As great wishful thinkers as they might be, they could hardly have hoped to achieve within the coming years the domination of the world by the spreading of communism in both hemispheres. On the other hand, forced to recognize their limitations as well as our military and economic superiority, they could not, and apparently still cannot, decide on a showdown which might lead them to ruin. But they seem to be convinced that they are strong and skilful enough to embarrass us, to shake us and maybe even to exhaust us by prodding, by needling and by obliging us to constantly guess when and where they will manipulate anew their infiltration tactics or concentrate their pressure.

THE RESISTANCE which their aggressiveness brought to life both in Western Europe—the Mediterranean region included—and in the United States, did not allow them to push the iron curtain westward. But they have succeeded in creating on our side of the curtain a most irritating state of uncertainty, from which Americans, strangely enough, appear to suffer more than western Europeans.

Western Europeans have been living with a feeling of uncertainty for the last few decades. For Americans it is a comparatively new feeling. Western Europeans realize that there is hardly anything that they can do to escape from the exasperating feeling of insecurity, so they try to adjust themselves to it psychologically as well as economically. But Americans cannot help feeling that they can put an end to this state of insecurity, so they try to adjust themselves to it psychologically as well as economically. But Americans cannot help feeling that they can put an end to this state of insecurity—or at least that if anybody in the world can do it, it is the United States. And this is perhaps why they suffer from it so much more than the Europeans.

There is no doubt that the Europeans are much more afraid of another world war than the Americans. But at the same time it seems easier for them to live with this fear than for Americans. This perhaps, explains why Americans are eagerly scrutinizing the clouded international skies, anxious to discover any advance signs of even the slimmest ray of sunshine to restore their traditional optimism and their innate faith in a better and happier tomorrow. The Europeans try to live without looking at the skies, as they know that if a thunderstorm breaks out now, there will be no refuge for them. Their military leaders have figured out that western Europe will need about four years to make up the 56 divisions indispensable for holding the Rhine line against an onslaught by the Red Army. Should this catastrophe come earlier, there is very little they could do. They would have to wait until they could again be liberated by the same Americans who liberated them in 1944 and 1945. And, of course, they could hope— and they do hope— that the striking power of the American Air Force, carrying atomic bombs and other even more destructive weapons, would be so great that it would within the first few days of the war destroy both the arsenals and the communication lines of the Red Army and paralyze its advance.

ANOTHER basic psychological difference between the western Europeans and Americans is that the government leaders and the press of western Europe, while less given than their American counterparts to anticipate good news, are not afraid to play it up once it is there. Western European leaders know that their people are so aware of living under the continually threatening shadow of the Soviet armies, that any good news can only increase their determination to resist. But in this country, when good news comes from Europe, many Government people are afraid that it may create a false feeling of security and therefore lessen the willingness of Congress to vote the billions of dollars necessary for national defense, and, especially, for Selective Service, without which this country cannot have an adequate ground force.

And the feeling of national responsibility for the fate of Western civilization being much greater in Washington than in the western European capitals, it is inevitable that American leaders should live in a greater state of tension than those of western Europe, and that the American press should reflect this state of mind, which is so shocking to many visiting Europeans who complain that we "want to infect them with war hysteria."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Benelux Has Tipoff We'd Fight

By Drew Pearson

THORNIEST question facing western European diplomats is: "Will the United States back us up militarily if we resist future Russian aggression?"

For several weeks the White House and State Department have stalled on giving Europe a firm official answer. Not so the Defense Department. Within the last few weeks the Army has secretly answered European diplomats with a vigorous "yes."

Here's how it happened:

Several months ago Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg sat down with France and England to organize a five-power agreement to resist Russian aggression. It took plenty of nerve to defy Russia, and before negotiations were concluded Washington was informally sounded out. The United States, they were unofficially informed, favored such strategy.

This agreement was followed by the visit here of Belgium's Prince Charles and Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak. By this time Spaak wanted more than informal assurances. He wanted specific guarantees from President Truman of military and lend-lease support for the "Benelux countries." Cautious Mr. Truman and the State Department failed to come through.

The five Western powers have quietly gone ahead on their own. They have set up a tight military liaison committee in London, and are working out a coordinated military strategy to meet all emergencies.

And while the State Department was still trying to clear a mutual aid program with congressional leaders, the War Department deftly took the bull by the horns and secretly concluded an agreement.

Few people realize it, but there are several hundred important British army and navy officers working full time in the Pentagon. They are members of the old war-time combined Chiefs of Staff which has never been officially dissolved.

Therefore it has been quite easy for American Army men to hold candid conferences with top French, Belgian, Luxembourg and Netherlands officers. They have already done the paper work which would precede the signing of any alliance. Once the green light comes from the White House, the plan will go into high gear at once.

Note—What the Benelux countries chiefly want is a new lend-lease act which would standardize military equipment and provide new arms for Europe. Truman, however, is awaiting a new "crisis" before asking for that.

Not-So-Private Stock

COACHED by the big distillers, Army brass hats have worked out a neat trick to evade the law and keep officers' clubs well stocked with liquor.

The law banning liquor in officers' clubs is explicit: "The sale of or dealing in beer, wine or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange or canteen or . . . upon any premise used for military purposes by the United States, is prohibited."

This is how many officers' clubs get around it:

An officer is appointed to handle liquor consignments on an individual basis. He takes orders from individual officers who pay in advance. The liquor is delivered directly to the club, where it is kept for the members. In this way the drinks technically are not sold across the bar, but are drawn from private stock.

This has the added advantage of circumventing taxes that would be charged if the club were selling liquor outright. Actually the drinks are iced and served just as in any cocktail lounge. Only difference is that the liquor supposedly was purchased by the individual, not by the club.

This scheme was worked out with the help of distillers' salesmen who visit Army posts to solicit business.

CIO Massing for Eisenhower

TWO POLITICAL phenomena are now taking place simultaneously in the Nation. President Truman is moving heaven and earth to secure his own renomination, but his Gallup Poll rating continues to drop. General Eisenhower continues to discourage his nomination, but his popularity continues to increase.

A lot of interesting backstage figures are behind Eisenhower, one of them being CIO President Philip Murray. Murray has just sent out word to every CIO steelworkers' local suggesting resolutions for a "Draft Eisenhower" movement. The steelworkers' convention will go on record unanimously asking Eisenhower to run, and a similar movement is under way in most other CIO unions.

Murray also held an important secret conference in Pittsburgh with Illinois Democratic Boss Jack Arvey. Arvey has been drafted by Illinois Democrats to run their political fortunes until after the presidential elections, and he agreed with Murray that the Democratic Party's hope lay in nominating Eisenhower.

Though he hasn't been talking much Arvey has been a very busy beaver. He was principally responsible for the violent anti-Truman demonstration at the California Jefferson Day dinner, when Truman was booed so vigorously that Chairman J. Howard McGrath almost quit talking.

Also active in the draft-Eisenhower drive is former Roosevelt labor adviser Anna Rosenberg. Mrs. Rosenberg is a close friend of Eisenhower's, also of Phil Murray, George Allen, Mrs. Roosevelt, the Rockefellers and many former New Dealers. Although she denies it, Mrs. Rosenberg has had several talks with Ike, has told her friends she's convinced he is available for a genuine draft.

Eisenhower's supporters are ignoring all of the general's protests about his candidacy. They're convinced that if a genuine draft movement develops, he will accept the nomination.

Why Sullivan Gave Up

RESIGNATION of Gael Sullivan from the Democratic National Committee was inevitable. Only a few insiders knew it, but Truman barred him from the White House two months ago.

Sullivan was always getting in his hair, fighting over Palestine, for labor, against cartels. His departure means he thinks those fights are hopeless.

Sullivan worked day and night for the Administration, led the life of a monk socially, studied like a schoolboy to make Government wheels turn more smoothly. He was an FDR favorite and was forced on Truman by Bob Hannegan.

It has never been a secret that Sullivan was a Justice Douglas man. When he was named Assistant Postmaster General, he even insisted that Douglas swear him in.

When the Ed Pauley grain speculation investigation started, Truman called Sullivan to the White House, asked him if he was in the market.

"Mr. President," replied Sullivan, "you flatter me. I've never had a dime besides my salary since I've been in politics."

The Vitamin Mystery

By Alton L. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Editor

AMES, IOWA, May 1.—Scientists are beginning to lift the curtain of mystery as to exactly what happens to the vitamins you eat and what they do.

The new knowledge may aid in understanding such diseases as rheumatic fever and high blood pressure. It shows that some diseases and even changes in food habits can increase your need for certain vitamins.

The facts are hard to get because human chemistry is so involved. One important clew, said Dr. Robert R. Sealock, Iowa State College biochemist, came from Europe in studies of Addison's disease.

This is a chronic weakening disease, usually fatal, and in it the skin turns bronze color. European investigators found that doses of vitamin C cleared up this discoloration. It didn't improve the other symptoms of the disease.

The color was due to melanin, a skin pigment which in smaller quantities is sun tan. The disease victims had too much melanin.

Dr. Sealock found that melanin was formed because one important chemical, tyrosine, wasn't being used properly. It's one of more than 20 amino acids from which all proteins are made.

Lack of vitamin C, he showed, broke the chain of steps in the body's use of tyrosine. One of the broken links formed a substance that produced the melanin.

Scurvy Preventive

A PRACTICAL use for this finding was discovered by Dr. S. Z. Levine of Cornell University Medical Center. Premature babies, fed on cows' milk, developed symptoms of scurvy. The cows' milk has more of the tyrosine than mothers' milk. The larger amounts of the tyrosine meant more vitamin C was needed than the babies received in their diet. Dr. Levine gave the premature babies more vitamin C, and they then could take the cows' milk without the threat of scurvy.

Other discoveries followed. At New York University, Miss Ella Fishberg found that in a certain fairly rare disease, something is in the blood which decreases its oxygen-carrying capacity. This something proved to be one of the broken links from insufficiently used tyrosine. When victims of the disease received more vitamin C, the condition was remedied.

Some children with rheumatic fever were also found to excrete this same substance from tyrosine because of a lack of vitamin C. The disease may increase the need for vitamin C, Dr. Sealock said. The discovery may supply a clew to one of the factors in rheumatic fever.

The tyrosine-vitamin C relationship also is suspected of some possible influence in high blood pressure. There is evidence that other products from the tyrosine have some tendency to boost blood pressure. Lack of vitamin C, in such a case, might be a predisposing influence to increased blood pressure. With greater intake of the vitamin, the undesirable substance is no longer present. This question still is being studied, Dr. Sealock said.

If you change suddenly from a diet with low protein to one of high protein, your body again needs more vitamin C for good health, he added. The vitamin researchers now are trying to determine just how much vitamin C is needed with different protein intakes due to different food habits, and in various diseases.

A test of the theory that chronic alcoholics are the victims of an allergy which makes them abnormally sensitive to alcohol is being undertaken by Dr. Walter L. Voegtlin, of the University of Washington medical school. If research supports the theory, it is expected that it may be possible to produce an anti-alcohol serum.

Preliminary investigations will be made with rabbits to determine whether a specific substance is formed in the blood by alcohol—the presence of which can be detected by a microviscosimeter invented by the late Lecomte du Nouy.

Matter of Fact

Stassen 'Victory' Possible Slap

By Joseph Alsop

IT was the heroine of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" who first gave voice to the wisest rule of our time: "A kiss on the wrist feels very good, but a diamond bracelet lasts forever." After the Pennsylvania primary, Governor Harold Stassen must be reflecting in much the same way on the difference between flattering write-in votes and the capture of good, solid, obedient, sheep-faced delegates, who have good, solid, permanently valuable qualities.

The available evidence, in fact, suggests that the Pennsylvania primary's appearance of being a Stassen victory was distinctly misleading. Stassen led the Pennsylvania write-in vote by a handsome margin, but if 20 per cent of the rumors flying out of Pennsylvania are correct, Stassen has actually suffered a serious setback behind the scenes.

A rumor which will serve as a sample is a report that an agreement has at last been reached between Gov. James H. Duff, Senator Ed Martin and old Joe Grundy. These three potentates are reliably stated to own a larger proportion of the Pennsylvania sheep-herd than any of the rival ranchers, including Joseph Pew.

According to the rumor above mentioned, Duff, Grundy and Martin have agreed that their Pennsylvania sheep will baa for Governor Duff as a favorite son on the first ballot, for Senator Martin on the second ballot and for Governor Dewey on the third.

Avoids a Showdown

THERE are several points in favor of suspecting that there is some color of truth, not perhaps in the detail, but in the general implications of this story.

In the first place, the Duff faction and Grundy-Martin faction have been engaged in a long struggle to gain control of delegates, in which the Grundy-Martin forces are believed to have got the edge on the forces of the Governor. Thus Governor Duff would be inclined to reach agreement, if only to avoid showing his own inferior strength.

Then, too, the agreement reached promises two sops to Governor Duff. He would get the fleeting prestige of a favorite-son vote. And if Dewey should be unable to make the grade on the third ballot, Pennsylvania's vote for Dewey would create a situation favorable to the nomination of Senator Vandenberg, whom Duff has openly favored from the first.

Significantly, the report of the Duff-Grundy-Martin deal reached Washington prior to the polling in Pennsylvania. Thus it cannot be regarded as a mere tale invented to explain Duff's odd post-primary statement. Yet Duff's pooh-poohing of Stassen's showing in the write-in vote, and his kind words for Dewey and Vandenberg fit neatly into the pattern.

Whether or no the rumor of a Duff-Martin-Grundy deal is correct, Duff's statement must be regarded as indicating hostility to Stassen and a friendship toward Dewey which he rather markedly did not feel only a few days previously. The position of Joseph Pew is still uncertain, but there can be no doubt that Martin and Grundy feel even more hostility to Stassen than does Duff.

Giants Are Lining Up

THE inference must be drawn, therefore, that Pennsylvania should be tentatively classified as, in majority, a stop-Stassen delegation. Smashing Stassen victories in Ohio and Oregon may, of course, upset this classification. But with Pennsylvania even tentatively added to the list of giant stop-Stassen groupings—Illinois, New York and most of Ohio—the Minnesotan's task now looks harder than it did a week ago, not easier.

Every inducement, every temptation, is of course being offered to men like Duff to join the great stop-Stassen combination. Other indications that the combination is being formed are also at hand. The Taft people are asserting that in order to swell Senator Taft's first ballot strength, Illinois will go for their hero on the first roll call at Philadelphia. It was to reward Gov. Dwight Green for giving up his favorite-son honors that Green was given the post of keynoter.

The Dewey supporters rather markedly failed to resist the Taft-sponsored selection of Green (a notable specimen of the drearier kind of Old Guard Republican). And in this, of course, Dewey looked toward a combination with Taft.

Altogether, the stop-Stassen movement seems to be beginning to make progress. Perhaps even the most complete victories in Ohio and Oregon will not carry Stassen through.

"The voters," say the Old Guardsmen, "do not control conventions." But this piece of political wisdom, always enunciated with the smuggest complacency, is surely also a form of criticism of those who repeat it.

The Gallup Poll

Truman-Stalin Parley Favored

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

ALTHOUGH President Truman said recently that he would not go out of the United States to meet with Stalin, a substantial proportion of American voters think that an international meeting of the heads of the major nations is worth trying.

They feel that some compromise or settlement of differences might be achieved which would make peace less doubtful than it seems to be now.

Interviewers put the following question to a cross-section of voters:

"Do you think it would be a good idea or a poor idea for President Truman to call an international meeting with Stalin and heads of other nations to work out more effective plans for peace?"

The vote:

Good idea	63%
Poor idea	28
No opinion	9

Those who said it would be a good idea to hold such a conference were asked:

"Do you think we would be successful in coming to an agreement with Stalin?"

While the answers are not particularly optimistic, more people say they think some agreement could be reached than say the effort would be a failure.

In actual percentages, only about one-third think it would not succeed. But judging by their answers to the first question, even these doubters think a meeting would be worth trying, on the chance that something useful would come of it.

The vote of those favoring meeting:

Yes, think meeting would succeed	34%
Qualified yes	5
	39%
No, think meeting would fail	35%
No opinion	26

Among the qualified answers in favor, the chief reservations are, "If we send the right people to the meeting," and, "If we handle ourselves properly at the meeting."

Mr. Truman has said that he would welcome a visit from Stalin to the United States. His statement started fresh speculation as to whether a meeting might be held.

Some commentators have claimed that, in view of the anti-American, anti-Truman propaganda carried on inside Russia by the Kremlin, Stalin would be unlikely to favor a meeting with Truman at this time.

When American voters were asked to give their reasons for favoring, or opposing, an international meeting, those expressing themselves in favor said mainly that it might help prevent a future war, and that a chance to exchange views in person might lead to better understanding. Those opposed to the meeting said, "Stalin won't cooperate, can't be trusted," and "We've tried meetings before and they turned out badly in the end."

Addicts Artful With the Needle

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP).—Ever try to take a hypodermic injection with a toothbrush, a fountain pen, an automatic pencil or an eyedropper?

These improvised syringes are among the contraband devices surrendered by addicts entering the Public Health Service narcotics hospital here for cure.

The handmade syringes include one hollowed out of a toothbrush handle, connected at one end with an ordinary needle and at the other with an eyedropper bulb. An automatic pencil point became the needle of another after a vein had been opened to admit its entry. A pen point and rubber sac were used in the same way.

Bottle nipples and rubber-glove fingers were made into bulbs of other makeshift syringes.

The display also includes examples of methods used in extremely rare cases to smuggle narcotics into the hospital. One outsider attempted to mail morphine in a valentine to a prisoner-patient.

Berlin Isn't Really Squeezed Yet

U.S. Colony Relives Summer of '39

By Sonia Tomara

BERLIN, May 1.—You must not think that because the Soviets have decided to squeeze us out of here we are suffering any hardship. It may come yet, but so far the American colony is as comfortable as it used to be.

One hears arguments that after all we are trapped here like monkeys in a cage, that the Soviets can put more and more squeeze on us, that the power plants are in their hands and that they can starve the two million Germans living in the three western sectors if they choose to do so.

Then again we learn that General Clay is perfectly quiet and determined to stay and for several days no bad news comes. Hearts soar and plans are made for summer vacations. Women dependents and employes flock to the Army clothing store and buy the long-awaited material to make flowered summer dresses out of German silk sold for dollars.

THUS LIFE goes on almost as usual, as it did in the summer of 1939. But there is the same feeling of uncertainty about the coming day as there was on the eve of World War II. We are not short of food. For a few days fresh milk did not arrive from Denmark and fresh fruits stopped coming from Italy and Turkey. Women rushed to commissary stores and bought as much canned food as their ration books permitted. Then the current supply of goods was restored.

There is a lot of freight accumulated in the warehouses of the American sector: furniture of people going home or moving out of Berlin into the zone and thousands of packages with antiques and knickknacks, chiefly china cups and figurines, acquired by Americans here either legally at the official barter market in exchange for food or clothing or illegally in German shops. Everybody is now in a hurry to send possessions home before it is too late.

Status Dangerous

WHETHER we shall stay here or move westward, nobody can tell yet at this stage of the game. Common sense would indicate that in the advanced stage of hostility now existing between the Soviets and the West, it is dangerous to keep some 9000 Americans, of whom about 3000 are women and children, on a bridgehead lost in the midst of Soviet-occupied territory. Everybody knows that this small American colony cannot be protected by troops stationed here if a conflict should break out.

But nobody can believe that the Russians would want a conflict. I remember only too well, however, that in the summer of 1939 we hoped that Hitler would not start war because it would be too destructive. Today, again, our hope lies in the belief that human beings cannot want the destruction of our civilization.

It must be said to the credit of Americans stationed in Berlin that they are viewing their fate without any feeling of panic. The Russian pressure on us has brought no stampede, and even General Clay's offer to ship dependents home at the Government's expense caused the departure of some 50 people only. Some of them were due to leave soon anyway. Determination to stay here is due to several causes: People have great confidence in General Clay and think he can handle the situation.

Life Not So Hard

Some are unconscious of the danger and don't want to leave good jobs and comfortable living conditions. Most of the civilian employes working in Berlin could hardly expect to find at home the comfort they enjoy here. Each family has a house with a garden and two or three servants. There is little to spend money on, but this permits saving against darker days. It would be unfair to say, however, that most Americans are staying here out of base motives. Many believe that we should uphold our prestige and stand by the Germans who have chosen our way of living and need protection against Communist dictatorship.

In a way we are guinea pigs for a worthy cause, and we are proud of being this. If we yield to fear and leave Berlin we shall shatter the hopes not only of the Germans but of most Europeans that the West can stand up against the East and that the individual freedom of man must and can be defended.

Much more than the security of some 9000 Americans is involved in this war of nerves. The resistance to force of many millions of people depends on our sturdiness.

The Soviets know this, of course, and this is why they are so anxious to break our will. We are not yet at the end of the battle. We shall not win if the power of the United States is not thrown fully behind us.

Past, Present Compared

Baltimore Show Meets a Challenge

By Jane Watson Crane

TO MEET a challenge flung down by the people of its own city, the Baltimore Museum of Art has assembled a show of painting and sculpture inviting comparison between past and present. Without laboring the point, the aim is to demonstrate that there is an underlying continuity.

The exhibit is divided into broad subject categories—portraits, animal studies, still lifes, figure compositions, landscapes, and architectural views. But the stated aim is not to emphasize the importance of a subject—quite the contrary. The idea is to stress the individual approach of the artist, to show how differently similar subjects are treated. Adelyn Breeskin, the director, brings this out in her catalogue foreword. Unless the visitor starts the tour thus primed, the main point of the exhibit is lost.

The superficial similarities between works of various times and places are easy to detect. A series of elongated portraits of gentlemen with oval faces, most of them with goatees, does not prove the continuity of art. But when we observe that a Fayum portrait of the first century A. D., a Venetian gentleman in profile by Titian, portraits by El Greco, Marsden Hartley, and Modigliani, and a symbolic study by Rouault, each bears evidence of the painter's license taken to accentuate what he sees as the essential key to the character of his subject, we are beginning to get at what the artist, and incidentally the Baltimore Museum is after.

An Aztec, a Flanagan

Likewise when we see how a natural rock formation has been made to take the shape of a living animal by the hand of an Aztec sculptor or the twentieth-century John Flanagan. Whether a still life is a representational arrangement by the eighteenth-century painter, Chardin, or a near-abstraction by the contemporary, Braque, in each case the intent of the artist is to use his material as point of departure for a successful composion. The Renaissnace artist Laurana uses linear perspective to achieve an orderly architectural study, while the twentieth-century de Chirico is intent on creating a mood of nostalgia with similar technical means.

Formal, imaginative, and highly expressionistic approaches to landscape are shown side by side in one of the galleries. A Chinese painting can live quite happily with a Cezanne study of Mont. St. Victoire; the Ryder and van Gogh are preparation for purely personal interpretation, but even so, the German contemporary landscape of the Alps by Kirchner comes as a shock. Struggling to recover from an illness that was to prove fatal, the artist projected his inner emotional turmoil on the scene before his eyes. So great is the impact of this work, executed in oranges, pinks, and purples, that one spectator at least found it impossible to view it tranquilly as a study in relationship to the more impersonal surrounding paintings.

Many Superb Entries

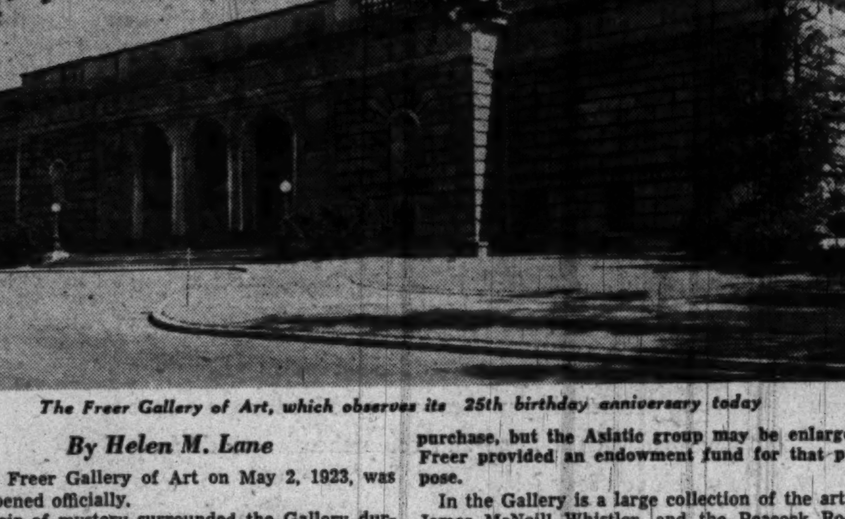
UNLESS a museum has almost inexhaustible resources, there is always some difficulty in getting topnotch examples in every case to fit the need at hand. The Baltimore show suffers to some degree in this respect. But weaknesses are offset by a number of superb entries, either borrowed or available in the museum's own collections. The neighboring Walters Gallery has lent early Egyptian and Roman, and later Greek sculptures, a fifteenth-century Flemish lectern, and other valuable contributions, including a landscape by the English artist, Turner. The Cone, and other private Baltimore collections are represented. From Washington are several paintings lent by the Phillips Gallery, also oils and sculpture from American University. The Kirchner comes from the Detroit Institute of Arts, and the ingenious ever-popular moving "Dog on a Leash" by the Italian Futurist Balla, from a New York collection.

All-in-all, the Baltimore Museum has gone to considerable trouble to present a provocative show, carried out in response to public demand. It has stirred considerable interest, here as well as in the neighbor city. It is offered to those who, in the words of the director, can find "the precious ore of all great works of art" in the new as well as in the old, to those who respond to the approach of the individual artist, regardless of time or place or prejudice.

The exhibition, entitled "Themes and Variations in Painting and Sculpture," will continue on view at the Baltimore Museum in Wyman Park until May 23.

Famed for Its Whistlers

Freer Marks Silver Anniversary



The Freer Gallery of Art, which observes its 25th birthday anniversary today

By Helen M. Lane

THE Freer Gallery of Art on May 2, 1923, was opened officially.

An air of mystery surrounded the Gallery during the months that the exhibits were being prepared. No outsider had been permitted to view the collection until the day before the opening, when a press view and a special preview for guests were held.

In 1904 Charles Lang Freer, Detroit manufacturer, offered his art collection to the United States with the stipulation that he retain the collection during his lifetime and make additions to it—the gift to be under the management of the Smithsonian Institution.

Congress, after two years and considerable debate, accepted Freer's offer. In 1915 Freer waived the right to retain the collection and gave a million dollars for the erection of a building. Because of the war the Gallery was not completed until 1921. Freer died in New York City about 18 months before it was finished.

Study of a Hobby

FREER had devoted a great part of his time and interest to the study and development of his hobby. Freer's home in Detroit (he was a bachelor) became the depository of his large art collection.

There are two principal groups in the Freer collection, Asiatic art and paintings by American artists. By terms of the gift, the paintings by American artists are not to be added to by further purchase, but the Asiatic group may be enlarged. Freer provided an endowment fund for that purpose.

In the Gallery is a large collection of the art of James McNeill Whistler, and the Peacock Room was decorated by Whistler. The room was decorated for the home of Frederick R. Leland, an English shipbuilder. Freer purchased it in London for $63,000 and had it shipped to America. At first, it was in an especially built room in his Detroit home and later was moved to the Gallery in Washington. The Peacock Room, at present, is closed for repairs.

Ancient Culture

THE art in the Asiatic wing of the Gallery tells of an ancient culture. There are Greek Biblical manuscripts that date back to the 5th and 6th centuries; beautiful bronze ceremonial vessels, bells and weapons—some dating from the sixth century B. C.; colorful Persian bookbindings; Chinese paintings, sculptures and porcelains; jade ornaments and magnificent Japanese screens.

The Freer Gallery is a handsome building of granite, designed around an open court centered by a fountain and pool. In season the court is gay with flowers and the beauty of boxwood, yew and holly. Wisteria, superb in color, and trumpet vines reach high on the walls.

The Gallery is open every day except Christmas from 9 to 4:30. It stands on the Mall, west of the Smithsonian Building.

Russian-Born Shahn Paints Like an American

NEW YORK, May 1 (U.P.).—Ben Shahn, the painter, was born in the ghetto of the Russian town of Kovno. The wall around the ghetto aroused in him a burning curiosity about the world beyond it. Within the wall, life fluctuated between hope and fear. Hope and fear breed compassion.

Curiosity and compassion were the provisions little Ben carried with him some 40 years ago when his parents took him over the seas to the land of liberty.

Here, in the United States, he grew up in freedom and opportunity. He studied and went abroad and saw what painters did in France, in Italy and in Spain. He learned their technique, but he didn't follow their paths.

Here he was, an American, looking for something big to paint. Something that would satisfy his curiosity and his compassion. He was searching for the great, human drama.

"I had seen all the right pictures," he said, "but it still didn't add up to anything. . . . I like stories and people. The French school is not for me."

Curiosity and compassion goaded him to paint always new themes of the drama; the Negro's devotion who gathers cotton as if it were manna, the textile worker's skill and inventiveness, the striker's somber obstinacy, the lonely dreariness of the small child playing in the vacant lot in the big city.

Then came war and destruction. Compassion and curiosity have driven Shahn back to Europe, to Italy, where almost no fallen stone has merely common meaning. There his pictures achieved an almost romantic intensity, a poetic strength and a peculiar beauty.

New Exhibits On Calendar This Week

NEW shows in Washington include a selection of paintings from the recent Maryland Artists Annual, opening this afternoon at Watkins Memorial Gallery, American University, and shown with a group of drawings by Pietro Lazzari, of the art faculty. Impressions of the local scene will be seen in a new display at the Whyte Gallery, 1518 Connecticut ave. nw. Opening tomorrow at the Pan American Union is an exhibition of paintings by Lasar Segall of Brazil.

On the heels of the announcement of the closing of the gallery of Bush and Weeks came news of a new gallery to be located in the Playhouse, 727 15th st. nw. The first in a series of exhibitions to be held at the new motion picture theater comes from Portraits, Inc., of New York, an organization dealing in commissioned works.

The Bush and Weeks closing is a matter of deep regret. Tastefully arranged for showing painting and sculpture, the little gallery on the balcony of this jewelry design firm has held a notable series of exhibits throughout the season.

THE retirement this month of Jeremiah O'Connor as curator of the Corcoran Gallery of Art removes a familiar and respected figure from local art circles. For 20 years he has occupied this post, always helpful and patient with those who came to him in search of information. Friend of many artists, he frequently enlivened a Corcoran visit with anecdotes about them. He has profound admiration for the art of the past, based on his studies and travels in Europe, but views with skepticism much of the work of the contemporaries.

Hartley Shows Joy of Life in N. Y. Exhibit

NEW YORK, May 1 (U.P.).—In the domain of politics the globe seems to be too small for two worlds. In the field of art, more worlds than could be listed conveniently live peacefully along New York's 57th st. alone.

We see at Bertha Schaeffer a world of youth moving toward maturity: "Marsden Hartley before 1932." As his colors are crystallizing and his shapes shift into their plastic space, his world is seen advancing toward greater harmony and simplicity.

The American master's joy of life contrasts with Egon Schiele's macabre vision (at St. Etienne). In the Austrian expressionists' weird world, death lurks behind every shape. His canvases hint to some close connection between his spirit of despair and the gifted artist's untimely death.

At Lilienfeld, Vlaminck's landscapes and still lifes mirror the brooding moods of a romantic soul. The Flemish origin of the artist is more apparent than his French schooling. He is a good craftsman who likes to repeat the same moods and to meet the same problems with the same solutions.

German-born George Grosz exposes modern slavery in his "Gray World" (Associated American Artists). Philip Evergood castigates the "War Mongers" at ACA. Both use painting for the conveyance of political statements rather than for the expression of artistic ideas.

John Ferren, who has made his way from non-objective painting to the abstractionists, shows some pictures of real spontaneity at Kleemann.

At Carlebach, Sari Dienes exhibits her expertly done surrealistic fantasies.

Picture Story of Bible

Nashville, May 1 (AP).—Mrs. Thomas Farmer has completed 10 years of work which produced a picture story of the New Testament. The books, all hand painted with hand-lettered Bible quotations, will be used for the Bible education of her four small children. Mrs. Farmer has been totally deaf since she was a baby.

The Magazine Rack

—By Katharine Graham—

A GOVERNMENT radio program is proposed in the Ladies Home Journal by Jerome H. Spingarn in, "Is Your Radio on Now?" Like the rivers, Spingarn reminds us, the air belongs to the people, and if, as polls show, private enterprise has failed to give an adequate range of choice, its time for the Government to step in.

The Federal Communications Commission tried to improve things with its "Blue Book," which charged that many radio stations were not living up to their responsibility to provide public service and threatened not to renew licenses in those cases, but after a brief storm the commission dropped what turned out to be a hot potato.

As regulation by enforcement has failed, regulation by competition should be attempted, Spingarn says. He suggests three channels for simultaneous transmission throughout the country: One for information and education; one for light music, and a third for classics of music and drama.

Along with the controversial Spingarn proposal, the Journal prints comment by other individuals. Columnist John Crosby points out that private broadcasting would never relinquish the frequencies and that public support for such a program would not be strong. "The only way to get good daytime radio," says Crosby, "is to heckle the commercial interests to the point where they provide it."

WILLIAM L. LAURENCE, topflight scientific reporter for the New York Times, paints the rosy possibilities of peacetime life with atomic energy used to abolish disease and poverty, anxiety and fear, in the Woman's Home Companion. We are standing at a major crossroads where the world will be forced to choose between "Paradise or Doomsday?" he adds.

A college for women of 40 and over is proposed in the same issue by James M. Wood, former president of Stephens College for Women and now president of the Women's Foundation, Inc. This great reserve of 15 million women is now going to waste, says Wood.

Women could easily apply the knowledge they have acquired from raising families to community and national problems, but too often they are content with study or discussion of problems and shy away from action. They need to be trained and taught, but for this a new educational institution is required, Wood thinks.

NEWSWEEK devotes a generous part of its press section to The Washington Post's Cartoonist Herblock, calling him "the hottest editorial page cartoonist since the rise of Daniel R. Fitzpatrick on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch." His barbs are tempered by a quiet sense of humor that can make his victims laugh even when he makes them look silliest, says Newsweek.

WHAT happened to the women and children of Lidice? Shortly before the recent Communist coup in Czechoslovakia, Joseph Wechsberg of the New Yorker returned to the scene where in 1942 S. S. troops and Gestapo men erased an entire village.

Of the 203 women who were sent to concentration camps all over Europe, 50 died of torture and mistreatment. One hundred and forty-one have come back to live in the nearby coal mining town of Kladno. Only 16 of the 105 children have returned to Czechoslovakia. The rest are unaccounted for. In a moving piece of reporting, Wechsberg describes what happened to one family.

Peter Arno has what might be called the final word on the Kinsey altercation on p. 25 this week.

LOCAL newspapermen and bigwigs will note Look's story on the Gridiron Club by member Richard Wilson, chief of Look's bureau here. So great is the tradition and sentiment surrounding the club, says Wilson, that "grown men shake visibly and have been known to weep upon being elected president, though this honor usually comes in time as a matter of seniority."

"LITTLE DONALD TOOK AN AXE," or "What Not To Do With Child Criminals," are the title and subtitle of an attack on the present care and treatment given delinquent children, by Robert E. Coulsen in Harper's. We have gone too far with probation, forgiveness and psychiatric care in our treatment of juvenile delinquents, the Illinois authority charges. The problem is growing worse and "seems to increase in direct proportion to the amount of sociology applied to it," he contends.

"We have a punishment society, and the child should be prepared for this," he states. "Give him probations again and again, give him psychiatric care, new environment and all—but always warn him that if he persists in his misconduct he will be punished."

Richard H. Rovere puts "The Unassailable Vandenberg" on the griddle this month, and Merle Miller traces the rise of that great American phenomenon, the Book Club.

New Stimpson Book Covers Broad Field

INFORMATION ROUNDUP by George Stimpson. Harper & Bros. $3.95.

GEORGE STIMPSON has written another of his incomparable information books.

The first in his latest series was "A Book About the Bible;" the second, "A Book About a Thousand Things."

These two comprehensive works would have contented an ordinary man. George Stimpson, however, is no ordinary man, and he well knows that the questions that arise in the minds of men, women and children, are without number. (And he well may be glad of it, too, for there is no reason to suppose that even George Stimpson ever will get them all answered and there thus always will be occasion for another book of questions and answers).

These books are not to be compared with any other encyclopedic or informational volumes. He dares to wander about in the field of knowledge without guide or chart, order or discipline. He brings up questions just as they arise and he answers them as he brings them up.

He is not to be imprisoned in stone walls, iron bars or alphabetical sequence. Readers will search in vain to discover why he asks on page 172: "What is a smock marriage?" and on page 173: "What was Tom Thumb's real name?" Nor will they find a reason for the next question: "Why is a patrol wagon or prison van called a Black Maria?" They won't find it because there isn't any reason. He rightly reasons that questions do not come to a man in the sequence of the letters of the alphabet.

Index Well Handled

FOR ORDERLY drudges whose minds are disciplined by filing cabinet rules and classes and categories there is an index. It is grudgingly included, but it is a good one.

The book itself is like a conversation. It is not only like a conversation, it is like the conversation — the conversation around Stimpson's luncheon table at the Press Club and his dinner table at Sholl's Cafe. I never have been at his breakfast table, but no doubt the situation is the same there.

This volume is especially handy in a campaign year. Here are some questions the answers to which many an officeseeker will wish to know: "How can a person blow both hot and cold?" "What does forlorn hope mean?"

A little later in the campaign, a lot of candidates will wish to know the answer to the question: "Do rats instinctively quit an unseaworthy ship?"

It will also be interesting, some time in June, to know: "How did throwing up the sponge originate?"

The answers—you'll find those in the book, along with a lot more questions and answers. And no doubt, about the time you have finished the questions in this book, George Stimpson will be along with another batch of them. People just will ask tough questions—and George Stimpson just as inevitably will answer them.

British Rule Praised in India Study

TUMULT IN INDIA. By George E. Jones. Dodd, Mead & Co. 277 pp. $3.

"TUMULT IN INDIA" is a factual account of the events which took place on the subcontinent in the climactic years of 1946 and 1947, with particular attention to the course of Indian politics. George E. Jones relates Ghandi, Nehru, and Jinnah, as well as lesser Indian leaders, to the conflicts that are sweeping India, and from observation and interview presents the human frailties and the great qualities of leadership in these men.

Writing with the sustained vigor of a newspaper correspondent, Jones conveys the full dramatic excitement of a vast conflict which involves diverse cultural backgrounds and religious beliefs, as well as varied and exceedingly practical considerations.

His account of British rule in India is consistently favorable. Occasionally he actively defends the British administrators against implied or expressed criticism. "Within the limits of its imagination and vision," he writes, "it (British Rule) did a creditable job."

The weakness of all attempts to analyze India's troubles after short term observation is the failure to understand fully the pervasive and tenacious influence of Hindu traditions. The religion of contemplative passivity and inward search is foreign to the Western mind, and full appraisal of the psychological force of centuries of escapist appeal is difficult. Quite naturally Mr. Jones seems more at home in writing of Islam, a positive religion of action, dominated by strict and simple dogma.

Nevertheless, he approaches the complexities of Hinduism with full realization of the profound influence which the religious chasms wield in the political life of India.—S. M. McM.

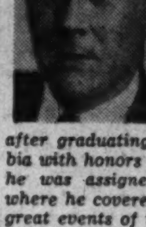
West Is Watching De Gasperi Reforms



Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., who wrote this story on European economic reform, had almost 12 years of foreign correspondence behind him when he came to The Washington Post in 1946 to report foreign affairs.

He started as a cub reporter for the New York Times after graduating from Columbia with honors in 1925. Soon he was assigned to London, where he covered many of the great events of the decade before the war. During one of those years he was president of the Association of American Correspondents in London.

He interrupted his newspaper work with five years of Government service in Washington, first as assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, then as deputy director of the overseas branch of the Office of War Information, and finally, for a few months, in temporary charge of all the State Department's information and cultural work abroad.

As a staff reporter for The Washington Post he covered two United Nations Assemblies and was sent to Moscow last year to report the meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

could do little until he was stronger.

But they knew also of the bitter poverty of the Italian farm workers, especially in the bare and rocky soil of the south. They watched the Communists promising to break up the estates, and garnering peasant votes, during this and previous election campaigns.

So the Government here has tried—too discreetly, perhaps—to stress American interest in social reform, in a higher standard of living for farmers and in stronger organization and benefits for trade union members.

Restore, Then Divide

EARLIER this month the State Department joined the Interior and Agriculture departments in sending two experts to Italy to study the possibilities of land reclamation and improved land use, as a prelude to giving the farm workers their own land.

It is not as easy in Italy as on the fertile plains of eastern Europe to carry out land reform by administrative decree. In Hungary, Romania and Poland the Communists have shown great energy in splitting up the old estates, at the price of political liberty.

But in Italy much of the land is stony and poor; energetic irrigation, reclamation and soil conservation are needed if the farms are to be split up into smaller units.

That is where American aid, through the Marshall Plan, can make it easier for De Gasperi to do what he has promised. Supplies direct from the United States—fertilizer, farm implements and electric power equipment, among other things—will give indispensable help.

Big Operating Fund

MOREOVER, Italy will be obligated, under the plan, to set aside a huge fund of lire equivalent to the value of its free gifts from the United States. In the first year of ERP alone, Italy will get about three quarters of a billion dollars in outright grants.

This gigantic sum in Italian currency is intended chiefly to check inflation, but it can be used for other purposes to be agreed upon between the Italian government and ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman. Undoubtedly some of it can pay for the labor and locally obtained supplies needed for reclaiming marshes, for irrigating parched soil, and for developing the land to feed Italy's overcrowded and hungry population.

De Gasperi himself said on April 22 that it was useless to give land to the landless peasants unless reclamation first made it capable of bearing crops. The disposition in Washington is to agree with him, and to take him at his word.

Rich Feeling Burden

IN OTHER fields the De Gasperi government has made a start toward meeting social discontents. The rich, with their palaces on Capri and their motorboats on Como, are beginning to bear their share of the cost of national reconstruction.

The capital levy imposed in Italy last September is being collected, according to reports reaching Washington, and taxes are rolling in from wealthy Italians who seldom, if ever, paid taxes in full before. The same story, incidentally, is coming from France, where tax collection has been a national disgrace for generations.

Perhaps it is too early to say that western Europe is developing the new spirit which the Marshall Plan was designed to evoke and encourage. But there are many signs of it, in the financial and social field in each country as well as in the more spectacular work of inter-European cooperation.

Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, as the American emissary to the 16-nation organization at Paris, can help keep the Europeans to their pledges, and so can his 16 "economic cooperation officers" in the respective countries.

But in the last analysis it will be up to the western Europeans themselves, and to their elected leaders. "We are not reactionaries," said De Gasperi the day after his election triumph. "Every social reform which has been promised will be made."

If this is western Europe's spirit, and if the promises can be kept, officials here are sure the fight against chaos and communism will be won.

Sea Slugs Get Hirohito Touch

TOKYO, May 1 (AP).—Emperor Hirohito, whose literary efforts turned to poetry a few months ago, has authored a book.

It is a monograph about his hobby—a sea slug, called by the Japanese "sea cows."

Dull though the book may be to Caucasians, its 80 pages will be highly illustrated with mollusks the Emperor has been collecting in research.

At best, the book's circulation likely will be limited to Japanese—and a few occidentals interested in sea slugs, which at best are wormy whether eaten or viewed in illustrations.

A Great Internationalist

Spirit of Editor Dafoe Captured in Little Book

By J. R. Wiggins

JOHN W. DAFOE, by G. V. Ferguson. Ryerson Press, Toronto, Canada. 127 pp.

THERE is a lot more about a man and a country in this short book than commonly is to be found between the covers of a single volume.

One day there will be a definite biography of the great Canadian editor whose editorials in the Winnipeg Free Press so often influenced governmental action at Ottawa. There are, of course, more complete works on Canadian affairs. In this little room, however, there is packed a great deal of richness.

Here is the real flavor of Canadian politics from 1885 down to 1944. Here is a glimpse of the spirit of a man who surely was Canada's greatest editor and who certainly has a place among the greatest editors of the Western Hemisphere.

Winnipeg to the uninitiated might seem a strange environment for a great internationalist. It would be the uninitiated only who would think so. Winnipeg is a city that is filled with persons having an internationalist outlook. Maybe Winnipeg got that way because of Dafoe; or Dafoe got that way in part because this capital of an inland wheat empire looks to the world for its outlets.

Had Wide Outlook

IN EITHER case, Dafoe and his community had the wide outlook of a community aware of the oneness of the world long before Mr. Willkie expounded that doctrine. This is the more remarkable in that Dafoe had to fight so many provincial causes—the Hudson Bay railway, lower freight rates, the St. Lawrence Seaway—interests that Western Canada shared with Western United States.

Dafoe fought stoutly for these western ends. But it was his larger interest in and knowledge of the world that brought him stature in his own country and among the editors of the world. At the Versailles peace conference, he added to his grasp of international affairs.

The period between the wars was not better understood by any man in Canada or the United States. The voice he raised against isolation and unpreparedness in the Dominion was as lonely as that Churchill raised in England. He saw clearly what was coming and tried vainly to rouse his countrymen to the dangers ahead.

G. V. Ferguson, the author of this appreciation of Dafoe, was the old editor's good right arm in the later years of Dafoe's regime at Winnipeg. None living knew him better or is better equipped to do a summing up of his career. It is the kind of book that every editor would wish to deserve.

The Lit'ry Life

Like Celebs? Well, Have A Cocktail

IF A person accepted all the invitations he gets to literary cocktail parties in New York, he would be in a sad state of disrepair seven days a week.

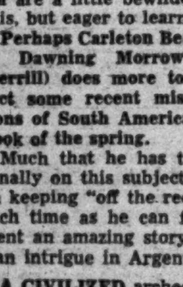
He would also meet in a month's time almost every living American author, publisher, historian, folklorist, literary agent and film producer, plus a few baseball players, aviators and other citizens interested in literature, dry martinis, or both.

One of the liveliest parties of the season was for a bright and brave young woman, Betsy Barton, author of "The Long Walk," a compassionate novel whose setting is a veterans' hospital. Betsy, who does her writing and entertaining from a wheelchair held her own conversationally in a group which at one time or another during the evening included John Gunther, the Luces, the Lindberghs, Alan Lomax and Alberta Hannum (who sang some unscheduled folksongs), Bernardine and Harry Scherman, Bruce Barton, Gene Tunney and perhaps 30 others.

But the competition is terrific. Babe Ruth, coauthor with Bob Considine of "The Babe Ruth Story" (Dutton), will have most of the sports celebrities who can read and write at his party at the Skyline Roof. The Babe's previous literary efforts have scarcely gone beyond autographing baseballs.

At the other extreme, those who will come to meet Dumas Malone, author of "Jefferson, the Virginian," are practically assured of meeting Douglas S. Freeman, Carl and Mark Van Doren, Senator Thomas (Utah) and "about 400 other authors, educators, book critics and librarians." Meet them, that is, for the fifth time in as many weeks.

BOGOTA POSTSCRIPT—So many American authors have been rolling down to Rio and reeling back again, that every third man you meet can explain exactly what happened at Bogota, why the Communists will (or won't) prove a major menace in South America; why Brazil may eventually be the most powerful nation in the world; why we have misjudged Peron (who is now being touted by certain liberals as the most progressive dictator in South America); how sinister oil interests start and end wars in South America at their own convenience; and why South America will (or won't) be our most important ally in the long struggle against Russia.



BEALS

Simple souls who pretend no special knowledge of South America are a little bewildered by all this, but eager to learn the truth.

Perhaps Carleton Beals' "Lands of Dawning Morrow" (Bobbs-Merrill) does more to help correct some recent misinterpretations of South America than any book of the spring.

Much that he has to say personally on this subject he insists on keeping "off the record" until such time as he can fully document an amazing story of American intrigue in Argentina.

A CIVILIZED archeologist and his wife are Samuel and Eleanor Lothrop, home from their diggings in Costa Rica for the publication of Eleanor's book "Throw Me a Bone" (Whittlesey). Their apartment high over Central Park is filled with Mayan and Aztec objets d'art, many in carved stone and a few in gold.

Mrs. Lothrop's best and raciest story deals with the difficulties they had digging a pit for an outdoor Chic Sale accommodation in plumbingless Central America. Three times they dug, and each time found priceless bones, pottery or other archeological loot, which, of course, meant more digging of an entirely practical and mundane nature for the chambre de necessite.

The fourth "dig" was more fortunate. Not a bone. Not a shard of pottery. The little building went up and life became suddenly simpler and a bit more civilized.

PEARL BUCK will celebrate the tenth anniversary of winning the Nobel Prize with the publication of her new novel, "Peony" . . . John Erskine's autobiography, "My Life As a Teacher," will suggest a very different "universal training program"—not a hurried preparation for war but a rich, civilized democratic preparation for peace.

Experts Study Le Corbusier As Architect

LE CORBUSIER. Edited by Stamo Papadaki. Macmillan. 152 pp, Ill., $7.50.

STAMO PAPADAKI, a Greek third-generation architect now working in the United States, presents what is in effect a one-man show of Le Corbusier between covers.

Since Charles Edouard Jeanneret—better known by the pseudonym "Le Corbusier," first used in 1920—is primarily an architect, the most attention is given to this phase of his activities.

In addition to reproductions of his work in the fields of the family dwelling, furniture and house equipment and major buildings, there is an essay on his place in modern architecture by Joseph Hudnut, dean of the Harvard school of graduate design, another on Le Corbusier's influence in furniture design by S. Giedion of the Harvard faculty, and another by Fernand Leger, who worked with Le Corbusier in the use of color in architecture.

Also Town Planner

LE CORBUSIER as a town planner also receives attention, including an essay by J. L. Sert, another authority in the field.

Le Corbusier's work as an architect is more or less familiar, but where Papadaki's book gains novelty is in his presentation of the Swiss architect as a painter.

This phase of Le Corbusier's work, which in the early days paralled that of Ozenfant, is little known in the United States. Papadaki gives it generous attention and James Thrall Soby adds a brief, informative essay.

Selections from Le Corbusier's didactic writings, biographical notes, and chronological list of major projects are among other features of the book.—L. G.

See Here, Citizen Hargrove

Famed GI Finds Peace Wonderful

By Sterling North

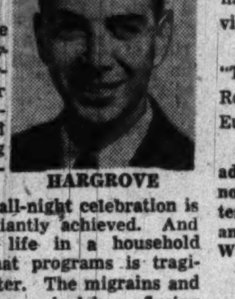
SOMETHING'S GOT TO GIVE. By Marion Hargrove. Sloan Associates. 312 pp. $3.

MARION HARGROVE, home from the war which made him famous, wants nothing but peace, domestic felicity and a chance to do some writing far, far from the world of hucksters and microphones. He has a wife, two small children and a country home near New York City.

I suspect, therefore, that his character Joe Dobbs is more or less Citizen Hargrove, though he might at times be Chuck Bartlet. Both these former GIs are refugees from the radio chain gang. Both have wives and babies. Both want to write what they want to write when they want to write it.

As the story opens, Joe is making a modest living grinding out detective fiction while Chuck labors to sell short stories. Their cars are old but not yet falling to pieces. Their roofs shed the rain. They are in love with their wives and as contented as men can be in the atomic age.

This situation obviously cannot last, particularly when their respective spouses, Carolyn and Betsy, get the utterly feminine notion of a woman-to-woman, let's-talk-babies radio program.



HARGROVE

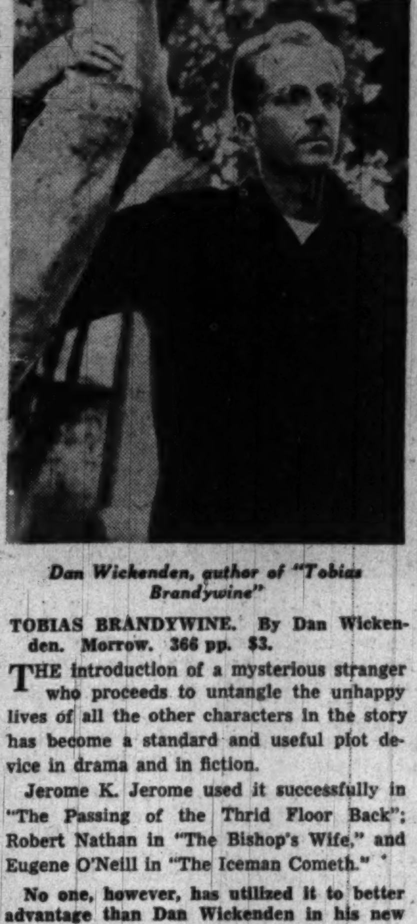
The general idea is that both young mothers spend hours every day twittering about their young in any case. Why not air their chatter and be paid handsomely for it?

From here on the story becomes increasingly amusing. Hargrove has a gift for writing warm believable conversation and concocting convincing and often hilarious situations.

His reporting of an all-night celebration is high level satire brilliantly achieved. And his dramatization of life in a household turned over to chitchat programs is tragicomedy of the first water. The migrains and ulcers from which the men had been fleeing come right in the front door and make themselves at home. Wealth does not bring happiness nor fame euphoria. Sponsors prove once again to be four-letter words. The two previously contended couples are soon living in continuous and public chaos.

"Private" Hargrove has been criticized for making the war seem lightly amusing. He will now be criticized for making the peace seem pleasantly inconsequential. Deep world problems and the suffering, striving and philosophizing of tortured humanity are not Hargrove specialties.

But it is pleasant for a change to read about people who are happily married, who are not whining, cheating, conniving, or acting like fugitives from a sanitarium for the criminally insane. That there still are a few brave, decent, reasonably congenial people on the planet comes as a distinct surprise to an inveterate reader of modern fiction.



Dan Wickenden, author of "Tobias Brandywine"

TOBIAS BRANDYWINE. By Dan Wickenden. Morrow. 366 pp. $3.

THE introduction of a mysterious stranger who proceeds to untangle the unhappy lives of all the other characters in the story has become a standard and useful plot device in drama and in fiction.

Jerome K. Jerome used it successfully in "The Passing of the Thrid Floor Back"; Robert Nathan in "The Bishop's Wife," and Eugene O'Neill in "The Iceman Cometh."

No one, however, has utilized it to better advantage than Dan Wickenden in his new novel "Tobias Brandywine." The title character makes his standard entrance half-starved and freezing at the rococo mansion of Senator Windrow in a town called Wanhope (Penn.?).

He is fed and put to bed in the sacrosanct room where President Cleveland once slept. And from that moment forth, the Windrows have a guardian angel.

The eccentric, tyrannical old Senator acquires in Tobias a tender nurse and companion.

Cedric, a dominated son, acquires a friend and adviser who eventually helps make a free man of him, shunts him off on a Mexican tour and gives him the courage to at least acquire a wife.

And Tobias does much for all the other characters:

He helps make an actress out of 50-year-old Emmy, the Senator's unmarried daughter.

He helps straighten out the lives of Anna, the Senator's third unhappy child, and her rather dull husband George.

But his greatest contributions are in guiding the teen-age youngsters of Anna and George; introspective, literary-minded Gladys and slovenly, brooding Scotty, both of them unloved by their parents and miserable with their personal problems.

In a deft, warm, civilized, amusing family chronicle which runs the gamut of domestic frustrations in a typical small town of the late 1920s and early '30s, the author has let Tobias Brandywine work his pleasant miracles.

And into Brandywine's diplomatic guidance of the young girl novelist, Wickenden has woven his philosophy of writing plus his theories of progressive education—a charming series of episodes completely realized and dramatized.

There are, perhaps, a few too many pages in the book. And possibly Tobias Brandywine is too selfless and too consistently successful in overcoming the ever-more-difficult complications of character and plot.

But taken as a whole the story is delightful, disarming and enjoyable.

It would be unfair to reveal who Brandywine is and why he acts as he does. Gladys thinks he is a werewolf. And he does seem a trifle fey. But the explanation when it comes is more satisfying than such explanations usually are and much more believable. Excellent entertainment.

THE SHOESTRING SYMPHONY. By David Broekman. Simon & Schuster. 247 pp. $2.75.

IN THIS fabulous country, where a heavyweight prize fighter with the brains of a gorilla can make as much as half a million on a single fight, where no self-respecting horse will race for a purse of less than $25,000, where brewers and brokers and baseball players have no trouble at all earning folding money, a serious composer or painter or poet can easily starve to death.

David Broekman, composer of two American operas ("Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Bride"), two symphonies, a ballet suite, a violin concerto and hundreds of hours of music for major films, here reveals the shocking manner in which we treat our serious musicians.

Broekman has a wry sense of humor. He seems to think this scandalous situation is amusing. He makes his semiautobiographical story (of how he wrote his "Shoestring Symphony" on $2 a day) sound hilarious to any superficial reader.

But poverty is never amusing, except perhaps in retrospect. And abuse of artistic talent is never funny at any time. A little of the real heartbreak shines through even the bravest pages of the story.

Nobody in recent years has captured so neatly the reptilian life of Hollywood, where even a bankrupt composer is worth cheating. Two such parasitical mountebanks proceed to defraud the struggling musician in an elaborate deal which deprives him of 50 per cent of his symphony.

America prides itself upon its pragmatic attitude toward life. It glories in Production with a capital "P." It worships monetary success. And it pays a composer $50 for his symphony which may have taken two hungry years to compose.

Next time you hear someone taunting "the longhairs" of music, suggest that they read "Shoestring Symphony."

'Great Books' Study Forum Proves Popular in New York

By Judith Crist

NEW YORK, May 1.—Culture seeking though the sound, the average citizen yearns not only to give an affirmative answer to the cliche, "Read any good books lately?" but also to launch into a discussion of them. Almost 75 per cent of the 600 persons enrolled in the "Great Books" courses offered by 29 branches of the New York Public Library, a sample survey indicated last week, have joined the groups "to discuss good books with other people."

More than 200 participants of the bi-weekly courses given in 13 libraries offered anonymous replies to questionnaires distributed by the library.

After giving their sex occupation and educational background they checked one or more of six suggested reasons, or gave their own for enrolling in the group, gave their reactions and interests.

The groups are discussing the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth books of the 18-book October-through-May course, studying respectively "Hamlet," Montaigne's "Essays" and Locke's "Of Civil Government."

Enrollment Reasons

SOME members had joined for all of the six reasons suggested. Some checked three or four reasons, some only one, and others gave their own. A total of 138 had enrolled "to discuss the books with others;" 89 "to fill in gaps in formal education;" 84 "to improve ability to understand and reason clearly;" 82 "to achieve increased ability to read and discuss clearly;" 52 "to satisfy curiosity about a much-discussed form of education," and 45 "to establish systematic reading habits."

Educators may be jolted by the fact that most of those seeking to supplement their formal education were college students, college graduates and some who had done graduate work.

A housewife, a statistician and a teacher, all of whom had master's degrees, were in this group, as were a laborer, a secretary and an interior decorator, none of whom had gone beyond elementary school.

Ideas of Geniuses

MANY students had reasons other than those listed. A 28-year-old secretary said bluntly, "To meet people," "To meet people of cultural tastes," a teacher in the group meeting at the central branch, 42nd st. and 5th ave., amplified.

A middle-aged businessman joined, he said, "to read the original ideas of geniuses." "I was interested to know how other people thought about the books on the program," a 46-year-old civil servant explained. A saleswoman, aged 60, said, "I joined partly out of boredom with many modern books."

Many of the men and women merely noted, "Personal pleasure." A woman editor had enrolled "to blow off steam and meet people doing the same." "To stretch my stagnant mental muscles," a teacher declared.

Perhaps most rewarding to the sponsors of the "Great Books" project was the flat agreement of 175 students that the ideas in the books were "pertinent to modern issues and modern thinking." Fourteen felt they were partly so and only two felt they were not at all.

Equally encouraging was the declaration by 157—or 75 per cent—that they would enroll in the group next fall. Thirty were undecided and nine sure they would not.

Official History Of First Cavalry

"The Foist is always first," calmly announced a Brooklyn member of the First Cavalry Division after it spearheaded the capture of Manila. The division repeated its primacy by being the first United States forces to enter Tokyo. There the public relations department refined the Brooklynese into: "The First Team—first in Manila, first in Tokyo."

The official history of the division gives an excellent account of its entire role in World War II—the Admiralties, Leyte, Luzon and Japan.

The history was printed in Japan "under difficult conditions." It contains a detailed history of the division's activities compiled by Maj. B. C. Wright, as well as extensive photographic coverage.

Tolstoy's Private Diary To Be Shown to Public

London, May 1 (U.P.)—Leo Tolstoy's private diary, letters and other papers and manuscripts never before released will be displayed to the public at the Tolstoy Museum this year, Radio Moscow announced.

An exhibition, commemorating the 120th anniversary of his birth, will include "new variants" of his novel "War and Peace," based on the original manuscripts, the broadcast said.

The museum's archives, it said, contain 150,000 pages of Tolstoy's papers.

Trapdoors 'n' Everything

THE MOTE AND THE BEAM, by Percy Winner (Harcourt, Brace; $3.)

If you really hanker after melodrama, here is your dish. Telling the story of the forces of good and evil at work in France around the start of World War II, it reads like an opera plot: A eunuch, a mystic, a ghost, a girl who dies for love, a dope peddler-spy, murder, torture, orgy, saintliness, deviltry and practically everything except giants, dragons, trapdoors, steam curtains and of course music.

Bonus Story Sends a Call Down to Us

ANOTHER SUCH VICTORY. By John D. Weaver. Viking Press. 250 pp. $2.75.

IT WAS another war and another army, that John D. Weaver recalls in his novel, but today's pessimistic will find chills in "Another Such Victory."

Weaver tells the moving story of the Bonus Expeditionary Force's march to Washington in the depression days of 1932.

Full of hope the economically depressed veterans of World War I and their families came to Washington singing:

"My bonus lies over the ocean,
My bonus lies over the sea,
When Hoover comes back from his fishing,
He'll bring back my bonus to me."

Instead of the bonus, the unarmed veterans got bayonet and tear gas, were burned out of their Anacostia hovels and dispersed by the Regulars under Douglas MacArthur.

Washington's chief of police, Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, emerges well in the novel, focused through the eyes of an unemployed newspaperman, his wife and daughter, but the book is not likely to be included in General MacArthur's campaign literature.—L. G.

Pentagon Set Taken Apart In 'Everybody Slept Here'

By Lee Grove

THE accent is on "Everybody," says Elliott Arnold, referring to the title of his new novel of wartime Washington, "Everybody Slept Here."

And so it would seem, at a first casual rifling through the pages, for there is enough sex to keep even the drowsiest hammock reader awake.

There is a motive for it, however, beyond the all too frequent mercenary one.

Arnold, one of God's angry young men, has used sex as a bait for his trap. He wants his portrayal of the Pentagon set read.

"It's a morality story," he says earnestly of his tale of shoddy politicking, loose morals, and scrounging among Army brass. "Everybody gets what he deserves in the end."

Depth of Feeling

SO they do, and, as in life, the reader is apt to regret it in instances. For what begins as a brittle impalement of gaudy worms mellows as the book wears on, improving in depth of feeling.

The only really repulsive creature is the female manager of the apartment house with her grasping for bribes and attempt at blackmail, while the portrayal of a happily married couple is perhaps the most sympathetic and idealistic to appear in a recent novel.

With "Everybody Slept Here," a cycle has come full swing: where once a moral ending was tacked on a "daring" story as sop to the conscience, now a moral story has sex laid on to get itself read.

Arnold, 35, on the wiry side and with the quick nervous energy that goes with it, has expressed the impatience of the veteran who saw overseas the macrocosmic with those who saw only the microcosmic.

Not an Expose

"I don't want this book regarded as an expose," he says, however. "I was in the Army three-and-a-half years and I never met a crook.

"The fault is with the way we do business. Washington was full of fixers. You could get Scotch, hotel rooms, or anything by pulling strings or knowing those who could.

"Wartime Washington was like champagne to people yanked out of the country. They never wanted the war to end. To be plunged into this parasitical society made everyone coming back mad.

"Everyone" includes Arnold, who served in both the European and Asiatic theaters as well as in Washington, admits to being a natural born crusader.

Arnold's father was a singer at the Metropolitan Opera and a poker companion of Caruso. Presumably it was this parental influence that has inclined the son to music and at the moment he is working on his eighth novel—based on the life of Sigmund Romberg.

Combs Writers

Milton Crane has combed the writings of Dos Passos, Thurber, Steinbeck, Sandburg and others for selections reflecting the temper and flavor of the times. The result is a remarkably well integrated picture of the era just past. The book is appropriately entitled, The Roosevelt Era (Boni & Gaer, $4.75).

Old Story: Shortages

High Cost of Living Due Soon for New Ascent

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

COMPLICATED figures just released by the Federal Reserve Board and the Department of Commerce carry storm warnings for housewives who are already having trouble making both ends meet.

The story is just more of the same old thing: Shortages. We want more than is being turned out.

The possible dynamite under prices lies in three new large sums about to go into circulation: (1) Money "saved" because of lower income taxes, (2) increased installment payments, (3) increase defense appropriations.

Taxes have been cut $4,800,000,000. Much of that tax cut went to working families who are expected to spend it instead of save it.

Americans are expected to go on the cuff for at least $3,200,000,000 worth of goods this year. They'll get them through installment buying and through charge accounts. That's the amount they went on the cuff for in 1947, and the rate was rising rapidly at the end of last year.

That kind of buying dropped off through the war because there were Government controls on it, but Congress let the controls go in November. Immediately there was an upsurge.

Armed Force Spending

WAR clouds have forced the Government to talk of spending more for the Army, Navy and Air Force. At first it looked as though the military services could get along on $2,250,704,300 more this year than last.

Even so, that would have meant so much more money competing for steel, woolen yard goods, leather, autos. But now there are plans to increase that by another three billion dollars. Whether it's two or five billions that the services have to spend this year, it's all new money bidding for what American farms and factories turn out.

Together those three figures add up to between 10 billion and 13 billion dollars of new spending this coming year, depending on which sum you bet on for the military.

There have been flurries of lower prices which gave rise to hopes among the majority of Americans that live on weekly pay checks. The most dramatic was the February downward skid of food prices. It didn't last long. Most of those skids had started to climb back up by March.

Anyway, those food prices were only part of the picture. The important figure to consider is how much money mills around daily through the stores and banks. It is now around 28 billion dollars. Economists call that "money in circulation." Add another 10 billion dollars to 13 billion dollars and you've got a lot of money bidding for the same amount of goods.

Low Unemployment

ALL through last year only some two million people were out of work. That doesn't mean all of them were out of work all year. It just means that in any given month that many were hunting jobs or "between jobs."

All through 1947 the numbers of people at work hung close to 60 million and their numbers are going up. This January 1,759,000 more people were at work than last January.

Business itself was so optimistic that in 1947 more than 200,000 new concerns opened shop. During those 12 months only 3476 concerns failed, the lowest number since 1871.

The President's three economic advisers have just come out with a second statement that there must be "stand-by" machinery for price control and rationing when goods get too short, or prices get too high, for everyone to get a fair share of what American farms and factories turn out.

This proposal has met plenty of opposition in Congress, where many members argue that the only way to keep factories and farms humming is to let prices go where they will so there will be plenty of "incentive" to keep working.

There have been some rather faint suggestions that, to get over the hump, America should junk the 40-hour week for a while and turn out enough goods to bring prices down.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, proposed the idea, with the addition that time and a half be paid for all over 40 hours a week. Some industrial leaders agreed with the general idea but wanted to pay straight time. The idea bogged down.

A Columnist Heads Family Parley Here

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

THE National Conference on Family Life, which will report to President Truman this week on problems facing the American family, has as its coordinator a 44-year-old educator and newspaper columnist.

OSBORNE

He is Dr. G. Osborne, a tall, lean man with thick dark hair and eyebrows and a brush mustache, who writes "The Family Scrapbook" which appears daily in The Washington Post.

His columns hammer home the theme that democratic family life is the best route to family compatibility. He believes that children should help select their clothes, should help decide where to spend the summer vacation and should even sit in on discussions of the family budget.

Where father or mother rules, the child is apt to grow up without a sense of responsibility and with no knowledge of the complexities of a modern society, he feels.

Fit the Deed

DR. OSBORNE, who has three children of his own, says that discipline is a process of teaching for the parent and learning for the child. The old-fashioned spanking is not the solution.

If young Tommy breaks a window playing ball, it is far better than a spanking that he pay for it out of his allowance. And he should be the one to go to the hardware store and contract for the work.

Dr. Osborne counsels parents to have patience when the offspring wants to help around the house. Of course, mother could peel the potatoes a lot more quickly by herself, but while little Mary is "helping" she is also learning responsibility and good work habits.

Truman Invitation

FOR 20 years Dr. Osborne has been studying and lecturing on family life in this country and abroad.

Before joining the faculty of Columbia University he was a recreation club and camp director, and he has been consultant to a number of national youth organizations, including the Girl Scouts and the YMCA.

He is an advisory editor of Parents Magazine, is chairman of the editorial advisory committee of Childcraft and has conducted a weekly radio program for parents for three years.

The conference which he heads will discuss all phases of family life from housing to legal problems.

The conference was invited here by President Truman, who will address a session at 12:30 p. m. Thursday in the Departmental Auditorium. Two meetings of the three-day conference will be held in the East Room of the White House.

The opening session at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Departmental Auditorium, and meetings at 8 p. m. Thursday and Friday and 9 a. m. Saturday in Lisner Auditorium, will be open to the public. More than a thousand delegates will participate.

Siamese Noisy At Eclipse Time, Chasing Demon

WHEN IT'S eclipse time in Siam, stuff cotton in your ears.

As soon as the sun starts darkening in the May 8-9 eclipse, long-standing tradition decrees that the people begin beating vigorously on gongs, drums, pans or anything else that makes a racket.

Purpose of all this din, notes the National Geographic Society, is to make sure that the sun doesn't vanish permanently with the eclipse. According to Siamese folklore, an eclipse means that a green-faced sky demon named Phra Rahoo is making one of his periodic attempts to swallow the sun god, Phra Athit. The noise-blitz is designed to scare off the green-faced monster before he can accomplish his nefarious aim.

Phra Rahoo, so one story goes, has been a bad actor from the beginning. In the dawn of time he outraged the gods by slaking his thirst at their sacred reservoir of nectar. One outraged deity cut Phra Rahoo's body in two for the sacrilege, but the drink from the reservoir had made the green monster immortal.

Now Rahoo is supposed to rove the sky in his bipartite fashion and, whenever the opportunity offers at eclipse time, he tries to gulp down the sun or moon in revenge. The noisy reaction such efforts produce, however, appears to have balked his digestion to date.

The society's expedition, headed by Dr. C. H. Smiley of Brown University, which will study the eclipse from a point outside Bangkok, doubts that Rahoo's swallowing act will succeed this time, either. However, expedition members expect things to be a little on the noisy side.

Saigon's $20,000 A Day No Gamble

SAIGON (AP).—Legalized gaming has returned to Saigon and the large Chinese city nearby, Cholon.

The concession to operate the games of chance was awarded by the provisional government of Cochin China to a syndicate of Chinese for a daily payment of 262,000 Indo Chinese piastres (about $20,000 U. S.). The syndicate also operates the largest dance hall and amusement park in Cholon.

One Saigon newspaper, the French language Le Populaire, protested the award, asserting it was made only two days after bids were called for and that sufficient time was not given to groups interested in submitting proposals.

Half World's Corn Crop Is Off U. S. Cobs

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

THE United States produced almost exactly half of the corn grown in the world last year, or 2,400,952,000 bushels compared with a total of 4,830,000,000. China was the second largest producer, with 285 million bushels, one million ahead of Argentina.

Many 4-H Club members are raising rabbits as a club project, the Agriculture Department makes known. Boys raise them for food and pelts. Most girls raise Angora types, shear them, and use the wool in handicraft work.

* * * *

After experiments with more than 5000 types, the Georgia Agricultural Experiment Station came up 10 years ago with Coastal Bermuda grass—a distinct "find" for cotton belt farmers.

It is now grown widely in States as far North as Kentucky and West as far as eastern Texas and Arkansas. A native of South Africa, it has yielded up to nearly 7 tons of hay an acre, with protein content up to 14 per cent. As pasture it produces almost twice the gain on beef cattle as common Bermuda.

The tremendous growth of cold storage locker plants, particularly cooperative plants, has upset all methods for determining how much meat is in storage in the country. There are nearly 10,000 cooperative plants in addition to many thousands of commercial plants. Livestock is slaughtered, cut, wrapped, frozen and cured. The dressing and freezing of poultry are gaining rapidly, Agriculture reports.

* * * *

Meat experts at the Department of Agriculture view the current price relationship between corn and hogs as forecasting still further drops in swine numbers next fall. The hog-corn ratio on April 10 stood at 8.6 to 1—in other words, the market price for 8.6 bushels of corn was equal to that for 100 pounds of live hogs. Hog raising is considered unprofitable when the ratio falls below 11 to 1.

From 1936 to 1946 the average egg production of layers has increased from 121 a year to 155—more than 28 per cent.

Hybrid tobacco, to breed into domestic plants the resistance of wild tobacco to "wildfire" disease, has been developed at the plant industry station at Beltsville, Md. The breeding was particularly difficult because of the difference in the number of chromosomes in the cells; wild tobacco has five pairs and cultivated tobacco 12 pairs.

Mechanization of the Nation's farms has released 90 million acres of farmland, formerly used to grow feed for horses and mules, for use in growing human food. This largely provides for the increase in human population in recent years.

* * * *

One reason for the continuing surplus in potato production in this country has been the improvement in seed—particularly in development of disease-resistant types. Certified seed is credited with the tremendous increase in yield. In both 1946 and 1947 crops were nearly a third larger than in 1944 and 1945.

* * * *

Foreign countries, particularly Canada and Australia, are importing seed potatoes from the United States. One variety developed at Presque Island, Me., but not used in this country, has been found highly satisfactory in Canada, Canadians suggesting naming it Canus—for both countries. Argentina also is experimenting with American varieties.

* * * *

The Department of Agriculture is experimenting with planting white pine seeds by air in the forest areas in Maine burned last fall. The seeding is attempted just before a snow, so that the seed may sink down into the ground before being destroyed by birds and squirrels.

Maryland and Virginia are two of ten States reporting more cattle and calves on their farms this year compared with a year ago. Twenty-eight show declines.

* * * *

In contrasting wheat production in the United States with other wheat-exporting countries, the Agriculture Department recently pointed out that in recent years Kansas alone has produced more than either Australia or Argentina.

* * * *

More than six billion baby bees will be shipped into northern States this year, the Department of Agriculture predicts—the largest such shipments in history. They are shipped by the pound from breeding areas in the southernmost areas of the country—ranging from 3400 to 3500 bees to the pound. Many also will go to Canada.

An attendant goes with each shipment to supply the bees with sugar and water sirup. Sometimes queen bees are shipped separately for breeding purposes.

YEARS ago, plant scientists at Beltsville discovered that chrysanthemums could be forced to bloom early by shortening the day—cutting off the sunlight with black cloth. Now fur-breeding specialists have found that "primeness" of fox skins—the stage of best market quality—is influenced by light exposure.

Fox fur is normally prime in December. By herding the animals into a darkened shed before sunset in late summer and early fall, the fur becomes prime at an earlier date—and ready for market at the height of the season.

(One hundred years ago, the Associated Press came into being. Here an Associated Press staff writer gives vignettes of a few of the memorable events in which the world's foremost news organization has figured.)

DAVID HALE, coowner of one of New York's six newspapers, stood aggressively before nine men, most of them bitter rivals. It was early May, 1848, and Hale was talking about peace.

Why not, he proposed, cooperate in gathering the news outside the city? In that way the six could take full advantage of that new invention, the telegraph, which was so expensive.

Later that day, the 10 walked out of the offices of the New York Sun, members of a new cooperative newsgathering organization. They called it the Associated Press . . .

IT is April, 1865, and an anonymous AP agent cools his heels on a dusty road near Appomattox. He watches General Grant and General Lee leave a house. Then he races away to send to a weary Nation the word that civil war has come to an end . . .

A Superfortress roars high above the Japanese army base of Hiroshima this day of August 5, 1945. Hours later, from the White House, AP Reporter Tom Reedy bulletins the words of the President of the United States:

"The force from which the sun draws its power has been loosed against those who brought war to the Far East."

(News is the death of a man . . . The birth of a phrase . . .)

IT is a quiet evening. AP Reporter Stephen Early sits by a closed door of the Palace Hotel on this August 2, 1923. The door flies open and a white-faced woman cries, "Call Dr. Boone; call Dr. Boone!"

Minutes later Early is dictating the flash over the telephone: "San Francisco—President Harding dead."

This same Early, now the secretary of Franklin D. Roosevelt, is on the White House telephone 22 years later, April 12, 1945. Many men listen to his hushed voice.

"Here is a flash," he says quietly, "The President died suddenly this afternoon." . . .

Chill winds whisk around the Chicago Criminal Courts building and several hundred small boys wait loyally to greet their hero, strapping White Sox Outfielder Joe Jackson. It is early October, 1920, and the Black Sox scandal has the sports world by the ears.

Jackson is testifying before the grand jury. Reports have spread that he has confessed his part in throwing the 1919 World Series to the Cincinnati Reds. Suddenly Jackson emerges from the court house accompanied by AP reporter Don M. Ewing. They walk into a sea of silent, upturned young faces. One little fellow tugs the big man's sleeve, and begs:

"Say it ain't so, Joe."

(News is the rush of flood waters . . . The love of a monarch who put a woman above an empire . . .)

A 75-foot wall of water moved on Johnstown, Pa., as Conemaugh Dam gave way under press of 18 million liquid tons. First vague reports were received in Pittsburgh, and Claude Wetmore, correspondent for the New York World, was on his way to the scene.

Hours afterward, as the dawn of June 1, 1889, breaks on the ruined city, Wetmore is still seeking among the debris and bodies for some way to send out the news. He sees, finally, a railroad lineman on a pole, cutting in on one of the few remaining telegraph wires. Wetmore, whose paper is a member of the Associated Press, scribbles on a soggy piece of paper.

"Over 2000 dead," he writes. "Devastated Johnstown appeals to the Nation for food and shelter for other thousands who are homeless and starving."

He addresses the news, not to his own paper but to the Associated Press, so that people all over the country can know of the catastrophe . . .

Trees burst with the soft greens and splashy whites and pinks of France's spring. At the Chateau de Cande this May day of 1937 an Anglican clergyman faces tense Edward, Duke of Windsor, and a handsome, dark-haired American, Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

John Lloyd, Paris bureau chief of the Associated Press, stands among the witnesses to the marriage of a former King to a twice-divorced Baltimore belle.

IN the breathless heat of Rome's 1922 summer, Leo XIII lies dying. Around the world men and women, Catholic and Protestant alike, pray for his recovery. Before the ancient rites of death are undertaken, the personal physician of the aged Pope steps quietly into a Vatican antechamber. He whispers a few telephoned words to a friend.

Salvatore Cortesi, Associated Press bureau chief in Rome, is prepared. A code message flashes under the Atlantic to New York. Minutes later the world, including the Eternal City itself, receives its first word that a pontiff has passed . . .

Night Telegrapher J. D. Kennedy sits in the Boston bureau of the Associated Press tinkering with a wireless set. It is near midnight, April 14, 1912. He stiffens suddenly. From out of the air comes a call from the world's largest ship, the Titanic, on her maiden transatlantic voyage.

OSS men, accompanied by Associated Press War Correspondent Joseph Morton, take off late in 1944 on a dangerous mission. They are flying behind German lines to bring out downed American fliers.

A pilot returns with a story by Morton, but the rescue party never comes back. In Mauthausen concentration camp, heavy with the stench of death, Joe Morton falls forward, his back riddled by Nazi bullets—without a trial and on secret orders from brown-shirted higher-ups . . .

Stocks have reached new highs and it is October 24, 1929. Suddenly the market collapses before a gale of liquidation. Panic hits Wall Street, despair touches thousands of homes as life savings are swept away. Crowds gather in the streets, watching numbly as in brokers' offices and trading pits men work frenziedly to a counterpoint of "More margin, more margin."

Financial reporters of the Associated Press work deep into the night pulling together the story of the debacle. Financial Editor Claude A. Jagger alone pounds out more than 8000 words before Black Thursday drops into history.

Within minutes, and more than a quarter of an hour ahead of other news services, the news has been carried along most of AP's 300,000 miles of leased wires. It goes into the offices of some 2600 newspapers and radio stations in the United States. Around the world it is received by 3900.

Wooden Ships, Iron Men

Manila Bay and Navy Share an Anniversary

By Alexander R. George
Associated Press Staff Writer

THIS WEEKEND marks two notable anniversaries in American naval history.

Fifty years ago today Commodore George Dewey destroyed the Spanish Fleet in Manila Bay. The victory brought the United States its first recognition as a world power.

One hundred and fifty years ago yesterday Congress created the Navy Department to fight our "undeclared" sea war with the French, who had been raiding American commerce. The Navy then had three wooden frigates and a converted merchant ship.

Although the victory at Manila Bay was the biggest national event since the end of the Civil War, Americans on the home front weren't sure their ships had won the battle until a week after it was fought.

During the battle Spanish General Augustin in Manila had cabled the Madrid government giving the impression of victory for Spain. There were reports in a few newspapers of a Yankee triumph, but the good news was not confirmed until a roundabout cablegram from Dewey reached the Navy Department on May 7.

Navy Was Wooden

THE wooden Navy of 1798 had become the "new steel Navy" of 1898—forerunner of 1948's multi-thousand dreadnaughts of the sea and air. In Dewey's squadron were four new-type steel ships, the protected cruisers Olympia, Boston, Baltimore and Raleigh, along with an unprotected cruiser, a gunboat, a collier and a revenue cutter.

The American squadron slipped into Manila Bay under cover of darkness the night of April 30. At 5:41 a. m. Commodore Dewey quietly gave his famous order to the captain of the flagship Olympia: "You may fire when ready, Gridley."

The Olympia's guns went into action. Dewey's plan was to have his ships steam past the Spanish vessels, firing first at a range of 5000 yards, gradually lessening the range to 2000 yards, and then to counter-sail in a line almost parallel to that of the enemy fleet. This fooled the Spanish admiral, who expected ship-to-ship combat.

The Spanish ships were hit repeatedly. Their own fire was ineffective. At 7:35 Dewey withdrew his squadron to give his men breakfast and returned to the attack at 11:16. By 12:30 the enemy's 11 vessels were sunk, burned or abandoned.

The Spanish lost 167 killed and 214 wounded. No American ship was seriously damaged, and only six men were slightly wounded. The Spanish ships, mostly old iron and wooden vessels, were much inferior to the American cruisers, and their gunnery was very poor.

A Dewey craze swept the Nation. President McKinley immediately advanced him to the rank of acting admiral. Phrenologists reported that the bumps on Dewey's head indicated "a brain of unusual power." Restaurants served "Dewey stews."

A candy company's advertisement showed pieces of a confection called "Dewey's chewies" popping out of a naval gun. A Chicago newspaper said there were 100 Deweys in the Chicago directory and that most of them claimed kinship with the hero. There was a "Dewey for President" boom.

'Hot Time in Old Town'

NATIONAL Guardsmen sang "There'll Be a Hot Time in The Old Town Tonight" as they entrained for Florida en route to invade Cuba. The Rough Rider cavalry regiments, composed of cowboys, Texas Rangers and "a few tenderfeet from the East," assembled at San Antonio, Tex.

Among the members of a patriotic ladies' group which sent Dewey a large American Flag were Mrs. Jefferson Davis, widow of the President of the Confederacy, and Mrs. "Jeb" Stuart, widow of the Confederate cavalry general.

Dewey had his "first smell of gunpowder" serving under David ("Damn the Torpedoes") Farragut in the Civil War. Farragut's naval connection reached back to Capt. David Porter, by whom he had been adopted and put in the Navy at the age of 9.

Porter had become a midshipman in April, 1798, the month the Navy Department was established. He served on the Constellation, one of the Navy's three frigates at that time. The others were the Constitution and the United States.

The first Secretary of the Navy was Benjamin Stoddert, a Potomac River shipping merchant of Georgetown, Md., now a part of the District of Columbia. The Navy's civilian force consisted of Secretary Stoddert and four clerks.

The Constitution and Constellation, "queens of the fleet" in 1798, cost some $350,000 apiece—about the same price as a modern PT (motor torpedo boat). The cost of the whole Navy which protected ocean commerce during the French naval war has been estimated at six million dollars, less than that of one submarine today.

denunciation of both the trusteeship and the coalition proposals.

It is the foundation of his faith that, despite power-politics intrigues, the interests of the great democratic powers must lead them inevitably to support Korean independence.

But the nationalist leaders are not relying supinely upon outside support. They know that if Korea is to stand, it must be upon its own feet. And the new government will face tremendous problems.

The currency is inflated from eight billion won in 1945 to more than 30 billions in the south alone in 1948. Prices have skyrocketed four and five hundred times. Housing shortages and unemployment are severe. Factories in the south are rapidly deteriorating, and are dependent upon outside sources for fuel and raw materials normally obtained from north Korea.

In prospect for the 20 millions of south Koreans is a long period of strict rationing, drastic shortages and personal sacrifices in order to build up an industry which can export enough to buy the imports they must have to live. Even more pressing is the need to develop and arm an army large enough to protect them against the 200,000 troops already equipped by the Communist regime north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel.

U. S. Garrison Is 15,000

SOUTH KOREA is occupied by 15,000 American troops and has a native constabulary of 60,000 men. Its chief strength, however, lies in the support of the 43 nations that voted for Korean independence.

A United Nations Commission is supervising the election. Members include India, China, the Philippines, France, Syria, El Salvador, Australia and Canada. It is charged to remain in Korea for consultations with the new government until its stability is insured, when plans can safely be made for withdrawal of all occupation troops.

The future of Korea is the future of relations between Russia and the democratic world. If the problem of Communist imperialism is solved, a unified and independent Korea will be one of the results. But if Russian aggression goes unchecked, south Korea alone can hardly be expected to succeed where the rest of the democratic world fails.

IN A YEAR when tournament prize money will exceed $600,000 and is the highest in history for the golf pros, the Professional Golfers Association is going broke . . . the PGA will vote to take five per cent of all purse winnings to help meet office expenses. . . Argentina's fencing team will compete in the Olympics only because of a special ruling by the Government last week, when export restrictions on metal were lifted to permit the fencers to take their foils with them to England. . . the Nats' Chattanooga farm club set one 1948 record the other day. CHARLES KIMMEL, the brush artist who has been scoring the national golf tournaments for eight years, estimates that he has inscribed 1,617,000 hole-by-hole figures on the scoreboard in 231 tourneys . . . he has had to post only four holes in one during that period. Proud of his printing, he confesses "I'm weak on ones." . . . Ed Furgol is one of the long-driving pros despite the fact the left arm is supposed to be the power arm. Furgol's left arm, broken in a boyhood fall, never mended properly, and is of small use to his swing . . . the District Boxing Commission ignored the New York Commission's suspension of Jake LaMotta in approving his fight here with Ken Stribling . . . LaMotta is still under suspension in New York for having concealed a physical injury, but D. C. Commission doctors pronounced him okay . . . to prevent tampering with the official balls, all major league clubs now have uniform ball bags, with only the umpires owning the keys . . . correction: Ramon Garcia, the Nats' Cuban pitcher, is not the first cross-handed batter in the majors. JOE LOUIS, with the jowls of a 250-pounder, has been ducking all requests that he step on the scales for boxing writers at his New Jersey training camp. Two years ago, Louis was under 200 pounds for his Billy Conn fight, now he's trying to get down to 215 for the Joe Walcott return bout . . . when Yogi Berra was benched the other day after the Nats stole four bases against him, he took off his mask as he stepped into the dug-out, whereupon a Bronx fan yelled, "That's right, Yogi, take it off before they steal that, too." . . . note to Hal Newhouser, who doesn't like to lose and thus far has lost three straight without winning: "Watch that temper." Bobby Locke, who gets $500 a crack for one-day exhibitions on week-ends, now commands more for personal appearances than any American pro . . . Rocky Graziano has quit golf, saying "that's sissy stuff," as his third fight with Tony Zale nears. Quote from Irving Cohen, Graziano's manager: "My guy is only twenty-six years old, and getting faster and heavier. He's going uphill. Zale is 34, and going down hill, with no brakes." . . . George Vico the Detroit rookie first baseman, who hit a home run on the first major league pitch he saw, has other feats to his credit. He plays the harmonica and something else called the Sousaphone, and he learned to speak Japanese while in the army.

WHEN STAN SPENCE, Vern Stephens and Bobby Doerr hit consecutive home runs for the Red Sox on the opening day of the season, it was a triumph for American Legion Junior baseball, from which all of the trio graduated . . . Jack Espey has been offered the post as general manager of the Chicago Rockets of the All-America Conference, and rejected it to resume his public relations business in Washington. . . the Kentucky Derby of 1886 was delayed by the one-man strike of Starter Frank Sheridan who demanded an increase from $50 to $100 a day, and got it . . . Bucky Harris' manipulation of the Yankees against different types of pitching is paying off. The day after Charley Keller, Yogi Berra and George McQuinn hit home runs against Washington's right-handed pitching, their replacements hit four homers against the left-handed pitching of the Red Sox . . . the Detroit Tigers, who played to only 5,200 fans in a three-day series at St. Louis, didn't make transportation and hotel expenses, and there is a new demand for the transfer of the Browns' franchise . . . Ben Hogan, in his new book on golf, declares that most amateur golfers neglect to equip themselves with the proper type of sand wedge that makes trap shots easy. He recommends a club with a wide flange at the heel . . . Jockey Conn McCreary didn't ride in the Derby because he saw nothing that could beat the Calumet entry and was tired of riding Derby losers.

Alexander Ties Locke At 203 for Open Lead

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

What Bobby Locke failed to do to the Prince Georges golf course yesterday, Skip Alexander did.

The bespectacled Mid-Pines, N. C., swinger fashioned his seventh consecutive subpar round, a 68, to tie Locke for the 54-hole lead with 203. Locke, pacing the field by four strokes before yesterday's round, skidded to a par 72.

Alexander, who has yet to play this course in anything over par in two Open tourneys, wasn't the only one crowding the one-time Johannesberg bank clerk. Ben Hogan, the little guy with the big game, also moved closer to the front, shaving four strokes off of his seven-stroke deficit with a snappy 68 to hold down third place at 206.

Former Dentist Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, the only other golfer in the field with a possible chance to win the $2200 first prize, tacked on a par 72 to his 136, but was still five strokes back of the pace setters in the 208 bracket.

First Collapse

Locke, who yesterday failed to crack par for the first time in seven trips around the 6800-yard course, had an opportunity to preserve his lead by one stroke on the eighteenth green, but flubbed the chance when he missed an eight-footer which would have given him a birdie three.

Locke had a creditable outgoing nine, using only 35 strokes, one under the card. But the stone-faced visitor ran into trouble on the back side, coming in on 37, one over par.

He had two straight bogies, on the twelfth and thirteenth, when he missed the greens each time and almost bogied the fifteenth. That's when his tee shot, headed for the woods, hit a spectator and bounded back into the fairway.

Alexander, playing with Hogan and the national sartorial champion, Jimmy Demaret, had most of the 5500 spectators following him and he treated them to a burning performance on the first four holes where he was four under par.

Almost an Ace

The 220-pound Tar Heel whacked a tremendous drive on the very first tee, his ball coming to rest only 16 inches from the cup, 315 yards from the tee.

Momentarily the ball trickled toward the hole, but even the body-English that spectators employed to urge the pellet on in failed to effect what would have been a sensational hole-in-one. Alexander stroked it in for an eagle deuce and he was off in a blaze of glory.

Once again the power-hitter from Carolina drove the green on the 323-yard second, but two-putted from 25 feet for his birdie, and he was three up after playing only two holes. He got his par four on No. 3, but birdied the 485-yard fourth to make it four-up.

Skip took his only bogey on the next hole, an easy par 3. His tee shot faded to the right and the ball landed a few inches off the green, some 30 feet away. He chipped short and got down in 2 for his 4. It was the second time in three days he had bogeyed the fifth hole.

He got that stroke back on the next hole, however, and made the turn in 32, four under par. He matched the card for a standard 36 on the journey home for his 68.

FINISH IN DERBY—Citation drives to the finish line the winner in the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., yesterday. His Calumet Farm's stablemate, Coaltown, runs second in the seventy-fourth renewal of the turf classic. My Request finishes third. Billings, Grandpere and Escadru trailed.

My Request Runs Third; Entry Pays Off $2.80

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—Citation made Coaltown look like last winter's ashes and handled sharp rebuttals to four other over-their-heads 3-year-olds today. Without feeling more than one light tap of Jockey Eddie Arcaro's whip, the gallant son of Bull Lea won the seventy-fourth running of the Kentucky Derby.

It was a Warren Wright race for Calumet's Citation finished 3½ lengths ahead of Calumet's Coaltown. Three lengths farther back came B. F. Whitaker's My Request some daylight in front of the Walmac Farm's Billings.

Beaten farther off than you can throw two stones were Mrs. J. Payson Adams' Grandpere and W. L. Brann's Escadru.

When Citation fairly exploded with a burst of speed straightening out in the stretch, he not only burst the Coaltown myth but he also cracked wide open some Derby superstitions and changed the record books of the Nation's No. 1 horse race.

Betting Trend Surprising

Almost as remarkable as Citation's great race was the betting. At one stage of the all-day wagering on the run for the roses, the Calumet entry was second choice to My Request, the Wood Memorial winner.

The entry finally paid $2.80, four times as much as had been expected and far from a minus pool.

Racing before an estimated 100,000 crowd, Citation was given a faultless hand ride by Arcaro and carried the common burden of 126 pounds over the sloppy mile and a quarter in 2.05 2-5 to pocket first money of $83,400 and raise his total earnings to $331,830.

The victory was his fifteenth in 17 tries since he first appeared on the Havre de Grace track last year.

Breezes Past Coaltown

Before the horses were being unsaddled, Citation was hailed as a "second Man O'War" in the press-box, a designation given him by his handlers. There was no doubt about his greatness today.

Arcaro allowed the Coaltown people—and they were for this colt almost to a man here among Kentuckians—to have their innings as he rated Citation. Coaltown, of the questionable wind, went to the front and opened a long lead.

However, when Arcaro gave the "come on let's go" signal, it was all over but placing the wreath around the bay colt's neck. He

Wright Won $97,000—Without Betting a Cent

Louisville, Ky., May 1 (AP).—Warren Wright did all right for himself in today's Kentucky Derby—to a tune of $95,150.

Wright, owner of Calumet Farm's one-two Derby finishers, Citation and Coaltown, collected $84,450 of the Derby's $111,450 purse and stakes by virtue of Citation's win.

He got another $10,000 for Coaltown's job of running second. Then he received $2000 as the breeder of Citation and $1000 as the breeder of Coaltown.

Wright, a Chicago baking powder manufacturer, said he didn't bet a penny on the race. "I never do," he explained.

Macks Take 2d Straight From Nats, 5-1

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Early Wynn yesterday held the Athletics to two singles—plus two home runs, two doubles and a triple—and the Nats made it four in a row (defeats, that is).

The Athletics rode to a 5-1 victory on Wynn's consistent extra-base pitching. Eddie Joost and Hank Majeski swatted their third homers of the season.

In a manner of speaking, the Nats outhit the A's, 8 to 7, but their blows lacked the authority of the lengthy Philadelphia swats and young Carl Scheib permitted nothing more than a double.

Disregard Drizzle

The 21-year-old Scheib, who has found a team he can lick was achieving his second win over the Nats in his second start of the year. He won on a day when he was in a slump. The last time he faced the Nats he shut 'em out.

The efficiency of the A's extra base hitting was demonstrated in the seventh inning. At that point they had only three hits to the Nats' eight, but they also had a 3-1 lead. Rookie Scheib didn't give up a hit after the sixth inning.

Griffith Stadium's 5612 customers, undismayed by the pregame drizzle that continued all afternoon, saw the Nats take a short-lived lead against Scheib in the third inning when Jake Early and Eddie Yost whacked two-baggers to get them a run.

Barney McCosky launched the As extra-base attack in the next inning with a triple high off the

Babe Didrikson and By Nelson Head Celebrities Golf Greats

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Byron Nelson and Babe Didrikson, king and queen of American golf, will head a field of all-time greats from the sports world in the National Celebrities golf tournament.

Nelson said yesterday he will come direct from his ranch at Ronaoke, Tex., to compete in the May 16 event at the Columbia Country Club.

Babe and her husband, George Zaharias, will drive in from the South where the game's finest woman player is appearing in a series of exhibitions.

Didrikson played in the inaugural tournament last year, but Nelson will be competing for the first time.

Nelson retired from competitive golf after establishing himself alongside such professional greats as Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, both of whom played in the Celebrities event a year ago and will be back for the second annual tournament.

Nelson's presence here will add more class to the tournament, already recognized as one of the top features on the national sports calendar.

The only event other than the National Celebrities that brings Nelson out of retirement annually is the Masters' tournament at Augusta, Ga.

Sarazen, still an active competitor although he is 44 years old, will play in the Philadelphia Inquirer's Open tournament before coming here. Gene will also play

Crosby Guest Star On Bergen's Show

Bing Crosby not only will play in the National Celebrities tournament for the second straight year but he also will be guest star on Edgar Bergen's Charlie McCarthy NBC broadcast at Uline Arena the night of May 16.

Both events, under the auspices of The Washington Post, will be held in support of Attorney General Tom Clark's efforts to combat juvenile delinquency.

Indians Lose 1st Game, 10-3; Feller Chased

Cleveland, May 1 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians' unbeaten string came to an end today as the Detroit Tigers routed Bob Feller and handed the Tribesmen their first loss in seven games, 10 to 3, before a ladies' day crowd of 52,249.

The Indians' first six victories had brought them within three wins of the modern record of nine straight victories at the start of the season, set by the St. Louis Browns in 1944.

The Tigers, who had lost six of their last seven games, unleashed a 14-hit attack and enjoyed two big innings.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout set the Indians down with one run and five hits in the first eight innings but weakened in the ninth, when the Redskins tallied twice, and had to be replaced by Art Houtteman.

Demaret Kids Clinic Golfers

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Jimmy Demaret, flashy dresser, radio performer and master of ceremonies at golf parties, out-Charlied McCarthy at the National Capital Open tournament yesterday.

Jimmy kept the show very much alive at Prince Georges when some of the golfing greats went into their act in a clinic following the regular play.

He even loosened up his fellow Texan, Ben Hogan, who normally is a grim, taciturn chap. Ben pantomimed a duffer making all the mistakes in the book.

And Jimmy Thomson, of long-hitting fame, put on a slow-motion demonstration of driving that was better than the movies.

But Demaret, dressed in suede shoes, yellow trousers, green sweater, yellow shirt and gray coat and topped by a Kelly-green cap with yellow visor, really made the show tick.

He introduced George Fazio as "old naked nob" and when Hogan flubbed a wood shot, Jimmy re-

CITATION (entry), $2.80, out, out; COALTOWN (entry), out, out; MY REQUEST, out.

CITATION, away forwardly and losing ground while racing back of COALTOWN to the stretch, responded readily to a steady hand ride, and after disposing of the latter, drew clear. COALTOWN began fast, established a clear lead before going a quarter and, making the pace until inside the stretch, continued willingly but was not good enough for CITATION although easily best of the others. MY REQUEST, bothered slightly after the start, was in hand while improving his position to the stretch, then failed to rally when set down for the drive. BILLINGS suffered interference after the break when GRANDPERE bore to the outside, was in close quarters at the first turn when caught between ESCADRU and CITATION, then could not better his position when clear. GRANDPERE broke into BILLINGS after the start, displayed speed for a half mile, then gave up.

3000 Kids Go to School

Despite inclement weather, more than 3000 enthusiastic youngsters turned out for yesterday's opening of the Walter Johnson Memorial baseball school.

Members of the Washington Nats were on hand at the 20 playground locations of the school, sponsored by the Recreation Department, Junior Board of Commerce and The Washington Post.

The Recreation Department furnished glowing reports of the affability and interest of the Washington ballplayers.

Chic Pieretti was lauded for doing "a whale of a job" at West Potomac Park. Coach Rick Ferrell attracted the largest group with some 300 eager pupils at Barry Farms.

The driver assigned to pick up Outfielder Sherry Robertson failed to show so Robertson promptly went to Wilson-Deal himself.

All the boys felt lucky to get the benefit of the major-leaguers' tutoring, but 7-year-old Stuart Polly, 3410 39th st. nw., was luckiest of all. Outfielder Tom McBride took him to yesterday's Nats-A's game as his guest.

Ft. Belvoir Wins In Track, 110 to 24

Pick the Winners and Win Trip to 1948 World Series

A few changes have been made in The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners baseball contest for this week. Please read these new rules carefully before sending in this week's entry.

1. Just pick the winners from this line-up of games scheduled for next Sunday, May 9. Do NOT bother to indicate the probable scores.

Chicago vs. New York
(1st game)
Detroit vs. Philadelphia
(2nd game)

2. Now write down what you think will be the probable score of the St. Louis-Washington American League game and also the probable score of the Boston-St. Louis National League game. Just those two.

3. That's all! Except for printing your name and address clearly, of course. Phone number, too, so we can call you if you win. Then send your entry to BASEBALL CONTEST, 1325 E st. nw., Washington 25, D. C., or leave it at the lobby counter of The Washington Post Building. Must be in before midnight Wednesday, May 5.

4. Anyone may enter except The Washington Post's employes and members of their immediate families, and winners of previous weeks' contests.

Remember—the winner of each week's contest gets a World Series trip, complete with ticket to the game and round-trip first-class railroad transportation. So get in the contest each week until you win!

On the Line

—With Considine

LOUISVILLE, MAY 1 (INS).—It has become almost a cliche to put a rap on all things pertaining to the Kentucky Derby, which was run in Louisville today 'midst all the trimmings (and we use "trimmings" advisedly) that have made this the most enchanting day of racing in the Nation.

Considine

I have been more or less noted for putting the baling hook into the civic rib by shedding some light on such things as stepped-up prices for hotels, food, cabs and the general discomfort of this nice city during the Derby frenzy.

But the boy grows older, and the older he grows the more he realizes—to his consternation—that such bleats are neither important nor valid.

At least 999 out of every 1000 who make the trip to the Derby have themselves one fine time. Some of the 999 bellyache now and then, but they always come back.

One of those who came back today is a fabulous New York advertising executive named Feland Robley, or "the old colonel" as he is known around his shop.

This is his forty-fifth Derby, which puts him in an exclusive little club of diehards headed by the amazing Col. Matt Winn, the promoter of the show. Winn saw the first one run in 1875 and has never missed any of the 74 runnings since then.

Colonel Robley was accosted once by a young man who took him to task for his annual pilgrimage to the Derby and then asked, "Colonel, do you figure you're ahead or behind, after betting on all those Derbies?"

THE COLONEL DREW himself up to his full height, took a reflective sip of 20-year-old bourbon and asked:

"You go to the theater, young man?"

"Certainly," the junior partner replied.

"Well, then, look at it this way: do you figure you're ahead or behind on the theater?"

That's the best philosophy a horse-player ever had, with the possible exception of a guy I know who comes back from the track with a smile, no matter how much he has lost, and always says, "Had a pretty good day. Not a single horse kicked me."

The colonel, like unto so many other horse-players, wouldn't know what on earth to do with a horse if somebody gave him one. In fact, the colonel might shy—not the horse.

"I think horses are pretty dreadful beasts," he once intoned, "but I sure like to bet on 'em."

The colonel is the author of a memorable scene, dear to the heart of every horse-player.

Returning to his office one Monday morning, after a Derby, he looked silently at a crowd of associates who had entered his domain to ask him how he fared and then began to empty big bills out of all of his pockets and place the ever-growing mound of money on the desk.

Finally he dipped into a vest pocket and extracted a $5 bill. He looked at it with some scorn for a moment, then snorted, "How did that get in there?" and tossed it out the window.

THE BRASS HATS of the National Federation of State Athletic Associations, apparently blinded by their tin medals, have made a blanket ruling which prohibits schools accredited to them to compete in such events as the impending "C" Club track meet in Washington, D. C.

This will be the thirtieth running of this fine event, which has drawn both the cream and milk of the high school and prep school track and field men through the years.

It is (and always has been) operated on a lofty level of amateurism and has done its share in the field of lessening juvenile delinquency.

The "C" Club is composed of Washington business and professional men who won their letter at famous old Central High School in the Nation's Capital. Theirs is a labor of pure love, done in the name of sportsmanship.

The "C" Club is only one such United States organization which now has been smeared by the National Federation—which demands that its athletes appear only at events which happen to be sponsored by accredited schools.

A young swimmer who is of Olympic timber recently was told that he would be barred from future high school competition—at least high school competition which has the blessing of the brass hats—if he competed in the national championships which were held at Yale.

He competed, and, as a result, may make the team which represents this country at London this summer.

Another organization, the New York University Spiked Shoe Club, was forced to cancel its annual cross-country run through a New York park because it was no longer "eligible" to hold such events.

I made myself a promise not long ago to attempt to peer into the workings of the average amateur official's mind. But now I'm stumped, for what purpose can be served in these times by eliminating fine old amateur events sponsored by reputable organizations?

I hope that the schools which want to send their boys to the "C" Club meet will have the moral gumption to do so—and down with the brass that has arbitrarily ruled that the meet is off-bounds.

THE PITCHING WHICH the Giants have been receiving of late makes one sigh wistfully and say, "Gosh, if they could only hit."

Mike Jacobs won his first game as a boxing promoter by being fast with a buck when it came to charity. His possible successor, Ben Bodne of the Carnival of Champions Club, which is staging the third Graziano-Zale fight next month, is following in his footsteps.

Out of the blue Mr. B. sent a check for $2500 to Jesse Block the other day for a block of seats at the May 12 showing of the great hit play, "Mr. Roberts."

The seats, the promoter insisted, must be given to wounded boys at various veterans' hospitals in this area.

Block, incidentally, and his talented wife, Eve Sully, were the first show folks to play the hospital circuit when the casualties first arrived.

Getting back to the Derby, it tops a racing program which, during May alone, in these United States, will see $1,120,500 given away in purses alone.

The Preakness weighs in with another $100,000 added race on May 15; Jamaica has the $75,000 added Gallant Fox Handicap the same day, and Hollywood Park, Garden State and Belmont come through with $50,000 events to swell the kitty.

How about a payoff some day for the fans?

Braves Chase Bobo in 1st, Beat Giants, 6-3

Bill Voiselle Wins Over Ex-Mates

New York, May 1 (AP).—The Boston Braves made short work of Bobo Newsom, driving the veteran right-hander out in the first inning and going on to defeat the New York Giants for the second straight day, 6-3.

Bill Voiselle, who was traded by the New York Giants to Boston last season, knocked his former teamates out of first place by winning the game.

Voiselle had a one-hit shutout for six innings, but weakened in the seventh. He was tagged for four hits and three runs before Rookie Bob Hogue came in and got Walker Cooper to pop out with the bases loaded.

Bobo started for the Giants and was derricked without being able to retire one man. Five singles and Billy Rigney's error gave the Braves four runs in the first inning before Clint Hartung was able to stop the parade.

The defeat was the Giants' third straight and dropped them into second place, a half game behind the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Brecheen Blanks Cubs For Cards, 4-0

St. Louis, May 1 (AP).—Harry (The Cat) Brecheen blanked the Chicago Cubs for the second time this season tonight while the St. Louis Cardinals clubbed three Cub pitchers for nine hits and a 4 to 0 victory. A crowd of 28,000 dampened spectators saw the first night game of the season here.

Brecheen turned back the Cubs at Chicago a week ago, 1 to 0.

The little southpaw had a much easier time tonight, as his mates backed his fancy flinging with timely hitting and flawless fielding. A brilliant stop by Red Schoendienst of Eddie Waitkus' grounder after Peanut Lowrey doubled in the sixth cut off a Cub run.

Enos Slaughter's first hit in 25 times at bat drove home the first run in the first inning. Schoendienst walked in the third and came around on Terry Moore's single and Stan Musial's fly.

Nippy Jones got a home run in the fifth when his drive to center eluded Hal Jeffcoat, who slipped on the wet grass. Don Lang's single, Marty Marion's sacrifice and Del Rice's single accounted for the final run.

Rain delayed the game for 20 minutes in the fifth inning.

Ostermueller Wins For Pirates, 7-2

Pittsburgh, May 1 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates climbed into first place in the National League today behind the five-hit pitching of ancient Fritz Ostermueller who tamed the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 2.

The New York Giants dropped into runner-up position by a half game as they lost to the Boston Braves.

The 40-year-old Ostermueller pitched no-hit ball for 6 2/3 innings. The crowd of 13,661 had momentary visions of a no-hitter before Hank Sauer got hold of a pitch with two gone in the seventh and slammed it for a home run, his sixth of the year.

Limeberger Hurls No-Hit Game

Dave Limeberger pitched a no-hit, no-run game for Holy Comforter yesterday by a big majority—26 to 0—over Holy Name. Limeberger's pitching kept his mates in first place in the CYO League. It was Limeberger's second no-hitter in a row. Unbeaten this season, he has pitched 30 scoreless innings and not a hitter has been able to get a ball out of the infield.

He fanned 14 yesterday at the Armory field, and in addition slugged a two-run homer. Teammate Ralph Frye bashed a three-run homer to highlight the hit parade.

Robinson's Hit Decides

Bums Beat Phils, 2-1, Climb Into 3d Place; Hatten Winner

Philadelphia, May 1 (AP).—Bunching three of their four hits in the fifth inning for two runs, the Brooklyn Dodgers nipped the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1, today to move into third place in the National League standings.

Joe Hatten notched his first victory, besting Walter Dubiel. The Dodger southpaw, second Brooklyn pitcher to go the route this season, yielded five hits to only four for Dubiel, but twice got out of tight spots.

Brooklyn's winning rally came with two out. Billy Cox, subbing for Pee Wee Reese at short, singled and went to third on Hatten's line double to left. Jackie Robinson then singled to left for both runs.

marked, "That was a nice shot, Ben, just like hitting a ping-pong ball with a hot water bag."

As Jim Ferrier stepped up to demonstrate sand shots, Demaret introduced him as "the man who has seen more sand than Rommel."

And when one of Lew Worsham's spoon shots went awry, he cracked, "Lew's entering the ladies' day tournament out here next week."

When Bobby Locke stepped up to take his turn in the driving competition, Demaret greeted him, "You've got more guts than Swift Packing Co. to enter a driving match."

Jimmy further remarked to Locke, who is only 30, but looks older, "Hurry up and shoot, Bobby, before the rain melts all that glue holding you together."

During Locke's turn at the tee, an elderly spectator who had evidently consumed too much good cheer, began swinging at imaginary golf balls with an umbrella. He threatened to drown out the public address system with his own explanation of how to play golf.

Demaret quieted him rapidly. "I say, old fellow," Jimmy quipped, "you must be awfully glad the war's over because now you can get spare parts for your cranium."

Amidst the laughter, some folks didn't notice that Skip Alexander won the driving contest and a gold watch with a belt of 284 yards.

to snuff, carded two birdies on the front side for 34 and played the homecoming nine in the same number of strokes for his second 68.

Ben messed up a possible birdie on the eighteenth when he required two strokes to blast out of a trap. His second shot, however, was a "beaut," the ball coming to rest within 3 inches of the cup.

Middlecoff, in third place before yesterday's firing, 3 putted from 10 feet on the home green and it cost him third place to Hogan. Cary started out with a 35 but he needed two more strokes on the back nine.

TEE TOPICS—Veteran Ky Laffoon of St. Andrews, Ill., had the day's best round, a 5 under par 67 and it vaulted him into the 214 class with Herman Keiser, former Masters champion . . . Lew Worsham, becoming progressively worse, shot a 79, 7 over par. Worsham started off with a 6 on the first hole and never could get going . . . Although the temperature was in the 60s, Locke continued to wear gloves, taking them off only when he shot . . . PGA Champion Jim Ferrier and Walter Romans, Bob Hamilton of Prince Georges, got a "mad" on over a ball Ferrier lifted out of casual water on the fourth hole . . . Alexander's play over this course has been remarkable. His four rounds last year were 69, 69, 68, 66—272, good enough for a tie for second. In three rounds in the present show he's scored 69, 66, 68—203.

Homers Fail, Yanks Lose To Bosox, 8-6

Boston, May 1 (AP).—Aided by a four-run attack in the first inning which drove Ed Lopat off the mound, the Boston Red Sox defeated the New York Yankees 8-6 today to even the series at one game apiece.

Jack Kramer, purchased from the St. Louis Browns during the winter, won his first start for the Red Sox, although he needed assistance from Denny Galehouse in the ninth. Kramer's Boston debut was delayed by a leg injury suffered in spring training.

Kramer was socked for 10 hits, including three-run homers by Joe DiMaggio and George McQuinn, but the Red Sox backed the veteran righthander with 10 hits of their own, three of them for extra bases. Ted Williams led the Red Sox attack with three hits and a walk.

Browns Defeat White Sox, 6-2

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns defeated the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 2, today for their fifth victory in nine games. The defeat set the White Sox in last place in the American League.

Fred Sanford limited the White Sox to five hits before he weakened and was removed in the ninth after Taft Wright's single accounted for both Chicago runs. Bryan Stephens then pitched a game-ending double-play ball to Aaron Robinson, White Sox catcher.

St. Louis tagged Starter Orval Grove for two runs in the first inning. Bob Dillinger doubled ahead of Gerry Priddy's single and Al Zarilla's double.

Maryland Lacrosse Team Defeats Princeton, 9 to 4

The University of Maryland's undefeated lacrosse team won its sixth game and its second straight against "Big Five" competition yesterday, defeating Princeton, 9-4, in Byrd Stadium.

With the defense allowing Princeton little more than a peek into Maryland territory, the Terps fashioned a 5-0 lead before the Tigers could score. Irv Brown started the spree with a recovery shot at 1:10 of the first period.

Once under way, Irv. Brown, Jiles Freeman, Jim Barnhard, Pat Walker and Bus Hall each bagged a goal, by 13.2 of the first period.

Frank Eccles finally got loose for Princeton's first goal one minute before the period ended. Billy Ruppersberger made it 6-1 two minutes after the second quarter and Hall followed suit to make it 7-1.

Sam Hill tallied twice in the second half to account for half of the Princeton total.

Keller Named Official at Laurel Track

President Richard H. Hutchinson, jr., announced yesterday that Edwin T. Keller, well known Norway, Me., official, has been named racing secretary for the brand-new Laurel Raceway scheduled to inaugurate harness racing June 21 for a 20-night meet.

Bringing to his position 31 years of official connection with the trotting sport, Keller has arrived at the new $500,000 Laurel plant.

J. S. Coates, the Goshen, N. Y., expert, is constructing at Laurel what he calls the "finest setup in the entire country."

Keller already has distributed stable applications to leading horsemen. Official starter for the 1940 Hambletonian which was won by Spencer Scott with Fred Egan as driver. Keller also introduced trotting at Santa Anita, Hollywood, Inglewood and Bay Meadows, all in California, as well as Portland, Oreg. He officiated at Buffalo Raceway, Hamburg, N. Y.; Northville Downs, Detroit; Grand Circuit in Old Orchard Beach, Me.; Cleveland, Ohio; Lexington, Ky., and in various parts of Canada.

The new Laurel Raceway is just a hop, skip and jump from the town of Laurel, just off the Baltimore-Washington highway, midway between the two race-conscious cities.

Rope Climb Marks Fall, 3 Champions Lose at AAU Meet

State College, Pa., May 1 (AP).—A duel of world record breakers in the rope climb and the dethroning of Ed Henning, 68-year-old Cleveland Indian club artist marked the first session of the National A. A. U. gymnastic championship today.

Don Perry, 17-year-old Venice, Calif., high school boy lowered the world 20-foot rope climb record to 3.1 seconds as he beat out last year's winner and record breaker, Garvin Smith of Los Angeles City College, for the title.

Henning was the most prominent of the three defending champions who failed to repeat. He finished second to George R. Hearn, a graduate student at Springfield (Mass.) College. The third loser—Smith was the second—was Raymond Sorenson of Penn State in the calisthenics.

Warriors Get Ed Sadowski

Philadelphia, May 1 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors announced today acquisition of 6-foot-5 Ed Sadowski in a deal that sent Chuck Halbert and Hank Beeneders to the Boston Celtics.

Peter A. Tyrell, president and general manager of the Arena, said the transaction was the first step in the rebuilding program of the dethroned Basketball Association of America champions.

Sadowski, 30 and a onetime star at Seton Hall, becomes the third all-BAA choice on the 1948-49 Warrior Roster. The others are Howie Dallmar and Joe Fulks. Sadowski was the third best pointmaker in the league last season.

The 6-foot-9 Halbert joined the Warriors in midseason from the Chicago Stags. He was the club's No. 1 center while Beeneders, purchased from Providence, was used sparingly in a relief role.

Navy Crew Barely Edges Yale In Half-Length Thriller

Derby, Conn., May 1 (AP).—Navy's veteran crew, with its sights trained on the Olympics, today turned back Yale's serious challenge, winning by about a half length in a 2-mile sprint on the Housatonic River. The unbeaten Middies, last year's Poughkeepsie Regatta champions, led most of the way.

A crowd estimated at 25,000 by Connecticut State police saw the exciting climax to a nine-race program. Navy, removing Yale from the unbeaten ranks, finished in 9:54.2 and the Eli's in 9:56, average time. A strong downstream wind prevailed.

Fighting on even terms for the first quarter mile, in which they rowed at 36 each, Navy took charge at the half mile, going in front a half length. Yale lowered the margin to a quarter length shortly afterward and drew up with the Middies with a half mile to go.

But Navy, stroked by John Cartwright, met the challenge and regained its advantage, pulling to a quarter length lead with a quarter mile left and upping it in a smashing drive down the home stretch.

Navy's freshmen also licked the Blue, winning by one and three quarter lengths in 10:08 to Yale's 10:13.4.

Yale managed to beat Navy in two other races over the two-mile course, the Jayvees winning by about two lengths in 10:04.2 to Navy's 10:11, and earlier, the Blue's third varsity eked out a 3-foot triumph over Navy's third varsity. The winning time was 10:07.2 and Navy's, 10:07.4.

Princeton Victor

Princeton, N. J., May 1 (AP).—Princeton's varsity crew retained possession of the Childs Cup on Lake Carnegie today in the thirty-ninth rowing of the Nation's oldest crew classic by coming from behind and outstripping Pennsylvania by two and one quarter lengths. Columbia was third.

Pennsylvania jumped away in front at the start and pulled one length ahead of Princeton with a mile to go. Although they were understroking Penn by at least two beats all the way down the lake, the Tigers began to move up on the leaders with three quarters left to go.

Princeton's time of 9:14.3 was 21.3 seconds slower than the Tigers turned in here last week. Columbia was never in the race and finished last for the third time this season. The Lions were 4 lengths behind Pennsylvania.

Penn State Golfers Beat Hoyas, 6-3

Terps Contribute 11 Errors To Hoyas' 9-4 Victory

University of Maryland's Terrapins were gracious hosts to Georgetown's baseballers yesterday. The Terps kicked in 11 errors to present the Hoyas with a 9-4 victory at College Park.

The first Terp error, by Second Baseman Al Tuminski, put Joe DiLeo on in the first inning. DiLeo came around on Joe Connor's single and an infield out.

Maryland snapped back to take a brief 3-1 lead in its half of the first on a single by Bob Brewer, a walk to Tuminski, a single and stolen base by Joe Andrus and another single by Paul Horst.

But the Hoyas locked up the game in the second with a four-run barrage. Singles by Dick Falvey, Pitcher Tom Flynn and Al Naples, doubles by DiLeo and Connors, a stolen base and another error did the trick.

Flynn coasted in, scattering seven hits over the rest of the route walking two Terps and fanning four.

Joe Hallissey's triple and Jack Walsh's single led to two C. U. scores in the Catholic third. The loss was Catholic's second in eight games.

John Burlingame Makes Hole-in-One

John Burlingame finished a round of golf yesterday the way every golfer would like to end the day—he stepped up to the tee, whacked out a drive and made a hole-in-one, 217 yards away.

This happened on the eighteenth hole at the Anacostia club. He was playing with Dick Olney, Wayne Phillips and Carl Hauth.

Hoyas Slate Football Game Today

Georgetown winds up spring football practice with an intrasquad game open to the public on the Hoya field this afternoon at 2:30.

Admission of $1 will be charged with proceeds going to the baseball field improvement fund.

Coach Jack Hagerty, apparently well pleased with the spring drills, will split the squad into two teams, Blue and Gray. George Murtagh, end coach, will handle the Blue; Mush Dubofsky, line mentor, the Gray.

The Gray team is predominantly made up of freshmen who will be fighting for varsity positions next fall against the 24 returning lettermen the Hoyas boast.

Prominent among the frosh are two flashy New Jersey All-State backs, Billy Conn and Dick Barba. Conn, 180-pound unanimous choice from St. Benedict's Prep, Newark, has broken away consistently for long gains. Barba, 190-pounder from Carteret Prep, has been equally impressive.

Freshmen Bob Fortunato, 235-pound tackle, and Sam Cavallero, guard, have been outstanding in line play. Hagerty said he expects the yearlings to give his veterans a real game.

Starting backfield for the Blue team includes Babe Baranowski, Lou Surman, John Kivus and Tony Beyer.

The line-ups:

BLUE		GRAY
Benigni (46)	L. E.	Noppinger (34)
Dolan (37)	L. T.	Fortunato (56)

Nats Lose 2d Straight to A's As Wynn Takes 5-1 Loss

right field wall and he tied the score at 1-1 on Fain's fly with one out.

Wynn got out of further trouble in that inning after walking two, when he fanned Sam Chapman and Jake Early threw out Valo who tried to steal third on the pitch.

It rocked along at 1-1 until Joost led off the sixth. He didn't trifle. He walloped a 2-and-1 pitch far into the left field bleachers and a fan's barehand catch provided an added thrill.

Majeski got his homer in the next inning, also in a lead-off role, but he didn't stop there. In the eighth, after McCosky doubled to left and Valo walked, Majeski doubled to the left field wall to score 'em both and knock Wynn out of the box.

Nats Waste Three Hits

The Nats performed the feat of getting three hits and no runs in the fourth. Vernon, who led off with a single, was out stealing, and singles in succession by Wooten and Christman netted the Nats nothing.

Wooten took third on Christman's blow, but the latter was out trying to take second on the throw-in.

There was a mild threat by the Nats in the ninth when Scheib walked Vernon and Robertson with nobody out, and there was furious activity in the A's bull pen, but Scheib got out of that nicely with Tom McBride's help. Pinch Hitter McBride grounded to Joost for a double play.

For the Nats' infielders, it was almost an afternoon off. The A's didn't hit any kind of a ground ball until the seventh inning, and only two all afternoon. They were too busy going for the fences.

IN SHORT: Al Kozar's damaged pair of fingers on his throwing hand kept him out of the Nats' line-up. It pains him to grip a bat . . . Joe Kuhel will experiment in today's double-header with the A's . . . In one game he'll play Rookie Sammy Meeks at shortstop, and both Tom McBride and Leon Culberson in the outfield . . . Barney McCosky, who made only five hits in his eight games for the A's, hit safely four times against the Nats in his first six trips to the plate at Griffith Stadium . . . The Nats boast one unique record. Of four relief pitchers, Ferrick, Candini, Garcia and Thompson, only the last-named has been scored on this season . . . Of Eddie Yost's 13 hits thus far, six have been two-baggers or triples and he's been on base once for every two appearances at the plate.

Generals Get 32 Points to Eastern's 28

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Washington-Lee of Ballston, Va., took four events—the mile, 440, pole vault, and discus—and three seconds to successfully defend its University of Maryland interscholastic track meet championship, yesterday at College Park.

The winning Little Generals scored 32 points to 28 for Eastern and 14 for George Washington of Alexandria.

Hagerstown won the county high school division with 24 points to 15 for Allegany of Cumberland, Md.

Despite stiff head winds, four meet records were broken and a 33-year-old mark was tied on the fast, well-packed cinder path.

Seventeen-year-old Forrest Miles of Eastern, who won a 21-jewel watch for scoring 13 points, equaled the meet record for the 100-yard dash.

Four officials clocked the short, slim senior in 9.8, the same time registered by Untz Brewer of St. Albans back in 1915.

Miles also won the 220 and was anchorman on the record-breaking Eastern 880-relay team, teaming with Elmer Landon, Dick Perkins and Ted Collins.

Bobby Jones, George Washington's half miler, edged a bit closer to the national interscholastic record as he practically sprinted the distance in 1:57.7, a meet record. He raced the first 440 in 57 seconds. The 17-year-old junior is now less than three seconds away from the national record.

Stocky Keith McDonald of G. W. snapped by one-tenth of a second the 13-year-old 120-high hurdles standard of 15.8. Harmon Brown of McKinley Tech equaled the old record, finishing a half step behind McDonald.

Earl Bruce of Alleghany set the fourth record when he ran the county division's 220 in 23 seconds flat, two-tenths of a second better than the old record set by Francis McLaughlin of Towson in 1932.

Of What Might Have Been

Derby Stirs Mixed Emotions For Jockey Snider's Widow

MIAMI, Fla., May 1 (U.P.)—Mrs. Albert Snider couldn't help crying a little as she heard the broadcast of the Kentucky Derby today.

Her tears were of memories and sorrow, but they represented some happiness, too.

She was saddened by the thought that Derby Day probably would have been a day of triumph for her late husband. And she was thrilled and happy that Citation and Jockey Eddie Arcaro won.

Until last March 5, Jockey Al Snider was scheduled to ride Citation in the Derby. He had just been named the No. 1 rider for Calumet Farms and was at the peak of his career.

After booting Citation to victory in the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah, Snider went fishing with two companions. Their boat was caught in a storm off the Florida Keys and the three presumably drowned. No trace of them was found despite an extensive search.

Arcaro was one of the family friends who never did give up hope that Snider might still be alive. He telephoned Mrs. Snider two nights before the Derby and was encouraged when she told him that some life preservers had been found near the place where Al was last seen.

Arcaro also promised Mrs. Snider that his share of the Derby money would go to her and her 6-year-old daughter, Nancy.

Mrs. Snider heard the broadcast today.

"I'm very, very happy about it," she said after the race. "That's exactly the way I wanted it. The horse and the jockey were the ones I wanted to win."

Horse Loses 20-Length Lead at End

Alexandra Park, England, May 1 (AP).—Deuces Wild, a 9-to-4 favorite in the feature race here today, was leading by 20 lengths entering the stretch—but lost.

The horse took the wrong turn in the mile and five-furlong race on a pretzel-shaped course and Apprentice Jockey M. Hanes couldn't straighten him out. River Patrol won.

Blame the Derby

New York, May 1 (U.P.).—She's a born-and-bred Kentuckian and the Derby is in her blood, 20-year-old Adele Lucy Robertson said in felony court today.

That's why she picked a man's pocket of a wallet containing $2, she added. She only wanted to make a bet on the Derby.

The assistant district attorney commented: "I hope she's out of town by the time the Preakness is run."

She was charged with larceny and bail was set at $1000 — the amount it costs an owner to run his horse in the Derby.

Vets See Derby

New York, May 1 (AP).—Six wounded veterans went to Louisville today and watched the Kentucky Derby from box seats—the guests of a Pennsylvania businessman who couldn't get there himself.

The veterans flew to Cincinnati. From there they went to Louisville by car. All are from the St. Albans Naval Hospital here. The trip was arranged through Orville Morrison, 38, Glen Riddle, Pa., businessman.

Fishing in the Snow!

Westmore, Vt., May 1 (AP).—Sportsmen should have carried snow shovels this morning as well as fishing tackle.

An overnight storm dumped four inches of snow in this area as the general fishing season got underway. Fishermen were unperturbed, however, and mushed out to their favorite streams and lakes.

Dodgers Option Two

Philadelphia, May 1 (AP).—Jack Banta and Phil Haugstad, who pitched last year for Montreal and St. Paul, respectively, were optioned to their former teams by the Brooklyn Dodgers today on a 24-hour recall basis.

Ruth in Hollywood

Hollywood, May 1 (AP).—Babe Ruth arrived today to act as movie technical adviser on something he knows a little about—"The Babe Ruth Story." First to greet the Babe was Bill Bendix, who portrays the erstwhile slugger in the film. Mrs. Ruth was welcomed by Claire Trevor, who plays that role.

$15.60 Shot Scores by 1½ Lengths

Havre de Grace, Md., May 1.—King Ranch's Contest romped home with top money of $11,950 in the Edward Burke Handicap, closing day feature of the spring session. The 4-year-old colt was the extreme outsider with the crowd of 13,000, paying $15.60 straight.

The victory was the first handicap win for the son of Sir Gallahad III as he registered a length and one half victory over Calumet Farm's Faultless. E. A. Nicodemus' Laran was third, another length and one half back and two and one half lengths to the good of Walter M. Jeffords' favored Loyal Legion. Henry L. Straus' March Chick brought up the rear.

Contest was low weight of 104 in the field and Jockey Henri Mora put up a sterling ride to get him home. The colt took the lead at the start and led around the first turn and into the backstretch, where Mora took a good hold and permitted Laren to take over the front running duties.

Loyal Legion was in the third slot, with Faultless and March Chick following in that order.

Laran appeared to be a winner when he opened a three-length lead entering the stretch, but Contest still had plenty of run left, and surged through the stretch to get on top within the eighth pole. Faultless launched his bid at the head of the stretch and Loyal Legion dropped back.

Boxing Commission Learns Television Is Here to Stay

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Television's here to stay after all, the District Boxing Commission learned yesterday.

It was concerned particularly with its brand-new $1400 television set purchased for "educational purposes."

When the de luxe set arrived at the commission's office last week, the Senate Appropriations Committee winced. After Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) murmured something about it not being a proper expenditure, the commission waited before uncrating it.

Yesterday, Senator Dworshak seemed to have relented somewhat. He said he was inclined to let the commission "be guided by its conscience."

The Senator hastily added, "But they'll have to bear the brunt of any criticism." Supposedly against the purchase at first, Senator Dworshak said, "After all, the Appropriations Committee can't get involved in every little matter. And, in this case, the money was not appropriated by my committee."

The boxing commission is a self-supporting agency, collecting its revenue from a percentage of all boxing and wrestling shows and license fees.

The commission said it bought the television set with the idea of schooling its referees and instructing seconds. Another reason advanced was that it would give the commissioners an opportunity to observe boxers performing in other cities.

Informed of the criticism, Chairman Harvey L. Miller said, "we thought it would be a good idea, but if there's going to be any row about it we'd just as soon drop it. We're not that interested."

Commissioner Thomas P. Morgan, jr., was more enthusiastic. He said, "by using television, I think we'll be taking a big step forward in boxing. I won't be surprised to see other commissions follow our example. The whole thing's educational."

Citation Wins Derby Ahead Of Coaltown

breezed around Coaltown leaving the quarter pole and his winning margin was one that Arcaro elected.

True there was some poor racing luck behind Citation today, but none that in my opinion would have changed the result.

Grandpere, Billings Crowd

Grandpere broke into Billings, and both suffered. My Request and Escadru were in tight quarters early. But the fact remains that Citation was the handiest sort of a winner—the speed-in-reserve kind.

By his victory on this dark, muggy afternoon that followed morning rain, the gallant colt wiped out the superstition that the winner of the Belmont Futurity and the Derby Trial cannot follow with a triumph in the blue-ribbon event of racing.

He not only justified the faith of Trainer Ben Jones but he also moved the gifted conditioner into a tie with the late H. J. Thompson, who saddled four winners for the late Col. E. R. Bradley.

Moreover, Citation was the third Derby winner for Owner Wright whose Calumet Farm is located in nearby Lexington. Previous Wright winners were Whirlaway in 1941 and Pensive in '44, both trained by Jones who also conditioned Lawrin for his '38 triumph.

Arcaro Derby Champion

It was a big day for Arcaro, too. He finally became the jockey champion of the Derby by riding his fourth winner, one more than Earl (the handy guy) Sande and Isaac Murphy, the famous Negro rider.

Eddie's previous winners were Lawrin, Whirlaway and Hoop, jr.

Arcaro had another reason to be happy. He was riding to give half his winnings (an amount matched by Owner Wright) to Mrs. Albert Snider, wife of the Calumet jockey who was lost while fishing in Florida last winter.

Remembering that he chose to ride Greentree's Diver and then finished behind that stable's Shut Out in 1942, Arcaro said after the finish, "For once I picked the right horse. Citation's on the way to the triple crown."

Crowd Reacts On Citation

Asked if he had any worries during the race, Arcaro said, "I knew I had a great horse under me all the time. The crowd at the head of the stretch seemed to scare him and I tapped him once just to keep his mind on his business."

A tremendous ovation greeted Citation as he came back to the unsaddling inclosure beneath the judges' pagoda across the track and slithered into the winner's circle, a bed of geraniums in horseshoe shape.

There, Mr. and Mrs. Wright received the trophy from Kentucky's Gov. Earle Clements and the Joneses, father and son Jimmy—the latter campaigned Citation in Florida and Maryland—took the bows.

Somebody cracked, "the winner's circle should be renamed Jones' Beach."

The field broke alertly but there was some crowding directly after the six colts, smallest Derby group since 1907, got under way. Grandpere bore out and into Billings which in turn slightly bothered My Request.

Citation Eased to Outside

Citation came out of the gate behind the leading Coaltown and Arcaro almost immediately eased back apparently trying to get the ultimate champ to his favorite position on the outside.

Coaltown, ridden by Jockey N. L. Pierson, then turned on a burst of speed that amazed the customers. He swept into a good advantage as the field came to the finish line the first time around.

Grandpere, Billings and My Request were almost head and head behind the pacemaker as Arcaro gradually sent Citation out. It proved a smart move for Escardru shot up into the group and met trouble along the inside rail, a position that Arcaro might have had but for his forethought.

Going toward the backstretch, Coaltown opened up 4, then 5, then 6 lengths as the stands fairly shook with the roar of the crowd.

My Request Begins Faltering

It looked as if Coaltown, the colt who almost died last year, was coming into his own. Pierson seemed to be "sitting tight" on the colt, too.

But Arcaro already was carving the victory path for Citation. The bay youngster was in the clear and well near the center of the track.

Along the backstretch, the handwriting was on the wall that it was to be an all-Calumet finish.

My Request appeared to be faltering. Billings was showing life but not enough to be a threat and Grandpere and Escadru were dropping too far back to even be considered as money possibilities.

Arcaro appeared to increase the cadence of his riding and for the first time, Coaltown's long lead seemed to be dwindling.

Citation Takes Over

On the far turn, Coaltown was hugging the rail and Pierson had released his grip and was definitely driving. Arcaro continued to keep Citation wide and the colt was now responding to hand pressure.

It was at the bank of the turn into the stretch that Citation really began to run. He swung wide and shot to Coaltown and then passed him. Pierson tried to get more run out of Coaltown, but this colt was no match for his stablemate.

In the run to the wire it was all Citation—out there by himself and apparently not doing his best although Arcaro took no chances and kept him under light urging into the line.

The others came home at intervals And with some merriment, pathetic though it seemed, was a head-and-head battle between Grandpere and Escadru for the doubtful distinction of not being last. Escadru became the humiliated.

Bit O'Silver Slushes Through Mud for Warrenton Victory

By Harry DeMawby, Jr.

Reserve hunter champion was Barbara Joe Shipley's veteran performer Flint, alternately ridden by Mrs. James C. Hamilton of Warrenton and her daughter, Pickens.

The open jumping championship was decisively earned by Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Up and Going, winning two of the three open classes in the hands of Earl Phelps. Runner-up for open jumping honors was High Rock Farm's Rocky, ridden by Joe Green.

Hoyas Win Track Meet

Georgetown's track and field forces romped off with a triangular track meet yesterday at Georgetown by decisively outscoring Washington College and American University.

2 Okla. Aggies Win Mat Titles In Nationals

Ames, Iowa, May 1 (AP).—William Jernigan, Oklahoma A. & M., became the first champion in the Olympic final wrestling tryouts as he won his 114.5 pound final match before a capacity crowd of about 3000.

Jernigan won a decision from Leland Christensen, University of California, to climax his activity in the three-day meet. The two are survivors of this class and both qualify for the U. S. Olympic team.

In an action-filled 136.5 pound bout, Hal Moore, also of Oklahoma A. & M. and third in the AAU, bested Leo Thomsen, AAU champion from Cornell College, to win the championship.

Two AAU champions tangled for the title in the 160.5 pound class with William Nelson of Iowa State Teachers, 1947 AAU champion, winning a decision from Leland Merrill, New York Athletic Club, present AAU titleholder. Nelson thus is the 160.5 pound champion. He and Merrill both will go to London.

The feature bout for the Iowa crowd that jammed this Iowa State College gymnasium came in the 174-pound class when Joe Scarpello, Iowa 1947 NCAA champion, and Glen Brand, Iowa State 1948 NCAA champion, met for the first time.

Brand won a unanimous decision in a hard fought match, and the Iowa State College rooters rang the rafters with their shouts and whistles. Brand thus becomes 174-pound champion with Scarpello runner-up.

Henry Wittenberg, seven-time AAU champion in the 191-pound class from New York Police Sports Association, had his toughest bout in winning a decision from Vern Gagne, Minnesota NCAA champion.

It was the only bout which the wrestling cop had not won either by a fall or default and spoiled his perfect zero score with one bad point.

In a heavyweight match, 235-pound Richard Hutton won a decision over Robert Maldegan, Michigan State. Hutton is two-time NCAA champion.

He'll Talk Politics, Too

King Peter, on Visit Here, Hopes to Raise School Fund To Teach Marooned Lads

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

KING'S CORNER—Former King Peter of Yugoslavia and his pretty Queen Alexandra are due in Washington next weekend. The 24-year-old monarch, who is exceedingly optimistic about regaining throne and country, is here on private business. He'll review the political situation from our angle, contact leaders in American-Yugoslav groups. But Peter's most important job is to raise money, make arrangements to educate some seven to eight hundred Yugoslav boys, ranging from 15 to 19, marooned in camps throughout Germany's American and British zones. These are the lads who, because of their political opinions, Tito would bump off if they dared return home. Come liberation, they'll be badly needed by the anti-Communist forces. After the First World War, when so many Yugoslav youths were deprived of education, American funds financed a college for war orphans at Kamanitza, just north of Belgrade, which proved immensely successful. Today the same kind of institution would have to be set up outside the totalitarian homeland.

King Peter, incidentally, unlike most Balkan kings, is a true native of his own land. He's a great-great-grandson of Kara George (Black George), the lusty, glamorous mountain bandit who, back in the early Nineteenth Century liberated Serbia from the Turks.

Queen Alexandra has an even more romantic lineage. She's the only child of King Alexander of Greece, who died of a monkey bite, and his commoner wife, Aspasia Manos, who is known today as Princess Aspasia.

Latest bulletin on King Michael of Romania's romance is that Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parme has ultimatumed she'll take two more weeks before giving a final decision. If she makes certain religious concessions, the marriage will be possible.

COMFORT CORNER—Last Tuesday's gala opening of "The Search" produced several happy innovations in Washington. For the first time in movie-going history the customer is given a break. At the new Playhouse theater, the seats retract with the tiniest effort, thus saving toes and knees from being trampled by latecomers. There's a dip in the middle of the theater which, for some unexplicable reason, makes it easier for everyone, especially those in front row seats, to see the screen.

STASSEN SUCCESS—Author Louis Bromfield blew into town this week. Louis, whose pet passion is soil erosion, deviated a few moments from technical discussions of the merits of manure vs. artificial fertilizers, to give his opinion of Stassen's success. It's all, according to Louis, a revolt against Washington, its politicians, its methods of pushing candidates. Stassen is uncontaminated either by Washington fanfare or by any high-powered political organization. So, claims Ohio Landowner Bromfield, the farmers are all for him.

ISLE OF CAPRI—Anyone contemplating a vacation stopoff at Capri this summer might be interested to know that Edda Mussolini Ciano is back in her villa. During the war Capri was a rest camp for our Air Force, and by nice irony the elaborate Ciano villa was turned over to honeymooning GI's. Their Italian brides, mostly from Naples, never in their fanciest dreams could have imagined even ringing the Ciano doorbell.

Edda, contrary to reports, never married again. She's seen often in the company of a jeweler named Capuana, who's nicknamed Chanticleer. Capuana, it seems, kept Signora Ciano's jewels for her when she fled from the country. Edda

Tickets for the tour may be obtained from the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; from the Questers, 1529 Wisconsin ave.; The American Automobile Association, or at the first house visited on the day of the tour.

Eastlands on Pre-Campaign House Search

By Genevieve Reynolds

MISSISSIPPI Senator James O. Eastland and his pretty "missus" swear that trouble comes a doubling. June first the Eastlands and their four children, Nell, Ann, Sue and Woods, will have to move from their domicle at 6900 Connecticut ave. Three weeks later the Senator leaves for the Magnolia State to begin his campaign for reelection.

Meantime, Mrs. Eastland spends four or five hours daily scanning newspaper advertisements or telephoning rental agencies with the plea, "can you rent us a furnished apartment or house for three weeks?"

Ironically, the "no home" Eastlands own a big Southern plantation house with miles of acres. But what to do and where to go for a few weeks isn't a problem solved by congressional immunity.

WHEN Alice Abernethy, wife of Mississippi's Representative Tom Abernethy put on a recent radio program, "Meet the Congress," everybody in the home State tuned in for the show. And the only folk back home who didn't get one word of the broadcast were the hometowners in Okolona. Not a single radio in the little town picked up the familiar voices.

ONE day Mrs. Homer Ferguson, wife of the Michigan Senator, returned from an exhaustive day at the USO lounge

The Service Set

By Norma Foust

ANOTHER new Navy family has joined the Capital set. They're the Arthur D. Strubles.

Vice Admiral Struble, formerly commander of amphibious forces in the Pacific with headquarters in Coronado, Calif., has filled the Office of Naval Operations post vacated recently by Vice Admiral Forrest Sherman.

The Strubles will be introduced to other Navy senior officers here, foreign naval and air attaches, members of the congressional military committees, etc., and their wives at a large cocktail party Monday evening at United Nations Club. Host and hostess for the affair are Rear Admiral Thomas B. Inglis, Chief of Naval Intelligence, and Mrs. Inglis.

Admiral Struble and his wife are staying at the Westchester now, but plan to move into their Chevy Chase home on Oliver st. in June. Their two daughters will join them later in the summer.

CAPTAIN A. I. MALSTROM and his wife and three children are making plans to leave Washington near the middle of June.

The captain's new assignment is to the commanding post at the Naval Air Station in Jacksonville, Fla. While in the Capital he has been attached to the executive office of the Secretary of the Navy.

CAPT. H. A. Latta Lawrence and his bride, the former Eilene Gibson, are due back from their Bermuda honeymoon on May 10. They were married in New York on April 22 and will return to make their home at the Shoreham. The captain is a special advisor to the Chief of Naval Operations.

BRIG. GEN. and Mrs. William T. Clement entertained yesterday at a cocktail party at their home in honor of Mrs. Clement's sister, Miss Ann Johnson, who is visiting her from Los Angeles.

Another party was given yesterday by Col. and Mrs. John Bowen at their Fort Myer quarters.

Parties planned in the future for the military folk include Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. E. Dodd's cocktail party Thursday at the Bolling Field Mess, and Col. and Mrs. John C. Whitcomb's party next Saturday. Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley will also entertain Saturday at a dinner for their house guests, Col. and Mrs. Edward Sherburne.

A NEW service organization has been formed by Army officers who served during the last war in the Latin-American theater. The men call themselves the USAFSA-SAW Association.

Col. John F. Richter, now a Federal Trade Commission lawyer, who will be the group's first president, says he's anxious to contact all men eligible for membership.

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

NO SIZEABLE parties are being given in embassy circles now, but several new personalities add interest to the diplomatic scene.

At the British Embassy, Earl and Countess Jellicoe arrived about six weeks ago. The Earl is Second Secretary. Formerly with the Foreign Office, this is the young Earl's first post abroad. He is the son of the First Earl Jellicoe who fought the Battle of Jutland in World War I, and who was responsible for combating the German submarine campaign in 1916-17.

Countess Jellicoe is an Irish beauty, with blonde hair, high coloring and patrician features. She paints like a dream, and she has a young daughter, the fair-haired Lady Alexandra, aged 3.

At the Swiss Embassy a new bachelor attache has arrived. Straight from a post in Paris, he is attractive, socially inclined, and in his early 30's. He rejoices in the name Bernard Turrettini, an old Genevan name. Mr. Turrettini will serve as Second Secretary. Another new Second Secretary at the Swiss Legation is Guy de Rhan, who arrived in town recently with his wife and three children.

The new Naval Attache at the Italian Embassy, Capt. Franco Baslini, served during the war as Assistant to the Italian Secretary of the Navy. After the Italian Armistice, he was one of the first officers to go in with the Allied forces. There is also a new Military Attache at the Italian Embassy, Col. Umberto de Martino.

THE wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, Mme. van Kleffens, has as her house guest her sister, Mrs. Raymond Wilson of Penn, England. This is the first visit Mrs. Wilson has made to this country since before the war. She and the Netherlands Counsul General at Chicago, Jan van de Mortel, were honored at a dinner party last evening by the Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens. Another dinner in honor of Mrs. Wilson will be given at the Embassy Wednesday evening.

Senora Luz R. de Vidal, sister of the Mexican Ambassadress, Senora de Espinosa de los Monteros, is also visiting in Washington. She is accompanied by her two sons, Gustavo, age 20, and Gregorio, age 10. They will remain in Washington a few days and proceed to New York, thence back to Mexico City.

Everyone is sorry to see the Kunjaras go. They leave by plane today for the West Coast, where they will enplane again with their four children for the journey back to Siam. Col. Mom Luang Kharb Kunjara has served as Military Attache at the Siamese Embassy for the past six or seven years.

Miss Stacia Boski, the maid of honor, wore aqua lace and net and carried yellow iris. Richard W. Lawall was best man and the ushers were Joseph H. Campagna and Ian O. Ebert. A reception followed in the church parlor.

Powell Davies performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white marquisette with lace bordering the yoke. A Juliet cap of heirloom lace held her veil and she carried white gladioli, freesia and lilies of the valley. Miss Jane Potter Selden of New London, Conn., maid of honor, wore turquoise faille and carried gladioli. Elias J. Elitier was best man and the ushers were William Mosher Capron and James H. Kranich. McCann—Hoeffken

Miss Helen Watson Hoeffken, daughter of Mrs. Henry Hoeffken of Washington and the late Mr. Hoeffken, was married on April 24 in Phoenixville, Pa., to Lieut. The bride wore a blue afternoon dress with pink accessories and an orchid corsage. Her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Utz, were the couple's attendants.

Lieutenant McCann met his bride in Vienna, Austria, where he served with the military police and she was employed as a War Department secretary.

Bare Feet Break the Protocol Ice, Senator's Wife Learns

just before it closed. She took off her shoes and luxuriated in the freedom of barefeet. Suddenly the telephone in her apartment house rang. "Will it be all right for the plumber to come up and repair a leaking faucet?" inquired the operator.

A few minutes later Mrs. Ferguson answered a knock at the door. Instead of putting on her shoes, she carried them in her hands. In place of the plumber, there stood Mme. Tarchiani, newly arrived wife of the Italian Ambassador.

The shoeless state quickly broke protocol ice. Mrs. Ferguson and Mme. Tarchiani, who, incidentally, has a delectable sense of humor, ended up in the kitchen making a pot of tea together. Since that day the two have been close friends. Going the regular official route, it might have taken six years to arrive at the given name stage.

First inkling of the unconventional meeting came when affable Mrs. Ferguson, who is an international good-will creator par excellence, was introducing Mme. Tarchiani to Congressional Club members.

ANOTHER good story told by Mrs. Ferguson is about the enthusiastic high school girl from the Wolverine State whom she was showing around town during the recent DAR convention. The DAR pilgrimage winner of Michigan was duly impressed with the Capitol, the Washington Monument and other historic sites. But one glance at President Truman as he whisked by to the Senate was sufficient to make her a life time supporter. "From now on President Truman is my Van Johnson," she whispered ecstatically to Mrs. Ferguson.

LOOKS as if two, not just one woman, will peal out the official roll call at the forthcoming national political conventions. For Mrs. Dorothy McElroy Vrendenbrugh, wife of the Mississippi lumberman, it will be a repeat performance. As Secretary of the Democratic National Committee, she officiated at the 1944 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. And as the DEMS jealously boast, Mrs. V. is the first of her sex to win such a post.

Mrs. Dudley C. Hay of Michigan will make history for GOP women. She'll be the first in her party to serve as committee secretary and call the conclave roll at the Philadelphia rally. In this department's enthusiasm for a high appointment for another woman, we forgot to include "first in GOP history" when announcing Mrs. Hay's top post last Sunday.

BITS of This and That . . . Mrs. Karl Le Compte, wife of the Iowa Representative, now boasts a spirited five-gaited horse, "Rex." An expert equistrienne, she's signed up to ride in a three-day contest, dubbed the "Riding Trail," slated for October.

Mary Haworth's Mail

During Man's Life, He Placed the Family In Martyred Endurance of Wife's Scenes; Now He's Dead, Children Find Her Impossible

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In other years mother made scenes and carried on for days at a time; and my father, afraid of a heart attack which she said she might have, humored her hysterics and asked us children to apologize for imaginary wrongs; and because we loved him, we always did.

After father's death five years ago, mother tried her tantrums on me and I threw them right back, which scared her into better behavior, but she said we children were "taking advantage" of her.

At present, she is on my neck, leaving me no peace or social privacy, though I am married and have four children of my own. One of my sisters is in a foreign country, the other went away for the winter (and is still away), which makes mother exclusively my problem.

She expects me to have her to dinner at least once a week; she doesn't hesitate to barge into my friends' homes without invitation to "see" me; and now she is critical of the fact that I want to go away for a few days with my husband and two of our children, which would be my first real holiday in six years.

Created Scene Easter Sunday

ALSO she made quite a scene at Easter, when we'd asked close friends to an egg-hunt and breakfast, with 20 adults and 30 children as guests. Although I'd asked her not to, mother came loaded down with gifts, arriving late, and was so hurt at finding the party in full swing that she made her displeasure obvious to all.

After the party, we took her to church, then explained we were going to a friend's house for supper, whereupon she started blubbering: "I'm not wanted; Easter isn't a family day any more," etc. —and later, to soothe her feelings, I telephoned her and chatted happily, but she was still inconsolable, self pitying and reproachful.

You can't reason with her; it does no good; my sister has tried it time and again, without avail. So what shall I do? I have constant headaches from the nervous pressure; am barking at my children and wonderful husband and thinking and talking of nothing but her. Can you help me?

E. P.

Mother's Never Felt Accepted

DEAR E. P.: You need deep help at first hand to get the hang of coping equably with your mother: deep help in the sense of analytic insight into the dynamics of her anxious, angry, infantile behavior, which signifies that from birth until now she has felt herself progressively to be an outcast from others' hearts.

Whether she comes of wealth or poverty, respectable or wayward parentage, she is the product of a rejecting-type rearing, it seems. Although she may have been given all that money could buy, she wasn't mothered constructively.

Her personality is warped for lack of consistently close, tenderly affirmative protector interest—equating good emotional nurture—in formative years. Hence her neurotic compensatory device of using hysterics to compel attention or solicitude took root.

Mature Stand Is Essential

EVEN SO, the problem she presents in adult years, harassing all and sundry with intrusive display of infantile spleen, is more hers to correct than theirs to endure; and when you begin to understand this, you will be at once—and spontaneously—more kindly yet invulnerable in refusing to let her tantrums sway you.

As matters stand, she shreds your nerves mostly because you haven't achieved maturity in relation to her. You are still in large measure at the mercy of childhood's unconscious reactions to her, a racking blend of outrage, resentment, dislike, affection, wistful hope of her approval, helpless concern for her happiness, etc., which at all times she keeps stirred up.

So what to do? Heal thyself, as the saying goes. Get analytic help in extricating yourself from the morbid fears, irrational guilt feelings, etc., inculcated by your unfortunate rearing (and your father's stymied practice of martyrlogic), which do so much to give your mother the upper hand over your good common sense today.

Stylists Give Rules for Rainbow Tinted Shoes

American women are shopping merrily around the rainbow for shoes this season. Lest the color jag have bad after-effects, St. Louis footwear stylists have drawn up a set of rules for us to follow.

Purple pumps and red sandals are fine for a splash—but be careful what you wear them with. A chart of "safe bets" prepared by the stylists has the following lineup:

Pastel dresses can be worn with bright blue, beige, tan, gray, red, green, black, white usually with purple or navy blue shoes and sometimes with brown.

Brown costumes take green, brown, white or bright blue shoes quite well.

Navy outfits are safe with tan, navy, black, red or white shoes.

Beige costumes go with tan, brown, navy, white, bright blue, red, green or cocoa-colored footwear.

A red dress needs beige or navy shoes.

White wardrobes are well accented with red, green or bright blue—and white with white is best of taste.

A yellow dress does well with brown, navy, green, red (sometimes), bright blue and cocoa shoes.

A gray outfit, the most adaptable of all, harmonizes with purple, tan, red, yellow, navy, black, gray or brown shoes.

"Charm" Shows Vacation Choices

Wardrobe of Cotton Is Ready To Travel With Business Girl

By Peggy Preston

LIFE holds few greater charms for the working girl than those blessed "two weeks with pay."

And how she is going to look during her vacation and how many conquests she will make are factors as important as the holiday itself. So, as a salute to the business girl, Charm Magazine has devoted its May issue to the "two weeks with pay" theme, featuring a complete cotton wardrobe at moderate prices. Yesterday the editors of the magazine, in cooperation with Jelleff's, presented a fashion show in the ballroom at the Shoreham Hotel of the recommended ensembles.

Guests of honor were members of the Washington Advisors Committee for Charm, a group of young secretaries and career hopefuls who keep the editors advised on local tastes and needs in fashions.

Miss Eloise Ray, regional director of Charm, was commentator for the show and described the basic wardrobe needs for a holiday to Bermuda, to New York and a mountain resort. She cited costs of transportation and accommodations which the magazine compiled, keeping the total within the budget of a business girl.

For the girl who cannot afford an out-of-town trip this summer, there was a scene entitled "Fun In Your Own Back Yard." Washington, according to the script, is a versatile vacation spot and it is quite possible to enjoy a real holiday right here, at home.

All the wardrobe items in the show were of Dan River fabrics, durable, washable cottons made up into everything from bathing suits to evening dresses.

COTTON can go anywhere this year and the business girl does not have to pine her heart out for the delicate chambrays and high quality linens that cost as much as silk. She can find highly styled garments in reliable quality fabrics at remarkably low prices—provided she shops early.

In the show were trim little travel or office suits of corded cotton for as low as $16.50. Matched with a "yachting" cap of the same fabric, it is an ensemble that any one might be proud of. Then, there were sheer ginghams, made with full skirt and fitted bolero jacket, also good for traveling and priced at under $15.

Also shown in this price range were skirts of dark cotton with bright roman stripes; pastel cottons to be worn with big panamas for afternoon and evening dates; "convertible" cotton evening dresses, suitable for the beach or a dance on the hotel roof garden.

Tricks for Teens

By Nancy Pepper

So many of your customs and fads start with the movies. Why, that Peter Lawford-June Allyson lesson scene from "Good News" has even inspired you to do your French homework these nights! Has your crowd adopted this movie-made idea yet?

YOUR NEW DANCE—It's that oldie, the Charleston—ever since you saw it danced in "Good News." Bet your parents could give you some fine points on it. Bet they could show you the cups they won in Charleston Contests back in the days when Joan Crawford scintillated more than she suffered.

YOUR NEW CUSTOM — Since you've seen "Captain from Castile," you've revived the custom of giving a handkerchief to your T-Man (Top Man) as a keepsake. He keeps it in his jacket pocket for Show—not for Blow.

They Started on the Screen

YOUR NEW EXPRESSIONS—Instead of saying "Hi" you're calling out "Scudda-Ho, Scudda Hay" because of the new Lon McAllister-June Haver film. And, when someone pops a corny, you're apt to remark very dryly, "Tell it to Northside 777" or "It's the Voice of the Turtle." Your favorite new exclamation is "Oh, Bunions!" from "Always Together" and your whackiest greeting is "So you think I'm yellow; well, shake hands with a lemon" which is pure Bob Hope.

Here's hoping you don't learn any new Baby Sitting ideas from Clifton Webb in "Sitting Pretty."

dipped into pre-election politics in a mild way, working, of course, against the Communists. Another Italian note is that the word MUSSOLINI in huge, jiggly, red letters, is still daubed on the steel structure from which Mussolini and Clara Petacci were hung. The steel crossbars cover a gas filling station. It's a favorite gathering place for Communist orators.

CAMPAIGNLESS SENATOR—Senator John L. McClellan gave quite a celebration the other day in his office. This campaign year, the toughest for any office seeker, the Senator is up for reelection. Since Southern Senators have practically no Republican opposition, their real campaigns are the primaries. Arkansas primary elections are set for summer, but senatorial candidates have to file intention to run 60 days in advance. Last Wednesday was the final date for anyone to file against McClellan—and no one showed up! Arkansans are more than satisfied with Senator McClellan—he's done such outstanding work on flood control and reclamation.

ANDEAN HIGH NOTE—Real musicians have been dropping in at the Shoreham's Paladian Room to watch and listen to the Peruvian Inka-Taki trio. The two ladies and a gent performed at the Pan American Union last summer, at the Pan American dinner last month. They're Peruvians, of course, and they've brought 14 authentic costumes from Cuzco, the ancient Incan capital. The costumes, zipped up a bit to make them even more theatrical, are reds, mauves, woven with bright metal threads, dripping with silver and gold ornaments. The man plays their accompaniments on a large size shepherd's pipe, called an Antara—precisely like those used by the Incas 2000 years ago. All beat tiny drums called tynyas, which sound softer, less insistent than drums used in other Latin-American countries. The trio's act is picturesque, effective, worth seeing.

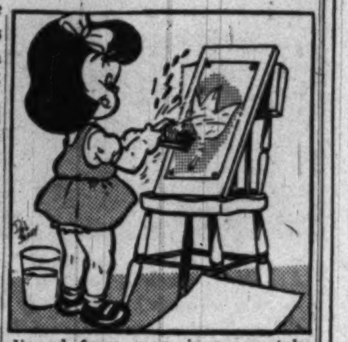
Spatter Printing Amuses the Young

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne



Even young children can make attractive pictures and designs with the help of an old toothbrush and some water colored with ink or with water-color paint.

The method is simple. Take a plain sheet of paper. Arrange on it some leaves with interesting shapes. Dip the toothbrush into the colored water. Hold the brush above the sheet and run a stick or even a finger quickly across the bristles. This will snap off small drops of the colored water evenly over the paper except for the parts that are covered by the leaves. When these are lifted, the untouched paper beneath provides the design, while the spattered uncovered part of the paper makes the background.

While leaves lend themselves to this kind of "art" work most effectively, children can work out other ideas, too. Profiles of dogs or other animals or of people clipped from magazines can take the place of leaves. Pennies leave very satisfactory circles. Odd-shaped bits of paper arranged on a sheet will result in interesting designs.

There's no end to the things one may make, and it's great fun to spatter.

Fresh White and Greenery Is Used to Decorate Chapel

By Dorothy Draper

WHILE VACATIONING in Nassau last winter I was surprised one day at a luncheon party to find myself seated next to the Bishop of the Bahamas.

After lunch, aware of my interest in houses, he invited me to see the Bishop's House, built a couple of hundred years ago. The house, high above the town, looked down over the white roof tops, pink and blue houses and green palm trees out to the harbor with its bobbing fishing boats and yachts, and then out beyond the reef where a large ocean liner lay at anchor in the sun.

The whole house was delightful, but what impressed me most was the simple room that served as a chapel. The present bishop, a true artist at heart, had ripped out the ugly brown tiles and substituted 12-inch black and white ones. He had whitewashed the walls and ceiling a fresh daisy-white.

The altar, a plain table raised on a platform, was covered to the floor with heavy folds of coarse white linen and lace, stiffly starched. Over the altar was a tiny canopy which had formerly been a drab oak color. The bishop had painted it a sky-blue and silver. Two shining brass candlesticks with large hurricane shades and two pots of begonias made the altar seem a cheerful, friendly place.

THE SUN SHONE through the deeply recessed windows with their ethereal sky-blue trim. In each corner of the room there were pots of ceiling-high tropical plants with shiny green leaves. Along the side of the room, mahogany backed benches with sky-blue duck pillows replaced the dreary jumble of furniture that had greeted the bishop on his arrival.

There was a quality of the spirit in this tiny chapel. Its fresh whiteness, the cool green of the tropical plants, the simple altar and the sun shining through the windows onto the black and white tiled floor gave the effect of a lovely old Italian primitive.

When I left, I complimented the bishop on his wonderful feeling for color, and told him I was sure some of his spiritual teachings had fallen on fertile ground. While playing golf, the day before, when I had thanked my caddy for being so solicitous, he had astonished me by answering, "I'se being helpful like de Lord Jesus says to do."

Plans for Anniversary Party

We want to give a little reception in celebration of our 25th wedding anniversary, and want to have it on a Sunday afternoon. We would like to serve a fruit punch, with cookies and cake. Please give me a recipe for a good fruit punch. I have heard of one with a tea base, but do not think I would like it. Also, what quantity would be needed to serve around 125? L. M. D.

When tea is used in a punch it is used as an extender, and the flavor of it is completely covered by the flavors of the other juices. For as many as 125 guests, the cost of the punch will be considerably lessened by using a tea base. However, here is a recipe for fruit punch without tea.

FRUIT JUICE PUNCH

2 quarts grapefruit juice
1½ to 2 quarts loganberry or grape juice.
1 2-3 cup strained lemon juice
4 cups strained orange juice
2 quarts water
1 cup sugar
6 large bottles gingerale

Mix fruit juices, water and sugar and chill 12 hours. Just before serving, add gingerale and pour over large piece of ice in punch bowl. If you wish, you can substitute strong tea for the grapefruit juice in the recipe. This recipe makes aproximately 60 small glasses — so, for one serving for each of the guests, double the recipe.

I must serve at least 80 ladies of the PTA on May 12, and since it is the last meeting of the season they expect a little extra. The amount allowed from the budget isn't much, but I figured on asking donations of open-faced sandwiches. How many would I need? How many should a person take for good etiquette? Now for the drink. Isn't there one mixed with sherbet and gingerale? I thought of lemon sherbet because of the color and its general popularity. How much sherbet and now much gingerale? Would it be good taste in using a white tablecloth with a strip of yellow crepe paper down the center, yellow candles (long tapers) and in the center floating candles? Flowers are still scarce at this time (homegrown ones). If I serve at 4:30, at what time could I mix the sherbet and gingerale and still have it nice and cold without adding any ice, as facilities for extras at the school house makes it difficult? D. B. M.

If the sandwiches are tiny, plan to have three or four for each person. If they are one and a half to two inches in diameter, two or three per guest should be enough.

Yes, there is a drink which is made from sherbet and gingerale. Use it in the proportion of one quart of sherbet to three large bottles of gingerale. Three quarts of sherbet and nine bottles of gingerale will serve approximately one-half cup to each of 80 persons. Since the average punch cup holds a half cup, if you wish more than one serving per person, correspondingly more punch will have to be planned for. It's usually wise to plan on second servings for half the guests—all of them if the day is warm.

The yellow crepe paper would look pretty down the center of the white table cloth, but such an arrangement is a little risky for, if any moisture gets onto the crepe paper the table cloth will certainly be stained. Since you plan yellow candles, and napkins, it seems your table would be very colorful without the yellow paper. Quite the loveliest centerpiece would be flowers and it seems that by the time of your party some of your membership should have some. If not, your idea of floating candles is nice. Use a little ivy trailing out of the bowl in which the candles float, to add a touch of green.

For best results with the sherbet and gingerale punch, it should be mixed just the minute before it is served. Mix it in the punch bowl or pitcher from which you plan to serve it. If this punch stands even five minutes before serving, it is not lovely and cold.

I am attending a formal dance in Philadelphia on May 21st. I have an American Beauty satin (heavy) evening dress. I am writing for your advice, to know if it is too late in the season to wear this type dress. G. F. B.

I am told by the formal gown department of a large Washington department store that they have recently received and are showing a collection of heavy satin gowns for evening wear this season. They also said that such gowns will be appropriately worn in Washington as late as June 15th, so it seems your gown would be very appropriate.

I have two, two-piece dresses of poplin—one is green, one is navy with a little peplum, three quarter sleeve with lace ruffle trim. The skirts are six broad panels, knee length. How could I lengthen them? I. R.

If the peplum goes all the way around, that is, does not open in the front, perhaps you could add another piece of material under the peplum, thus lowering the entire skirt to the new length. Or, if the peplum is opened at the front, could you use a contrasting material for a new peplum, using the old peplum for the piece under the peplum? You may have to let out the seams at the waist in the skirt so it will be wide enough when the extra piece is sewed on, dropping the skirt. If the green two-piece dress has a jacket which extends down over the skirt, perhaps you could add a piece to the top of the skirt under the jacket, thus letting the skirt down until it would be long enough.

Has Anyone Told You . . . ?

Ever bake potatoes on top of the stove? You can, with a new gadget that looks like a shiny midget bomb. The potato is speared on a spit inside the egg-shaped baker, which is then closed and placed on the gas or electric burner. Its makers point out that it is fuel saving and produces a baked potato full of flavor and vitamins.

Now available in a new, smaller-sized economy package is the aluminum foil that makes such an excellent liner or cover for broilers, pans, skillets and baking dishes. As a liner, it cuts down on scouring and rinsings of hard-to-clean utensils. As a cover, it offers maximum protection against moisture loss in food during cooking or in the refrigerator.

In freshening up the radiators, remember that metallic paints such as bronze and aluminum cut down on the amount of heat given off. So does shiny white paint which reflects heat inward, as well as outward. A flat paint with some color in it is the kind that improves the heating efficiency of a radiator. In fact, the darker the color, the more heat given off by the radiator.

Seen that new electric knife sharpener that's such a whiz at keening up the cutlery? Made for home use, it's only about 8 inches long, but has an abrasive sharpening wheel, directly driven by an electric motor.

"MY IDEAL WOMAN"

"Manners are important in my ideal woman," Xavier Cugat, "King of the Rumba," told Phyllis Bell, owner and directress of Washington's Phyllis Bell Ideal School. "And that's very basic, I think, because a woman can be charming only if she is well mannered," concluded Mr. Cugat.

Phyllis Bell is conducting a survey among outstanding men as to what constitutes their idea of an Ideal woman. Miss Bell, fashion, self-improvement and modeling expert, came to Washington five years ago to establish her school after years of experience in Hollywood and New York.

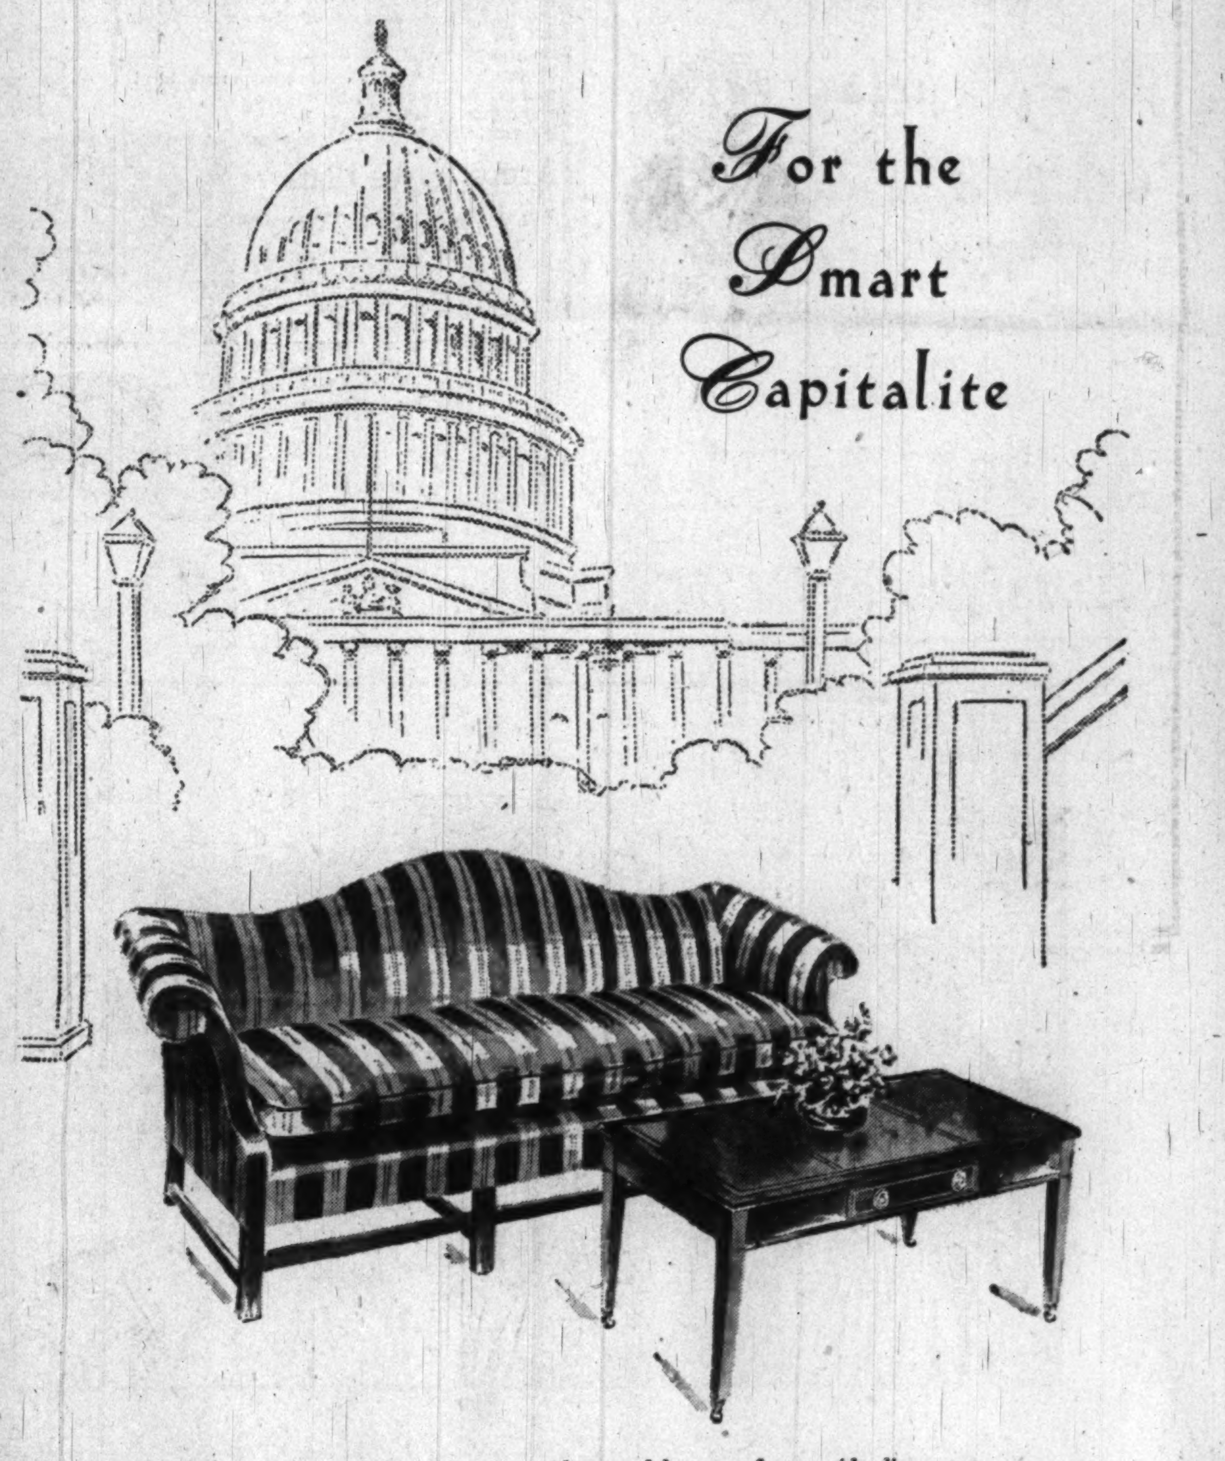
MAZOR VALUES AND SELECTIONS ARE TODAY BETTER THAN EVER



For the Smart Capitalite

Washington is a cosmopolitan city; its residents and homes reflect a wide divergence of manners and decor. Chinese Chippendale is widely used in the better homes because of the twin-continental influence of its design. Chinese Chippendale is the adaptation of Chinese motifs in English furniture. The sofa above is illustrative of this blending of decor. Expansive in size, with one piece down and feather cushion for cloud-soft comfort. The frame is solid mahogany. Steel spring construction for lasting wear. Available in a variety of fabrics and colors. Our decorators are ready to assist with ideas.

Sears, chairman, wearing German, Danish, Swedish and Chinese native dress. Cookies will be unusual, international in flavor, typical of the countries represented.

One of the booths, which never fails to draw hundreds, is the hot dog stand. And because supplies ran out long before the mart closed last year, Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, chairman of the Chevy Chase Garden Club mart committee, has promised 2000 hot dogs and a reserve of another 1000, to say nothing of sizzling hot bacon sandwiches. The outdoor grill and booth will be decorated with antique brasses.

Mrs. Franklin W. Youry, chairman of the Belle Haven Garden Club of Virginia, and members of her committee, will operate a nursery playpen built on a grassy plot at the foot of the Pilgrim steps, equipped with a sand box, a slide, toys for amusement and nurse maids in attendance. Here mothers may park their offspring while enjoying the show.

Mrs. Truman will arrive promptly at 11 o'clock when she will be escorted down the steps and past the booths by Mrs. Albert H. Lucas, president of All Hallow's Guild, which sponsors the fete; the dean of the Cathedral, the Very Rev. John W. Suter; Mrs. William L. Ritchie, mart chairman; Mrs. Forrester Davison, vice chairman, and perhaps the Bishop of the Cathedral and Mrs. Angus Dun.

Shampoo papaya

YOU'RE NOT AS ATTRACTIVE AS YOU MIGHT BE . . . if you don't make the most of your hair! Unfortunately, too few women realize the importance of a shampoo. Often caustic soaps and rinses are used at home and beauty parlors which have a drying, dulling effect, thus robbing the hair over a period of time of its natural sheen and loveliness. The Scout, being a red head, must be especially careful and has tried various kinds before finding SHAMPOO PAPAYA. Now truthfully she will not accept a substitute. Once you try it you'll be a steady user too! Buy it in one of the handy sizes priced 69c up at the Peoples Drug Stores and G. C. Murphy Stores.

Annapolis Plans June Week Events

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 1.—The annual June Week exercises at the United States Naval Academy will begin on May 29, with Army-Navy athletic competition, and end on June 4, when the graduates will receive their diplomas in Dahlgren Hall.

Three brigade parades will be a feature of the week. The first parade will be held the morning of May 29, just after the Navy-Cornell crews race on the Severn River. Army and Navy will meet the same day in baseball, track and golf.

There will be an informal dance for all classes that afternoon, with the class of 1949 holding its "ring dance" that night.

Other events during the week will include the usual receptions and dances, and already reservations are being made in Annapolis for the huge crowd expected here for the June Week festivities.

The Masqueraders, the midshipmen's dramatic organization, presented their annual play for the first time Friday evening in Mahan Hall, the Naval Academy auditorium, with additional performances scheduled for tonight and for May 8 and 9. "Boy Meets Girl," a comedy written by Bella and Samuel Spewack, is this year's production, and was given a hilarious reception at the premiere last night. Producer is Midshipman H. Scott Holder, class of 1948-B, of Calhoun, Ky. Prof. Royal S. Pease of the department of English, history and government, is faculty adviser.

A wedding of interest to their friends in Annapolis took place on April 21, when Miss Mary Adair Skipwith of Ferry Farms and Dr. Carroll Storrs Alden of Wardour were married in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, with Canon Crawford William Brown officiating. A reception attended by members of both families and a few intimate friends followed at the home of Capt. and Mrs. C. L. C. Atkeson in Washington. Dr. and Mrs. Alden then left for an extended motor trip through the South. They will be at home after June 1 in Annapolis.

For 37 years a member of the department of English and history at the Naval Academy, Dr. Alden served as head of the department from 1924 until his retirement in 1941. A graduate of Yale, he also holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from that university and is the author of a well-known United States naval history.

Mrs. Wegner Plans Party

Invitations are being received by 50 midshipmen and their friends for a party to be given by Mrs. Jan Wegner in honor of her son, Midshipman William Wegner, and his fiancee, Miss Jane Rory, of Duluth, Minn., whose marriage will take place on June 5, in the Naval Academy Chapel.

The party will be held in the Sheraton Room of Carvel Hall on Saturday, May 8, from 3 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Miss Jane Swartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Swartz, was hostess last Saturday afternoon at a tea dance for a number of her college mates at Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, of the University of Virginia. Miss Swartz is a member of the freshman class and had as her house guest her classmate, Miss Cynthia Medley. A number of midshipmen were among the guests.

New pledges of the Maryland Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi were entertained by their sorority sisters at a preferential tea on Sunday afternoon at the home of Miss Margaret McGuckian.

New members include the Misses June Ritter, Barbara Lamb, Alberta DeLorme, Louise Wilson, JoAnn Gies and Mrs. Harriet Hodges, Mrs. Margaret Stehle and Mrs. Shirley MacDonald. Miss Marjorie Klakring and Miss Marian Pennington poured.

Relieving Commodore Gurniette will be Commodore T. D. Cunningham, now attached to the Department of Seamanship and Navigation at the Naval Academy. Mrs. Cunningham, before her marriage, was Miss Mary Willson, daughter of Rear Admiral Russell Willson, USN (ret.), and Mrs. Willson, of Washington. The Willsons served several tours of duty here and have numerous friends in Annapolis.

'Bad Planning'

Annex Draws Broadside by Architects

THE Nation's organized architects yesterday contributed their bit to the squabble over location of the Pan American Union's new administrative building, now under way at the triangle formed by Virginia ave., Constitution ave. and 18th st. nw.

"A typical case of maladjustment in planning which is likely to recur unless positive, preventive measures are taken," was the stand taken by The American Institute of Architects.

The AIA didn't stop there. It also declared planners missed the boat in development of Lafayette Square, Library of Congress, and other landmarks.

James R. Edmunds, jr., past president of the AIA, said in a statement published yesterday in the AIA Journal: "There are many might-have-beens which we may cite to illustrate possibilities. We have another outstanding example in the half-realized scheme for Lafayette Square, as projected in the Treasury Annex and Chamber of Commerce, blocked by the noncooperation of the agency which erected the Veterans Administration Building; the Treasury Annex, in turn, having nullified the civic contribution of the Riggs Bank and American Security in subordinating their cornice lines to the Treasury; and the Treasury itself, blocking the Avenue view of the White House which was to have been reciprocal with the Capitol.

"Even the Capitol is blocked from the east by the Library of Congress, which also adds a golden dome to the House of Representatives wing as viewed from the west."

In speaking of the Pan American annex building controversy, the AIA, through its Committee on the National Capital, said it "regrets that it was not called upon to advise until after contracts had been arranged and construction operations begun."

The architectural group warned that "this is but one of many maladjustments in planning that have occurred in the past and typical of others bound to recur unless positive, preventive measures are taken."

"There could have been no valid objection to the interposition of the Annex if it had been a larger building occupying an entire block on the established building line," the AIA declared. "But there are valid grounds for questioning its eccentric placing which crowds the triangle formed by the oblique crossing of Virginia ave.

Summing up the argument, the AIA article concluded: "The committee cannot say that the location is disastrous, nor that the building, which is a distinguished design from the hands of a great architect, will impair the aspect of the Interior Department."

250 Dwellings Planned for 60-Acre Tract

$4,000,000 Project Underway In Bethesda

One of three types of homes under construction at Alta Vista

Kitchen of this home boasts built-in radio and drop-leaf table

Sample house at Alta Vista Terrace is furnished. Mirror over mantel is included in each home

FORTY-FIVE homes are nearing completion at Alta Vista Terrace, Bethesda, Md., subdivision, and another 45 are under way, according to the developers, Michael Grodsky and Charles Howard. About 250 dwellings in a 60-acre tract are planned in a two-year construction program estimated to cost four million dollars when completed.

Grodsky said construction costs have risen about 8 per cent since construction started last September. Homes are priced in the $16,500 to $19,000 bracket.

The builders said buyers are now expecting "extras" in homes in contrast to 1946 and 1947, when they were willing to buy homes with the minimum of added features.

In keeping with this trend, Grodsky and Howard have included several features not ordinarily found in speculative home construction, such as a built-in radio and drop-leaf work table in the kitchen, electric dish and clothes washer, metal venetian blinds, built-in bookcases and full-length mirrors.

The subdivision has three different home types, with each dwelling individually designed to emphasize variety. Variations include bay windows, stone panels and entrances, garages, front and side porches, setbacks and exterior materials sich as brick and clapboard siding. Lots average 55 by 130. E. M. Fry, Inc., is sales agent.

The 60-acre tract is off Old Georgetown rd., about two miles beyond the Bank of Bethesda.

Rowland Announces Realty Corporation

Corporation officers are Rowland, president; Philip M. Talbott, vice president, and Everett B. Coxen, secretary-treasurer.

Actress Reveals Plan to Buy Fairfax Estate

Screen Star Lynn Bari's press agent announced yesterday that the Virginia-born actress was negotiating to buy Whitehall, a large estate in nearby Fairfax County, from its present owner, John W. Gordon of Washington.

"Miss Bari, a native of Roanoke, said yesterday she hoped to return to Virginia for permanent residence some day. Her relatives are negotiating for the purchase of the historically famous mansion, which is a few miles south of Washington, D. C.," the press release added.

Mapping Speeded

Real Estate Firm Uses Air Photos

TECHNIQUES in mapping land from the air, once used in pinpointing German targets for Allied bombers, are now used by Previews, Inc., Nation-wide real estate firm, in surveying large tracts of land and preparing them for sale.

John J. Watson, head of Previews' town-planning department, said the introduction of aerial photographs into the commercial real estate field will mean large savings for property owners. Land contour maps necessary for planning a subdivision can be completed in as little as one eighth the time and one quarter the cost of the usual ground survey method, he declared.

Watson cited as an example a topographical map of a 1700-acre tract near San Francisco, now being planned for subdivision by Previews. This map, drawn from vertical air photographs, cost about $2.50 per acre, compared to $10 per acre for a map prepared by ordinary methods. The topographical map was ready in three weeks.

"A conventional map made by a surveyor walking with a transit and level would have taken six months," said Watson. "The air map was as accurate as one from a ground surveyor."

The basic instrument used by Previews' planners is a stereocomparagraph, which gives the mapmaker a three-dimensional picture of vertical air photographs. Actually the map-maker looks at two pictures of the same territory, taken from two different angles as the airplane approaches and leaves the area.

The two blended impressions give the picture depth. As the observer peers through the lenses at the flat photographs, hills emerge, and the height of trees and cliffs becomes immediately calculable. What appeared at first to be table land is revealed as rough, irregular ground lined with small ridges and pitted with hollows.

Where wartime observers looked for hidden gun emplacements, the subdivision expert searches for a continuing ridge suitable for a roadbed, or an uncharted stream which can be dammed to create an artificial lake.

Weathered Oak Herb Farm Sold to Honeywell School

Ten-room manor house at Weathered Oak Herb Farm, Bethesda, Md.

THE WEATHERED Oak Herb Farm in Bethesda, Md., 23½ acres of beautifully landscaped grounds and English style buildings, will be the new headquarters of the fashionable Honeywell School, private day institution.

School officials took possession of the property yesterday in a $125,000 transaction, according to Col. Frederick Jones-Davies, co-owner and founder of the school with Dr. Donald Honeywell.

The tract is on Bradley blvd., west of Seven Locks rd., beyond Bethesda Country Club, and is one of Bethesda's landmarks.

The property formerly was owned and developed by Charles J. Merryman, who established an elaborate replica of old England there. A 10-room manor house, tenant and herb house, old blacksmith shop, office, several greenhouses and other outbuildings were built of materials with an appearance of weathered oak, and a resulting appearance of antiquity.

Built From Old Homes

Roofs and timbers came from old homes in this part of the country which Merryman purchased and razed, shipping structurally sound timbers to the Bethesda tract.

Grounds are landscaped with valuable boxwoods and other shrubs.

The new headquarters adjoins 22 acres on Bradley blvd. known as Sky Meadows, already owned by the Honeywell School. Col. Jones-Davies said the main building of the Weathered Oak Herb Farm would house music, art and library activities.

Cottages and tenant house will provide housing for faculty members.

New Classroom Building

A $50,000 classroom building will be started next month in the Sky Meadows tract by Sauter & Gingery, Bethesda builders.

The Honeywell School is now housed temporarily at the 105-acre Pook's Hill entsate on Rockville Pike, formerly the home of Crown Princess Martha of Norway.

The institution moved to Pook's Hill following a $300,000 fire last December which razed the main building of the school, then located at Wilson lane and Bradley blvd.

The $125,000 sales transaction was handled by William H. Smith, sales manager for Allied Realty Corp. of Chevy Chase, Md., for M. Walton Hendry, Washington attorney, who purchased the property last year from Merryman. Merryman died only two weeks ago in Gordonsville, Va.

States Spend More For New Housing

Chicago, May 1 (U.P.)—The National Association of Housing Officials reports that several States are expanding their housing programs under recent court and legislative action.

In Massachusetts, plans call for construction of 20,000 housing units under a new law authorizing a 200-million-dollar extension of State credit for local housing. The measure permits local housing authorities to issue serial bonds for housing construction, with the State guaranteeing the bonds.

Single houses, garden apartments and other multiple dwellings will be built. Massachusetts housing officials said more multiple units than single houses will be built. They will rent from $35 to $45 a month.

Chicago is going ahead with a city-State slum clearance and rental housing program. Its cost may total 50 million dollars.

In Rhode Island the Legislature is considering a bill which would permit cities to subsidize redevelopment either through the sale of bonds or through appropriation of tax refunds.

Realty Roundup

HOPE THAT the House of Representatives would not pass the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing bill was expressed yesterday by W. S. Hoge 3d, president of the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board.

The Senate passed the bill two weeks ago. The House pigeonholed a similar bill last year.

Hoge termed the bill "another nosedive into the taxpayers' pocket." He said the House has a chance "to avert this needless plunge into a socialistic program undreamed of before in this country." The House Banking and Currency Committee is scheduled to start hearings on the bill Monday.

"Public housing has been advocated as the salvation for the slum-dweller and the needy, but debate on the Senate floor disclosed that proponents actually don't have that in mind at all," Hoge charged.

"Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), a member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Housing, stated: 'in no area have I found more than 4 or 5 per cent of the welfare cases—those who really need proper housing—actually in public housing. We found that wherever slums were allegedly cleared out, and public housing built to house the slum dwellers, only the cream of the crop got into public housing.' He added that 'not a single witness anywhere realized that public housing as now constituted bars the very low income groups," Hoge declared.

In Country Club Grove Area

Television Tower Fight Developing in Arlington

A PROPOSAL to build a 400-foot television tower in Arlington's Country Club Grove area appeared certain yesterday to draw fire from local residents when it comes up for a hearing May 11.

On that day the Arlington County Board will be asked to grant a permit to erect the tower and a one-story transmitter building on a 4½-acre site in the 3700 block of N. Upland st.

Nearby home and property owners are fearful the project will (1) lower local real estate values, and (2) spoil the beauty of a "distinctively residential area."

The petitioner, Dumont Laboratories, Inc., wants the site to transmit television programs of Station WTTG.

Corporation Attorney Francis J. Ortman, an Arlington resident, pointed out recently that WTTG has been ordered by the Federal Communications Commission to remove its present tower from Washington's Hotel Harrington because that location is not high enough to give proper area reception.

Ortman said the Arlington location provides "the best possible site because of its elevation." He pointed out that the transmitter would pay Arlington an annual $2300 in taxes, with almost no demand for county services.

When the matter comes before the county board May 11, however, County Manager A. T. Lundberg has said he will recommend the permit be denied.

The 4½-acre site, Lundberg said, immediately adjoins an undeveloped tract of more than 100 acres. He said he based his objection on the fact that the county has no way of knowing where roads and other facilities will be placed when the area is developed.

Among objectors to the tower is the Country Club Grove Citizens Association with 89 members, which declared at its April 12 meeting that the construction "would adversely affect property values in this community."

Attorney Christopher B. Garnett, 4503 N. Rock Spring rd., said the area in question "should remain a residential area of the highest nature."

Garnett, chairman of the Arlington Planning Commission now working on a new master zoning plan, said his group would consider changing the ordinance to forbid construction of such towers in purely residential areas.

He estimated that "about 150" property owners in the proposed tower vicinity are opposed to its erection.

Kensington Project To Include 10 Houses

Examine Circuits Before Adding Electric Outlet

Before adding even one more outlet to existing electrical installations, a householder should check the circuit to prevent an overload, according to the Construction Research Bureau of New York.

The standard electrical code limits each circuit to 12 outlets except under a few special conditions. To determine how many outlets are on any one circuit, loosen the fuse for that circuit and count the number of outlets which are dead. If there are less than 12, it is safe to add another outlet.

If the proposed addition would cause this limit to be exceeded, it is necessary to run a new circuit from the fuse box to the new work. A qualified electrician should always be employed.

cent during the first three months of 1948. 2. Mortgage loans outstanding, largely to home owners, increased another 3 per cent during the quarter. 3. Borrowers are prompt in meeting monthly installments.

Production of building materials has accelerated much faster during the last two years than it did following World War I, the Construction Industry Information Committee reported yesterday.

"The rate of increase in building materials output was three times as great in the first year following World War II as it was between 1918 and 1919," a CIIC report said. "In 1947, the second postwar year, the rate of increase in production was almost twice as great as from 1919 to 1920, the corresponding period after World War I. The upward trend is continuing in 1948.

"It took only two years after 1945 to raise production by 50 per cent, while it took five years after 1918 to increase output by a similar percentage."

Hobby Parlayed Into New Building Product

Plaster mix is poured into form on work table at Wardwall plant in Clinton, Md. E. A. White, in background, has formed a company to promote the process. Forms can be set up on any building site for one-site construction

Mix hardens into a wall section in 10 minutes, forms are removed and special membrane paper is separated from Wardwall section. Notice fissures resulting when wet plaster mix on paper causes paper to crinkle and draw up

(More Pictures on Page 5)

By Conrad P. Harness

A 67-YEAR-OLD Government employe who dabbles with plaster as a hobby has parlayed the gooey mass into a new building product to beautify homes. The idea could make him a rich man.

WARD

Albert N. Ward, 3303 Brown st. nw., a Treasury Department employe, has patented a new type of decorative wall section, with the strength of conventional plastered walls, but 50 per cent lighter and much easier on the eyes.

Ward calls his brain child the "Wardwall." It is made in block form, usually an inch thick and fastened to wall studs by plaster of paris or emulsified asphalt.

The big secret is in the novel and beautifully textured designs which Ward's system puts in the wall blocks.

The process is simple: Ward mixes up a batch of plaster, using most of the basic materials, such as gypsum and water. To make it light, insulative and fireproof, he mixes in a lightweight aggregate.

Secret's in Paper Used

THE mix is poured into forms laid out on a work table. Forms are made by putting four steel bars together to form a square or rectangle, or whatever size or shape of block is desired.

The secret of Ward's invention is a special sheet of membrane paper placed inside the form before pouring begins. When the wet mix hits the paper, the latter crinkles up and sticks to the plaster mix.

Ten minutes later the mix has hardened, the forms are pulled away, the block is lifted up and the paper is pulled away by hand.

The paper, in drawing up and crinkling, has produced wavy grooves or minute fissures resembling weathered timber or a prominent wood grain.

Ward predicts wide use of his product in interior walls of offices, homes, churches, etc., where an architect desires a decorative wall effect. It can be manufactured easily at each building site.

The inventor has already tried out his product in a downtown office and two private homes. Mortar is put between the blocks to form a beautiful, continuous wall.

Company Formed

NO DEFINITE price for the building product has been set, each job being estimated separately. However, the inventor said the cost would be too much for the average home to have Wardwalls in each room. He envisions use of the product especially in libraries, dens and living rooms, where that "extra something" is desired.

Ward said he had been experimenting with plaster for the last 40 years. He and E. A. White, 414 6th st. nw., have founded the "Wardwall Company" to exploit the process. White holds the local franchise for the Permastone building process.

White said the firm plans to license one company in each city to manufacture and erect Wardwalls. He now has a small plant at Clinton, Md., where production and experimentation with the process is under way.

Ward has been an auditor with Claims Control, Internal Revenue, 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw., for the last four years.

Dwellings Planned By Donald L. Brown

A building permit application has been filed by Donald L. Brown for construction of nine dwellings in the 1400 block of Whittier pl. nw. Leon Brown is architect. Builder is Aldon Construction Co.

Fire in Hollow Walls Major Peril, National Group Finds

Ability of flames to spread rapidly through walls, floors and other concealed spaces is a major cause of the steadily mounting loss of life and property by fire, it is asserted in the first report issued by the President's Conference on Fire Prevention.

To prevent this, "all concealed spaces should be effectively fire-stopped with suitable material," the report declares.

Because it is naturally fireproof and needs no chemical treatment, mineral wool insulation has been used for many years as a fire-barrier in concealed spaces. The National Bureau of Standards reports that a wood-lath wall filled with this substance, which is made of rock, smelter slag, or glass, will withstand the passage of fire for one hour and the studs and other framing members will still carry their load after such exposure to fire. The time lengthens to an hour and a half if the plaster is backed by metal lath.

Modern Codes Sought

The conference, set up by President Truman a year ago, is composed of mayors, municipal building officials, fire prevention experts, insurance company representatives and other interested groups and individuals.

In an effort to provide greater fire-safety from a structural standpoint, the conference is now seeking to establish modern, uniform building codes throughout the nation. "There can be no doubt that modern building regulations, if generally adopted and enforced, would bring a significant reduction in our national fire losses," the report states.

Such codes would require fire-stopping of hollow spaces, the use of more fire-resistive materials throughout a structure and enclosure of stairways and other vertical openings to restrict the spread of flames.

Plan to Save Expense

Of 3322 municipalities surveyed by the conference, 1342 had no building code whatever and 612 of the codes in effect were over 20 years old.

Finding that expense of drafting and publishing building codes has often prevented their adoption, the conference is seeking legislation in each State to eliminate this expense by adoption of codes "by reference." Under this plan, a community would select an effective code already in use and by an inexpensive public notice announce its adoption.

Says Briton Might Move Down Under

Sydney, May 1 (U.P.).—Sir Bertram Stevens, a former Premier of New South Wales, Australia, believes millions of residents must move away from the British Isles before Britain can make a successful economic recovery.

"Britain must reduce the population of the British Isles," he said. "Millions of people can be brought to Australia."

"I do not think Britain's present plans can succeed," he said. "Fundamentally her problem is to feed more than 45 million people in an area that is only from 30 to 50 per cent self-sufficient.

Virginia Home Needs Are Studied

Blacksburg, Va., May 1 (AP).—Tailoring farm home plans to the needs of rural people is the aim of a widespread study now under way in Virginia.

The study is part of a project being carried on by the United States Bureau of Human Nutrition in cooperation with the agricultural experiment stations of six Southern States. It is financed under the Hope-Flannagan Act.

Mrs. A. L. Dean, home economist for the Agricultural Experiment Station here, heads the Virginia phase of the work. A staff of four girl interviewers will gather data by asking questions of farm house owners in selected areas of 14 counties in the Piedmont and mountain sections of the State, Mrs. Dean said.

Answers to questions in interviews in Virginia and other States will form the basis for farm home plans to be drawn up by the United States Department of Agriculture to meet the requirements of various farm activities and income groups.

The selected interview areas in the State, she said, are in Frederick, Fauquier, Greene, Louisa, Powhatan, Charlotte, Pittsylvania, Bedford, Augusta, Roanoke, Patrick, Wythe, Washington and Russell Counties.

She emphasized that the survey is solely for the purpose of getting information on farm activities as a guide to housing needs. The cooperation of persons interviewed, she added, may mean more efficiently designed farm homes in the future.

The questions asked in the interviews, Mrs. Dean continued, will concern such things as uses of storage space, porches, basements and various rooms; preference as to location of different activities in the home; type of refrigeration in use and its location; water supply, and choice of heating unit.

Planned for the farmer, this house does chores. Note the farm office near the front door, the utility room for laundry and canning, adjoining the kitchen, and the wide cellar stairs without a turn. This house, Plan AA-116, was designed by the Agricultural Associates, Inc., 25 Elm st., Ardsley, N. Y. It covers 1200 square feet without porch and contains approximately 2400 cubic feet with a complete basement. The designers suggest the bedrooms at the right facing north. This would bring morning sun in kitchen and dining room

By David G. Bareuther

NEW YORK, May 1 (AP).—If any house could be called a "machine-for-living" it would be the modern American farmhouse.

While town or suburban dwellings can be effeciently planned for comfort, attractive appearance and outlook, durability and general livability, the farmhouse must have all this and utmost usefulness, too.

Everybody and everything on a successful farm must work. The house has as many jobs to perform as any hired man.

Unlike its city counterpart, the farmhouse calls for an office. Farming is a business and requires space for records and crop reports, reference books and agricultural literature. Buyers must be interviewed, workers must be hired and foremen conferred with.

The Agricultural Associates, Inc., 25 Elm st., Ardsley, N. Y., specialists in farm building design, say the best location for the farm office is adjacent to the front door. Here it is accessible from the main highway as well as from the barnyard.

This location eliminates the use of the living room for business purposes. It also cuts down the amount of "tracking in" on muddy days and thus reduces housework.

The farm office can be planned as a multiple purpose room. It can double as a guest room, or child's room. A day-bed, serving as a sofa in the daytime, does this trick. Many a town house exploits such multiple use in library-guest room extra sitting room combinations.

The women of a household like this extra room advantage for sewing. It saves their living room from threads and lint. It is a godsend for parents with growing children, who claim priority to the living room for their jive sessions.

Another distinguishing feature of the modern farmhouse is an ample work room adjacent to rear door and kitchen. This can be a general utility room. A farmhouse may have a complete basement, but usually storage space is at a premium on the abundant farm. So a general utility room adjoining the kitchen is virtually mandatory.

Here the men can come in from the field, wash up, and perhaps take a shower—if adequate equipment is planned. At the same time this room offers space for laundry, canning, and other more or less messy jobs that the women like to keep out of the kitchen.

The Agricultural Associates recommended a wide stairway to the cellar with no twisting or turning, to make the carrying of large quantities of produce easy and safe. This stairway is wider than the average town house cellar stairs. It should be wide enough for anything to be stored in the basement.

A farmhouse can be built without a basement, but because of the need for storage space, and the necessity for foundation footings below the frost line in all Northern States, not much economy can be achieved through elimination of a cellar. Construction of storage room above grade can cost as much or more in Northern locations as excavation.

Closets are important in farmhouse planning, as well as in the design of any dwelling. The Agricultural Associates champion sliding doors of all closets because of the economy of space achieved by avoiding swinging doors.

Most U. S. Cities Provide Annual Vacations

Chicago, May 1 (U.P.).—Almost all major United States cities now grant employes at least two weeks vacation annually, according to the American Municipal Association.

The association studied vacation and sick leave policies in cities with more than 100,000 population. It found that vacations with pay range from two weeks in 56 cities to four weeks in two cities.

All but two of the Nation's 91 biggest cities have standard or formal vacation plans in effect. The average vacation is 2.2 working weeks.

Average sick leave allowance is 1 day per month, or 12 days per year.

The dwelling features a built-in garage and trellised patio with a floor plan which will fit the average city lot. Earl B. Bailey, Falls Church, Va., architect, drew up the plan for a home under construction in Falls Church for Mr. Archibald Smith. The arrangement of the breakfast nook and neo-angle bath lighted by a corrugated glass partition are novel and efficient. The basementless home has a concrete floor, finished with asphalt tile, with radiant heating pipes embedded in the concrete

Three Men Freed On $3000 Bonds In Housing Case

Los Angeles, May 1 (AP).—Three men, including a former member of the American Legion's National Housing Committee, are free under $3000 bond each after their indictment by a Federal grand jury in connection with construction of 55 homes for former servicemen at Fresno, Calif.

The three are Richard M. Vail, the former housing official; William C. Albany, chairman of Fresno County's grand jury last year, and Wade J. Howells, a real estate salesman.

The indictments, containing 53 counts, charges they wilfully built houses not in accordance with plans and specifications, and sold the dwellings above maximum selling prices fixed in applications for priorities.

The three denied guilt, and said facts pertaining to the construction prices in relation to ceilings were all known to the Veterans' Administration, the Federal Housing Administration and the lending agency, a bank.

'48 Setting Record for New Homes

Home building for the first quarter of 1948 points to a record-breaking year, FHA Commissioner Franklin D. Richards said Saturday. Figures released by the Government agency show that twice as many new homes and apartments were started in January, February and March under FHA inspection as were begun last year in those months.

More than four times as many dwelling units, built under FHA inspection, were completed in these first three months than in the same period last year.

Other construction trends announced by Richard included a gain of 21 per cent in applications for FHA mortgage insurance covering existing structures over 1947 applications.

First quarter figures follow:

1. New dwelling construction starts under FHA inspection were 60,432 in 1948 compared with 26,562 in 1947; a gain of 128 per cent.
2. Dwelling units completed under FHA inspection, 51,479 units in 1948 compared with 11,798 in 1947; a gain of 336 per cent.
3. Applications covering new construction for the first three months of 1948, 178,435 compared with 76,909 in 1947; a gain of 132 per cent.
4. FHA applications covering existing structures, 43,186 as compared with 35,638 in 1947; a gain of 21 per cent.

Spring Surplus Of Eggs Studied

Blacksburg, Va., May 1 (AP).—A movement is under way to do something about the annual spring surplus of eggs which lowers prices and allows poor quality eggs to flood the market.

Under the Hope-Flannagan Marketing Act, nine Southern States, including Virginia, have launched research to help farmers and marketing agencies find ways to handle the spring surplus more profitably.

The researchers need information which includes, among other things, how many eggs are going to market, where they are coming from, where they are going, how they are handled and what proportion are low quality.

In the past two months, Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station has contacted 700 egg producers in 23 counties of the State. The selected group was asked to mail monthly reports to the Department of Agricultural Economics here.

100-Bu. Corn Growers To Get Va. Cirtificates

Hopewell, Va., May 1 (AP).—Certificates as charter members of the Prince George County "100 Bushel Per Acre Corn Club" will be presented to two farmers and their sons by Governor Tuck in a ceremony here May 13, county agricultural agent Homer Noblin announced.

The certificates, the first to be awarded in Virginia, will go to Andrew Moncol and his son, Edward, of Route 2, Prince George, and Joseph Chudaba and his son, Joseph, jr., of Route 1, Prince George.

The four qualified for the certificates by producing more than 100 bushels of corn per acre last year as cooperators in a demonstration sponsored by Virginia Agricultural Extension Service in conjunction with the Solvay Process Co.

New Ideas in Home Gadgets

This electric home knife sharpener turns drudgery into fun and eliminates the precision cutlery problem. In use, the knife is held lightly in the hand, with the blade inserted in the stainless steel clips. Clips hold the blade against guide plates which direct the knife edge against the abrasive wheel at the correct angle for precision sharpening. It's a product of the Cory Corporation of Chicago.

Kitchen odors are no problem in the house equipped with germicidal lamps.

Although originally developed to kill air-borne bacteria, these ultraviolet lamps produce ozone and activate the oxygen in the air which helps to reduce strong cooking odors.

This odor-reducing effect was first noticed in infant wards, schoolrooms, and crowded offices where germicidal lamps were first installed to disinfect the air.

The fixture picture above is equipped with one 15-watt General Electric germicidal lamp, made of a special glass which transmitsh powerful germ-killing, ultraviolet radiation.

To take full advantage of its odor-reducing effect, the fixture is mounted directly above the stove, 6½ feet to 7 feet from the floor so that the eyes are never exposed to its direct radiation of ultraviolet energy.

Katie Ponders On Locations For Annuals

By Kate Perkins

IF I HAD Aladdin's lamp, I'd wish for only two things today: a little greenhouse all my own and a gardening wardrobe that would make me look like those girls in the illustrations.

It would be heaven to have a little glass house in a protected spot with no worries about sunlight. I've been measuring and rearranging tables for a week so I can take advantage of every inch of southern window space for my two seed flats.

This is the time of the year when everything, indoors and out, wants attention. With remarkable discipline and fortitude, I'm focusing on the problem of annual borders. My major difficulty is that I want to plant too many different things. Most annual seeds can be started now, so this is the time for decision.

Annuals in the first place are highly personal things, and an annual border is as individual as handwriting. People develop borders for color, for fragrance, for show, for cutting. You can have red, white, pink, yellow or blue borders. Anyway, a border is something you develop yourself, filling it with flowers, colors and effects that appeal to you. There are even people who have marigold gardens, or just rose gardens.

I've got to devote some time to vegetables as well as flowers, and as a weekend gardener, I'm planning my border for both cutting and effect outside.

My choices for this year are zinnia, larkspur, shirley poppy, snapdragon, carnation, calendula, aster, dianthus, scabiosa.

I must have mignonette, candytuft, stock, ageratum, phlox, salpiglossis, violas and petunias. And portulaca, for it's my very favorite flower and I stick it around all over the place, even in the vegetable garden. I am also going in strong for nicotiana, and Johnny-Jump-Up.

And probably, before I'm through, I'll get some other seeds planted—and wonder later where to put them. I'm planting several types of zinnias and so on. Life would be a lot simpler for the gardener if the world of flowers were smaller. The choice is limitless.

With all the ingenuity our American designers have shown I should think someone would have invented a gardening costume that was right for gardening. Overalls are about the best produced so far, and they look pretty bad after more than a couple of hours of work. Slacks, if they fit decently, are uncomfortable and usually too warm. Shorts are too short. Levis—those blue denim work pants dudes made popular during summer vacationing at ranches—are impossible.

Fluorescent Tubes Brighten Rumpus Room

If you're planning to remodel your recreation rom or build a new one, here are some clever ideas for built-in lighting that you may want to consider.

The cheerful recreation room pictured above is pleasantly illuminated with long lines of fluorescent lights hidden beneath the windows, under the bookshelvese, at each side of the bar, and in the sign above it.

You may not be able to add all of these light touches at once, but you'll certainly want to start with the novel shelf-valances used to light the small half windows which are found in many basement rumpus rooms.

As you will notice in the photograph, a valance is placed at the bottom of each window rather than at the top as is usually done in conventional window treatments. The top of the valance is enclosed with a panel of frosted glass which provides shelf space for bric-a-brac or plants.

The valance can be made of construction board in any home workshop. It should be designed to fit the window.

Because of the great variety of lengths of fluorescent tubes (the length varies according to wattage) you must be sure to measure the window carefully and then choose the fluorscent tube that most nearly corresponds in length. Average size windows usually take either the 30-watt fluorscent (36 inches long) or the 40-watt (48 inches long).

Lamps should reach to within 3 inches of the end of the valance so that it will be lighted evenly. However, make certain when using more than one lamp to place them end to end in the center to avoid dark spots.

Portable brackets using 20-watt fluorescent lamps were mounted on either side of the bar to balance the lighting on that side of the room.

There is also a good sized storage pantry. A powder room, guest closet and open rear porch complete the first floor.

The beautiful open stairway leads to a delightful upstairs sitting room, and three unusually large bedrooms. two of them about 15 feet square, with adjoining tiled bath, and the master bedroom (15x20), with its private tiled bath, wood-burning fireplace and master's wardrobe, in addition to twin cedar lined closets. All rooms have excellent exposures with a view of the lovely country club hills.

There is a storage attic, also a full basement with maid's room and bath, wine cellar and an attached 3-car garage. The heat is oil, vapor.

Rarely does one have an opportunity to obtain a home of this quality.

Tomato-Skin Potatoes Sought in Research

Copenhagen, Denmark May 1 (U.P.).—Potatoes with tomato skin is the object of extensive experiments at the Danish school of agriculture. It is hoped that such a new type of potato with a tougher skin will be more capable of resistance against pests.

The experiments so far have only led to tomatoes with skins like potatoes, but the scientists go on with their experiments.

Bermuda Revives Old Custom of Opening Gardens

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 1.—An old Bermuda custom has been revived this year—that of opening the private gardens of Bermuda Garden Club members to visitors. Each spring before the war, owners of Bermuda's many outstanding gardens opened them to the public.

Several gardens in Warwick Parish, those of Mrs. A. B. Smith of Harmony Hall; Mrs. Ellen Shipman's Ease House, well known authority on gardens; and Mr. and Mrs. J. Laken Baldridge's Burnt House, were made available recently to visitors. Later the gardens at Chelston, home of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dubbs, and at Mangroville, home of Mrs. Bianchi Tompkins, were opened to receive visitors each afternoon. Following, several other well known Bermudians threw open their gardens to the public, among them Norwood, owend by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Aeschlimann, Mayfair owned by Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Hilborn, and Widdrington the home of the mayor of Hamilton, Mr. H. St. George Butterfield. Also included in this group was Cedar Lodge, owned by Mr. and Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin, of Toronto.

During May, visitors to the islands who wish to see some of Bermuda's outstanding gardens can call the Bermuda Garden Club, for a list of the gardens currently open.

Non-Wilt Varieties Recommended

Easily Grown Tomato Is a Garden 'Must'

By James H. Beattie

A heavier yield for the ground space occupied is produced by tomato plants trained on a fence, arbor or stakes

THE tomato is popular because it is easily grown and yields a high return. Tomatoes are also rich in ascorbic acid and carotene.

Under favorable soil and other conditions, a half-dozen plants will produce enough tomatoes to meet the needs of the average family during summer months. If canning for winter is planned, 25 plants should meet the needs of almost any famliy.

Last season, 60 plants in a local garden yielded about 20 bushels, or a half-ton of tomatoes, certainly enough for three or four families. These plants were sprayed throughout the season with tri-basic copper solution as an insurance against late blight.

Excellent soil drainage, freedom from interference by the roots of trees, hedges and other plants, and plenty of sunshine are essential to raise garden tomatoes. Tomatoes should not follow themselves on the same land year after year.

Fertile Soil Needed

FERTILE, but not too rich land is necessary. Tomatoes are grown on all kinds of land from sands to heavy clay, but it is important that the land be neither very poor or excessively rich. Garden soils heavily manured and fertilized for several years are not suitable for tomatoes. On such land, trouble from blossom drop and too rampant vine growth are almost sure to occur.

Old garden soils in a high state of fertility may already be too rich for tomatoes. Commercial fertilizers or plant food should be used very cautiously. The use of a handful of superphosphate under each plant is usually beneficial, even if the soil is already rich.

On poorer soils it is wise to mix a few ounces of commercial fertilizer into the equivalent of a bushel of soil under and around each plant. On old garden soils most persons use three or four ounces of commercial fertilizer applied in a ring a few inches in diameter around each plant. If, during the later stages of growth, the need for additional plant food becomes apparent, side dressings of soluble fertilizers may be applied.

Someone recently questioned the use of manure on tomato soil. Some well-rotted compost, dried cattle manure, or ordinary stable manure may be mixed with the soil under and around each plant, provided the land is relatively infertile, but when this is done, the rate of application of commercial fertilizer should be sharply reduced.

Much trouble has been experienced through the use of poultry manure on tomato land. If it is used at all the rate of application should be less than half that of other forms of manure. Many use this and other similar materials as a mulch around the plants, usually with satisfactory results.

Non-Wilt Varieties

FUSARIUM wilt is widespread in the Washington area and it's usually safest to plant only wilt-resistant varieties. Excellent non-resistant sorts are grown by many gardeners fortunate enough to have escaped wilt infestation. Here's a suggested list of Fusarium resistant varieties. Early Pritchard. Main crop: Pan America, Marglobe, Rutgers.

Both Rutgers and Marglobe are easily obtainable.

The tomato is a warm weather plant and outdoor planting should not take place until both soil and weather are warm. May 1 is usually regarded as the earliest safe date for setting tomato plants in the Washington area. Plants may be set at any time after the earliest spring date until about midsummer, thereby assuring a continuous supply until late autumn.

While a normal, high producing tomato plant may eventually develop from small weak seedlings such as are commonly sold to gardeners, there is much to be said in favor of the use of sturdy, well developed plants. It's especially important to have large pot grown plants at almost the blooming stage if real earliness is to be obtained.

Those who plan to set late tomatoes have an opportunity to provide excellent plants by merely sowing the seed now or a little later in a small seed-bed in a corner of the garden. These plants may be lifted with a large lump of soil and moved to the garden site without any shock. Thin seeding and thinning are essential to success with this method.

Garden space is nearly always at a premium and it usually pays to set tomato plants relatively close and train them to some form of support. The number of plants per unit of space may be doubled by following this plan. With the plants trimmed to one or two main stems and trained to stakes, they may be spaced about 18 x 18 inches apart. If on a single trellis or on the garden fence, the plants may be much closer.

Strong Supports

TOMATO PLANTS and their load of fruit are heavy and the stakes, trellis or other form of support should be strong. Such things as slender stakes and a trellis made of string stretched between stakes are unsatisfactory. Wind action will damage tomatoes supported by these flimsy devices.

Side shoots appear at the points where the leaves are joined to the main stem. If these are removed the practice restricts the plant to one stem. If two main stems are desired, one of these side shoots should be left near the base of the plant. The fruit clusters appear opposite the leaves. It's important that all these be left undisturbed. For tying use strips of cloth or soft twine, placing a tie just below each fruit cluster. Trimming and tying must be

Your Garden In May

THINNING. The sooner you give your seedlings room, the bigger and better the crops will be.

WATER OR NOT? When in doubt, don't water! But if plants really need water, apply it to a depth of 6 or 8 inches. Use sprinkler with fine spray on seedlings, Do not drown them. A hose can have its nozzle covered and tied with a cloth bag and laid in between the plant rows. When the ground is well soaked, drag hose to the next dry part of the row.

WATCH THE TREES. When oak leaves come out, it's time to plant snapbeans. If you have room, sweet corn may also be planted at this time.

VERY TENDER CROPS. The following should not be set out until warm weather has definitely arrived. Vine crops, lima beans, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant.

KNOW YOUR LIMAS. When the leaves are well out, plant lima beans. Pole limas mature in from 11 to 13 weeks and they bear until frost. Bush limas bear about 10 days sooner and may be harvested for about a month. Pole beans require strong poles, eight or nine feet tall. Be sure to set the poles at least a foot deep before planting. Plant beans ½ inch deep with eye down, a few beans to a pole. Plant pole beans at north end of garden so that they will not shade the other plants from sunlight. If two poles in one row are brought together with two poles in the next row at the top and all four poles are tied together in this position, it will not be necessary to sink the poles deep into the ground. They will hold each other up.

BUY PLANTS TO SAVE TIME. Those who lack time, space or patience, usually buy cabbage, broccoli, pepper, tomato and celery plants. Where onion sets are scarce, plants of these may be purchased too.

GOOD COMPANIONS. The space between tomato plants may be occupied by lettuce, radishes, spinach, early beets or carrots, which will be out of the ground before the larger plants need the space. This practice applies also to peppers, broccoli, eggplant and pole beans, between which small, quick crops may be grown. This is called "intercropping" or "companion cropping."

CORN. In a garden of limited space, corn is another luxury crop. On a space three by three feet, you could grow about six or seven ears. Think what a crop of other vegetables that spot could produce! Corn is apt to shade other vegetables. It is also popular with worms and beetles. Yet, home-grown corn on the dinner table is a great treat.

VINE CROPS TAKE ROOM. Vegetables produced from vines which ramble over the ground take up a great deal of room in a small garden. These vine crops include cucumbers, melons, pumpkins, squash and sweet potatoes. These crops are very sensitive to cold and should not be planted until the weather is really warm. Bush squashes such as Zucchini or Early Prolific Straight Neck take much less space.

PROTECT THE CABBAGE NECKS. When setting out cabbage, broccoli or cauliflower plants, protect them against root maggot by putting a collar of tar paper around the stem flush with the ground. This prevents the parent insect, which resembles a small house fly, from laying eggs near the plant.

STANDING COLLAR AGAINST CUTWORMS. To protect cabbages, tomatoes, peppers and eggplants against that smooth, fleshy, dingy brown caterpillar known as cutworm, wrap a paper collar around the stem of these plants when set out, using several thicknesses of newspaper or thin cardboard, a few inches above and an inch below soil level. Poison bait is also effective.

Transplanting Aided by Starter Solution

By Alfred Putz

THERE are many little tricks for more successful gardening, and the use of a starter solution is one of them. As the name implies, this is a solution to start plants into greater vigor. By this time you may have guessed that it concerns fertilizer in liquid form, and you are right.

Any of the several complete fertilizers analyzing 4-12-4 or 5-10-5 may be used, or you may prefer one of the special solid or liquid brands recommended by the manufacturers for liquid feeding. If one of the latter is chosen, read carefully the directions for the specific brand, as the dilution should not exceed the recommendation of the maker.

If the regular 4-12-4 or 5-10-5 fertilizer is used, take one cupful and stir into 12 quarts of water. Agitate several times during the next four hours and set aside for use the following day, unless you have to do your transplanting right then and there. Just before use, stir again vigorously and keep it agitated while applying to the plants so that the solids will be evenly dispersed. Some gardeners use just the clear liquid, but that deprives the plants of some of the ingredients which are insoluble in water.

Gardener sowing seeds in furrow wet with starter solution

Starter solutions have given such good results that many gardeners use them on all transplanting jobs, from the tiniest seedlings to large specimens. The method of application is an important factor to success, and it is rather unusual in that the solution is poured on the roots rather than the soil after they are covered.

Starter solutions, at double strength, also work well with seeds.

Cities Spend Record Sums On Planning

Chicago, May 1 (U.P.).—Cities are spending record sums on their plans for orderly growth and redevelopment, the International City Managers Association reports.

The association said a survey showed that 617 of the 1072 United States cities of more than 10,000 population now have official planning agencies.

The "big 13" cities of more than 500,000 population spent $1,727,100 operating their planning agencies last year and are expected to spend more than that in 1948. The figure covers planning costs only. No construction costs are included.

The highest public planning expenditures were those of Philadelphia, Los Angeles and New York. Those cities spent $267,100, $266,700 and $263,000, respectively, last year.

Some smaller cities spent considerably more than the larger ones on public planning. Rochester, N. Y., with population of about 350,000, spent $103,000.

Simple Tricks Can Make Kitchen Appear Larger

Housewives can avoid claustrophobia in today's cubbyhole kitchens by utilizing modern color schemes and reflecting surfaces to create illusions of size.

Small postwar kitchens can be made to seem larger if homekeepers will follow five rules for magnifying pint-sized sculleries, according to a Tile Council of America report on trends in kitchen building and renovation.

The rules are:

1. Decorate the room with bright colors. They will make the kitchen seem larger—dark colors make it appear smaller.

2. Kitchens should contain as many reflecting surfaces as possible. Such materials as ceramic tile and glass increase light and give an illusion of size.

3. Avoid strongly contrasting colors. They make a cubicle seem smaller.

4. Keep cooking utensils out of sight when not in use to avoid that cluttered-up effect.

5. Most important, keep the kitchen clean and shining bright at all times.

Tomato Easily Grown, Yields High Return kept up regularly, otherwise the plants will become tangled.

Weed control requires frequent but very shallow stirring of the soil around the plants. Many escape this small chore by mulching around the plants with straw leaves or some other similar material.

Fortunately Fusarium wilt may be circumvented by using resistant varieties. Late blight of epidemic proportions in 1946 was relatively unimportant in 1947. Fortunately there is a chance to escape its ravages should the disease appear in 1948. It is wise to avoid the use of land for tomatoes that was in potatoes last season. Plants from tubers left in the soil may be a source from which the blight is carried to tomatoes.

Spraying or dusting with fixed copper fungicides constitutes a real line of defense against late blight. These materials should be used on a basis of an ounce of metallic copper in three gallons of water. Dusting is usually less effective than spraying. A fixed copper dust containing 5 to 7 per cent actual copper should be used.

Fungicides such as Dithane Z-78 and Parzate also seem to be quite effective in controlling late blight. Spraying or dusting should start early, about blooming time and continue at intervals of about 10 days throughout the growth period of the plant.

Avoid Prostration

Summer heat in the home can be minimized if the house is insulated with mineral wool because this makes living quarters as much as 15 degrees cooler.

Give Your Roses the Right Start in Life

Throughout the summer until September, roses should be cultivated regularly to destroy weeds and aerate the soil. The soil should never be allowed to bake. One method used to keep a crust from forming is the application of a peat mulch. This also helps conserve moisture. After a heavy rain, it is advisable to hoe and rake rose beds just as soon as the soil has dried sufficiently.

Any watering given roses should be thorough. Sprinkling is bad for your roses since it brings feeding roots to the surface and causes burning. Water early in the morning, preferably. During extremely hot periods, it is a good idea to hose plants with a strong stream of water several times during the day.

Forty-niner and Tallyho, two new hybrid tea roses, have won the National Rose Jury's coveted title, "All-America Rose Selections for 1948."

Both roses competed with the best new varieties of the Nation's leading rose growers during two-year trials in 18 official test gardens.

Judged on the qualities of the ideal rose, Forty-niner and Tallyho achieved near perfect scores and demonstrated that they could flourish in any part of the country.

The outstanding feature of Forty-niner is the color of its petals . . . a rich yellow outside which contrasts and yet harmonizes with a vivid red inside. The yellow color is most evident in the bud, which is a chrome yellow, sometimes overlaid with pink. This changes to straw yellow in the open blooms. The inside surface of the petals is an orient red which turns cherry red as the blossom ages.

The stems of this rose are long and straight, usually very heavy and are quite free of thorns. It has a mild fragrance.

A rich spicy fragrance, unique coloring and graceful form in the open bloom were major reasons for Tallyho's selection as an All-America rose. The plant branches continually, throwing out long straight flower stems with a beautiful bud at the top. Bi-colored, Tallyho has an unusual tint that is entirely new to roses. Its coloring varies according to the weather and planting location. While the outside of the petals fluctuates from crimson to cardinal red, its inside surface exhibits several shades of pink including Tyrian rose, China rose and phlox pink.

Both will be available for gardeners this fall.

1. Unpack plants as soon as they arrive from the nursery and soak roots in a bucket of thick, muddy water for 6 to 8 hours before planting. If planting has to be delayed for a few days, cover roots with soil and keep covered, tops and all, with wet burlap or straw.
2. Most important points in planting roses are preparation of soil to a depth of 24 inches. Dig hole large enough for roots to be spread out with 4 to 6 inches of drainage at bottom. Roses will grow in soil that grows good vegetables, but ideal mixture for finest bloom and growth is soil plus 15 per cent rotted manure and 25 per cent peat moss, and a cupful of special rose food mixed through the soil.
3. Plant rose so that graft will be at ground level of the bed. Pack soil firmly about roots, and when hole is half filled with soil, pour in a bucket of water, then fill with soil. Top few inches should be soil plus 25 per cent peat moss. Space hybrid tea roses 16 to 18 inches apart and floribundas 18 to 24 inches.
4. After planting, hill up 6 to 8 inches of soil over the tops to prevent their being dried out by wind and sun. As soon as new growth has started well, this covering should be removed. At this time plants should be sprayed or dusted with a special rose spray or dust and 1 tablespoon of rose plant food should be worked into the soil

'Living Theater' Dying? Army Unhorses 'Apache'

By Richard L. Coe

YUKATY-YUKATY-YUKATY: With the National all too likely to go over to the movies in August, and Pittsburgh's legit house, the Nixon, set to be torn down in 1950, what's happened to that plan of the New York theater people to popularize the living theater around the country? . . . Pretty soon there won't be many legit theaters left . . . Ken Murray sends this reporter his recordings of "Bill and Coo," winding up his note: "But I've got you this time—they're unbreakable." . . . Unbreakable, my pet monkey . . . The Mercury record people, who boast all over the album that their records are unbreakable, will be but horrified to learn our two discs came in 12 rectanular pieces.

MAJ. R. J. SMITH, over at the Pentagon, has been looking at those full page ads of "Fort Apache," Keith's next, also aghast . . . Those ads, say the major, show the Apaches fighting on horseback . . . "The Apaches," Major Smith rumbles quietly, "never fought on horseback. They always dismounted and then fought, used horses for transportation only." . . . Major Smith's authority is Col. Arthur L. Wagner, looked to as the final word on military history . . . "The Apaches," wrote the colonel in 1893, "habitually operate on foot. The Sioux is probably the best type of mounted soldier." . . . One person who'll be surprised to hear this is a certain general's daughter I met recently . . . She did research for the picture.

DON'T BE TOO surprised when you find yourself walking UP as you get closer to the screen of the new Playhouse . . . Raised hob with a first-night blonde who'd had a couple . . . The chairs are placed that way so the front-rowers won't have to crane their necks to see the screen . . . Tricky, wot? . . . Off agin-on-agin Daylight Saving Time playing cartwheels with schedules of the open-air, drive-in theaters . . Tallulah the Bankhead booms from out in Ioway that she'd ADORE playing with the National Celebrities Golf Tournament Sunday, May 16, but at that point, helas! she'll be moving "Private Lives" into Spokane from Seattle or vice versa . . . Hottest reading of the week: "Hollywood on Trial" (Boni & Gaer, $1), Gordon Kahn's verbatim accounts of the Un-American Activities Committee at work . . . They oughta film that one.

LATEST MOVE of the psychologists to take over the country: The magazine, Journal of Living, has assigned Psychologist Ernest Dichter; Ph.D., to review movies . . . His pitch is ideal enough to please both those who hate pictures and the managers who think every one they show is terrific . . . The doc's memo on the Warners' "Lady from Shanghai" goes like this: "Stimulating and challenging, but its illumination of ugly characters does not particularly recommend it for gay, escapist moods. But, if you feel somewhat down already, especially because of money matters, it has a lesson that may give you a lift" . . . What sorta talk is this, doc, anyway?

THAT LINE ABOUT "Zlotnick" in "State of the Union" certainly bangs home a laugh at the Palace, but how come? . . . It's one of the tricks Frank Capra used to make the film appear fresh, since he couldn't go on inserting headlines the way they did on the stage . . . Katharine Hepburn made 32 different takes of that situation for as many key city spots throughout the country . . . Each exchange has its own special prints . . . How are Lindsay and Crouse going to get a new approach to "Life with Mother," which Detroit sees next month? . . . They've moved the family up to the Clarence Day summer home at Harrison, N. Y., for the first two acts, which will be played in sets designed by Donald Oenslager . . . The last act is in the Days' Madison ave. home and will use the design created for the original nine years ago by Stewart Chaney for "Life With Father."

RAY DOOLEY, whom everyone's been trying to lure back to the stage for years, will be making the trip a week from Tuesday . . . She'll join Husband Eddie Dowling in "An Evening of Comedy by Richard Harrity," with Eddie producing . . . In honor of the Experimental Theater success which brought Harrity's fortunes to a boil, it will be called "Hope's the Thing," with "Hope's the Thing with Feathers" as the final of the three short plays for Gotham's Playhouse . . . "The Big Clock," which got mild shrift from the four Washington reviewers, acclaimed in New York as the season's best thriller . . . Those New Yorkers! . . . They'll bite at everything.

LOTS OF ACTIVITY in Gotham already for next season's musicals, reports Keith Andes, that husky schoolmaster-turned-"Chocolate Soldier," . . . "Things usually don't start stirring until the middle of August," writes Keith, "but at this early date they're giving auditions for the ever-lovin' angels. Of course a break in the market or gosh-knows-what could scare all of 'em back into their holes, but right now they're ready for a lively September." . . . Tops in expectancy is the Deems Taylor musical from Daniel Defoe's "Moll Flanders." . . . It'll cost about $215,000 to raise the curtain on this, but Producer Frank Chapman, Gladys Swarthout's husband, has a good pack of it in sight.

BEFORE THE CURTAIN went up on Friday night's "Inside U.S.A."—the Beatrice Lillie show—half a million bucks were in the Ziegfeld till and the best you can get for seats is midsummer . . . The new Theater Arts assures itself a sale with economy-minded book collectors: Each issue contains the full script of a recent hit . . . First is "Joan of Lorraine." . . . There'll be two more issues before the mag goes monthly in October . . . "Medea" will be next, with "Command Decision" to follow.

Bach's Mass to Ring Out

By Paul Hume

JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH never heard a performance of his great Mass in B Minor.

This is the opinion of Mendel and Spitta, two authorities on the life and music of the Leipzig giant. The mass was begun in 1733 and completed in 1738, 12 years before the composer's death. But the constant pressure of duties as organist of St. Thomas Church in Leipzig, and responsibilities of raising a large family, combined with musical problems of the times, made performances of such magnitude difficult, and often out of the question.

In 1733, Bach presented the Kyrie and Gloria to the Elector of Dresden. These first two movements were followed in the next five years by the Credo, Sanctus, Osanna, Benedictus, and Agnus Dei. The score is one of the monuments of all time and, in view of the growing custom of giving annual performances of it, promises to remain in the public ear.

Thursday at 8:30

THURSDAY night at 8:30 in Washington Cathedral, the mass will be sung for the second successive year by the Cathedral Choral Society, under the direction of Paul Callaway. Last year's performance by this chorus was Washington's first hearing of the work by a local organization. In 1925, the Bethlehem Bach Choir, assisted by members of the Philadelphia Orchestra sang the work here. On that occasion, Charles Trowbridge Tittman, Washington bass, was one of the soloists.

This week's soloists will find Edwin Steffe returning to the Cathedral where he was bass soloist for some years. Heard with him will be Nell Tangeman, mezzo-soprano, and William Hess, tenor, both of whom sang in the mass last year. Ruth Diehl is to be this year's soprano. Greatest burden in the vocal solos falls to the mezzo soprano, who sings the taxing "Qui Sedes" and the Agnus Dei, and joins the soprano for the "Et in unum Dominum" duet.

Hardest of all the solos in the mass is the "Laudamus Te" in which Bach matches the mood of the text with an ornate vocal line, interrupted periodically with trills on every beat. This solo is sometimes taken by a soprano, sometimes by the contralto. Callaway follows the more traditional custom of giving it to the lower voice, so that Miss Tangeman will have plenty to keep her busy.

Two solid arias go to the bass, who sings the lines from the Credo, "For Thou Only Art Holy", and later, "And in One Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church". The soprano sings in two duets, one with the mezzo, and one with tenor, while the tenor labors with the high-lying aria, "Blessed Is He that Cometh in the Name of the Lord."

Key Instrumentalists

OF EQUAL importance with the vocal soloists are the instrumentalists who play the intricate parts assigned to them, materially aiding in the erection of the great tonal drama. Ralph Kirkpatrick, outstanding American virtuoso of the harpsichord, will play the accompanying passages allotted that instrument.

Lois Wann and Engelbert Brenner play the oboi d'amore, or oboes of love, instruments which, like the harpischord, reach back to Bach's own time. These instruments have a somewhat heavier tone

Triple Threat This Year

It's Radio's Headache Time

By John Crosby

THE buds are blossoming, the candidates are limbering their larynxes and radio networks are steeling themselves for their quadrennial headache—the allotment of time to political candidates. Two new elements make this year's headache a little severer than usual. One is Henry Wallace. The other is the Federal Communications Commission's recent Port Huron decision.

The interjection of the Wallace third party means that a controversy has three sides now instead of the normal two. It is a general policy to give the opposition free air time to reply to purely political talks and, since there are now two oppositions, this means twice as much time.

The situation this year is further complicated by the fact that there are almost as many Republican presidential candidates as there are Republicans in public life. Of course, anyone has the right to pitch his hat into the presidential ring, but that doesn't mean just anyone can get a half hour on NBC to beat the drum for himself.

The networks use common sense in deciding who is and who is not a genuine candidate.

Stassen Not Bashful

CANDIDATES start asking for air time the moment an election is over, and their requests reach a crescendo about a year before the next election. Network executives are guarded concerning which candidate is the biggest pest, but some of them will admit that Harold E. Stassen is well up there. "Stassen is on the phone demanding air time roughly every two days," one high executive said in a harrassed voice.

Just when a President becomes a presidential candidate is also a matter for common sense. If President Truman had dwelt on the glories of the Irish instead of on Henry Wallace in his St. Patrick's Day address, neither Wallace nor anyone else probably would have been given air time to reply. As it was, Wallace was given a half hour to reply.

The networks collaborate more closely on political speeches than on anything else. If Thomas E. Dewey, for example, wants a half hour on Tuesday night, NBC, which has many of its most popular shows on that night, may ask CBS to take over. In turn NBC will take the politicians off CBS's neck on Friday nights, when CBS has a strong lineup.

The Communists are entitled to time in States where they are a legal party, and they have been given time in the past. They haven't requested any time this year.

You can't buy time on the air to further a political cause in any year except an election year; up to then it's on the house. The rule, adhered to by all networks and stations, is that time is free until after the nominating conventions. The nominee is given free time to deliver his acceptance address, but after that he pays cash at regular commercial rates. (There are rumors of outrageous overcharging by some stations, but the networks use the regular rate card.)

Eight Millions Cost

THIS year political parties will pay an estimated eight million dollars for their campaign oratory. Henry Wallace, whose third party will hold a convention even though there isn't much of a contest, will have to pay like anyone else. However, the networks still use a certain amount of judgment in allotting time so that the richest party doesn't hog the air.

The Port Huron decision, which radio executives are now protesting, holds that a radio station or network cannot cancel a political broadcast even if it contains libelous material.

Radio stations never had the power or desire to censor political broadcasts, but speeches were always reviewed for objectionable material. If the speech contained material which might land the station into a lawsuit, radio executives tried to persuade the speaker to change it. If he wouldn't, they canceled the speech. This is no longer permissible, and the networks are afraid this leaves them wide open for all sorts of irresponsible utterances.

Ninety-two per cent of the Nation's radio stations which intend to sell time to political candidates will demand cash in advance. That applies to everyone

Only 15 per cent of the radio stations will permit candidates to plead their cause by singing commercials.

Babbitt Disinterred

"STUDIO ONE" disinterred "Babbitt" not long ago and presented it unwittingly as a sort of museum piece. Sinclair Lewis wrote "Babbitt" in 1922, which is a long time ago but not long enough. Lewis' best works now reside in a sort of literary purgatory, from which they may emerge in 20 or 30 years as authentic

Arrogant, Too

Hepburn's Curt, No Doubt of It

EVERY PICTURE in which Katharine Hepburn stars produces another Hepburn story. Miss Hepburn is as unpredictable as Southern California weather.

HEPBURN

It has been printed dozens of times that she is difficult to interview. She is. Yet she has been interviewed hundreds of times. The legend, however, still persists—helped along by Miss Hepburn herself.

Any cameraman in Hollywood will testify that it is tough to get a posed shot of the actress. She'll elude them whenever possible. Yet she never objects to candids, dosn't worry about retouching and isn't ashamed of her freckles. If the cameraman washes them out, or flattens those high cheek-bones, he'll be on the receiving end of a riot.

The only equipment a good lensman needs is a fast pair of legs. Hepburn never rides when she can walk. Any excess weight that might be added by the cookies, homemade, which are a permanent ritual on a Hepburn set, is "run off" by the star who is perpetually in a hurry.

Fair play is a fetish with her. Hymie Fink, a Hollywood cameraman of 35 years' standing, can attest to that. He says she's the only star in his experience who paid off a bet. Mr. Fink was determined to get a picture of the actress, who was equally determined he wasn't going to get it. She was on her way East and didn't want to bother.

"If they do," answered Miss Hepburn, "I'll mail you a check for $100."

Fink didn't get his picture. Next day, sure enough, there was Miss Hepburn splashed across a news sheet. Some cameraman had caught her dashing to the plane. Before Mr. Fink was finished reading the paper he received a wire.

"Pick up your $100 at the Beverly Hills telegraph office," it read. Signed was the name—Katharine Hepburn.

Artist Zang looks at Jane Cowl, her handkerchief and her role of "The First Mrs. Fraser," next week's attraction on the National stage

Jane Cowl Opening Here In 'First Mrs. Fraser'

JANE COWL, her style, her laugh and her handkerchief return to the National stage for a week's visit Monday night. The star's current vehicle is "The First Mrs. Fraser," the St. John Ervine comedy which she revived early this season in New York.

Miss Cowl is fully recovered from the taxi accident which caused the closing of the play several months ago. Her current appearance marks a return to the stage after almost six years, which she devoted, except for a brief tour in "Candida," to her wartime work as chairman of the Stage Door Canteen.

The star's supporting company is headed by Reginald Mason, Marylyn Monk, Richard Verney, Kendall Clark, Dorothy Steele, Frederick Bradlee and the veteran Mrs. Priestly Morrison.

Ervine, the London drama critic who once switched jobs with New York's Alexander Woollcott, is writing of marriage and divorce in "The First Mrs. Fraser." Mr. Fraser has divorced his first wife and regrets the move. The second Mrs. Fraser is a young miss who is not only ruining him with extravagances but is plotting divorce so she may marry someone else. When Fraser turns to his first wife for sympathy, he finds she is considering an ardent suitor.

The comedy made its first New York appearance 20 years ago with Grace George in the title role, a part created by Marie Tempest.

Ilka Chase in Star Role In 'There Goes the Bride'

THE ACCENT is on comedy in the George Oppenheimer play, "There Goes the Bride," which plays at the National Theatre the week beginning Monday May 10. Ilka Chase and Robert Alda are starred.

ILKA CHASE

Miss Chase is the daughter of Edna Woolman Chase, editor of Vogue Magazine. Ilka, instead of basking in the reflected glory of a famous parent, has carved a career of her own. Her diversified activities include enviable careers as an actress, a popular lecturer and a writer of best sellers, latest of which is "Free Admission." In addition to these varied enterprises, Miss Chase has appeared in several motion pictures and has starred in two important radio shows, "Luncheon At The Waldorf" and "The Ilka Chase Show."

Robert Alda, who costars with Miss Chase, is the young man who created the George Gershwin role in the movie "Rhapsody In Blue." His appearance in "There Goes the Bride" marks his initial stage appearance.

Featured in the cast is Harold J. Kennedy, who has graced many a stage and lecture platform in and around Washington.

C. U. Show on Tonight

TONIGHT SENDS up the curtain on Catholic University's annual musical comedy, always the finale of the speech and drama department's winter season.

This year's musical is called "Alley Moon," with book and lyrics by Walter Kerr and music by Stephan Allers. The run will extend through May 15 in the new university theater on the campus.

Kerr, an instructor of the school, is author or coauthor of many of the group's past musical successes and also is directing the cast of 60. Other musicals Kerr has been associated with include "Sing Out, Sweet Land," "Yankee Doodle Boy," "Cook Book," "That's Where the Money Goes" and "Count Me In."

Evelyn Davis, noted Washington dance director, is staging the dances. Heading the cast are Meredith Schoonover, Louis Camuti, Alice McGrattan, Bob Moore, Anne Chodoff and Dan Rodden.

SIGMUND ROMBERG will give his concert in Constitution Hall on May 11 for the benefit of the Variety Club of Washington's welfare fund.

Soloists will be Kirsten Kenyon, Donald Johnston, Marijane Maricle and Morton Rappe. Romberg will present his own individual stint at the piano and the program will be backgrounded by his concert orchestra of 60 pieces.

Kirsten Kenyon's most recent success in the theater was achieved in the leading feminine role in "Song of Norway."

Within the past few seasons, Donald Johnston has risen from student ranks to the enviable position of having been selected by Toscanini for several Nation-wide broadcasts.

Marijane Maricle, after appearances with the Starlight Opera Co. in Dallas and a course at the Juillard School of Music, was chosen for an important part in the Broadway hit, "Finian's Rainbow."

Morton Rappe began his singing career at the age of 11, over the radio. "Discovered" by Eddie Cantor, he since has appeared with Kate Smith, George Jessel, Sophie Tucker and Raymond Massey in a series of All-American programs.

Tickets for the Romberg Concert on May 11 now are on sale at the Symphony Concert Bureau, in Homer L. Kitt's store, 1330 G st. nw.

than the modern oboe, and more closely approximate the English horn.

(Maurice Ravel used the oboe d'amore in his Bolero; the English horn is generally used, most orchestras lacking the older instrument.)

Jan Tomasow, concertmaster of the National Symphony, recently returned from engagements in South America, will handle the wonderful violin solo accompanying the tenor solo, and lead the violin section throughout the work. Jacob Wishnow, French horn player with the National Symphony, has the thankless task of sitting quietly for about an hour and then, with no chance to warm up, must assist with the obbligato to the first bass aria. And this he must do on the smaller, older horn used in Bach's time, an instrument more difficult to play than the French horn of today. Wayne Dirksen, assistant organist of the cathedral, will play the organ at those moments where it is used to reinforce the orchestra and chorus.

Changes in Placing

EXPERIMENTS have been going on for some time in the cathedral, and this performance will find singers and players pulled out into the crossing. This move should make the music more clearly audible throughout the church, and will permit many in the audience to see the singers who in past years have been held back behind the rood screen.

This is a particularly happy change, too, in the impact it will give to that great body of choral sound which is the supreme glory of Bach's writing in the mass. It should make the shouts of "Gloria, Sanctus, Osanna" more triumphant than ever.

The Mass in B Minor stands with Bach's own St. Matthew Passion, Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, Mozart's great Mass in C Minor, and Requiem, as mountain peaks in the realm of choral writing. Washington has heard all of these in the space of two years except the Mozart Mass, and the Cathedral Choral Society plans a performance of that work for next fall.

A city is fortunate in hearing these, the most sublime utterances of man as he contemplates and extols the mystery of God.

The Music Box

Landon Boys Aid Symphony Drive

MISS JAMBOR

KIRKPATRICK

ANOTHER National Symphony benefit this week comes from the Lower School Chorus of the Landon School for Boys. Under the direction of Wilfred A. Briggs, the 70 boys will sing at 3:15 Wednesday afternoon in their auditorium on Wilson Lane out Bethesda way.

Two auditions for scholarships of distinction come up in the near future. On May 24, 25, 26, in Barker Hall, singers of either sex, from 16 to 22, will try for the Eleanor Searle Whitney $1000 scholarship to Florida Southern College. On the 11th of this month, students expecting to major in music at American University compete for a $250 piano scholarship to study there under Agi Jambor.

Interested singers and pianists can secure information and blanks from high schools (for the singers) and from James McLain of American University (for the pianists).

Music of the week, headlined by Bach's B Minor Mass on Thursday, is further sparked by John Kirkpatrick's excellent piano list for tonight at the National Gallery, and this afternoon's simultaneous organ and violin recitals at Phillips Gallery and Washington Cathedral.

The Agriculture Choristers, directed by Sumner Spalding, rehearse on Thursday afternoons at 5:45 in the Jefferson Auditorium, South Ag Building. You don't have to belong to Agriculture to sing in the group, but you have to pass their executive committee.

Theater Guild Has Play By West Coast Group

By Jack Gaver

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, May 1.—That Civic Light Opera organization which operates in Los Angeles and San Francisco, now in its eleventh season, is really becoming a power in the theater.

Broadway first felt the impact of this West Coast upstart producing organization in 1944 when Edwin Lester, general director of the associations in the two cities, invaded New York with an operetta called "Song of Norway," based on the life and music of Edvard Grieg.

The show was well done and it played two full seasons in New York. It has been touring profitably ever since.

An attempt to transplant "Gypsy Lady," based on some Victor Herbert material, in the fall of 1946 was scarcely a success, although the show played here for about three months and then went to London.

Now, Lester and his associate, Homer Curran, are engaged in their biggest project to date, and, even before the show is in rehearsal, the august Theater Guild has selected it as its first subscription play for the 1948-49 season.

The show in question is "Magdalena," a musical romance with a score by Heitor Villa-Lobos, a Brazilian who is generally regarded as South America's foremost composer. This is his first work in the popular field of light opera.

"Magdalena" will have lyrics by Robert Wright and George Forrest, who wrote the words and fixed up the Grieg music for "Song of Norway." The book, by Curran and Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, will have a Latin American theme and the score is based on authentic native rhythms and folklore.

"Magdalena" is scheduled for its world premiere in Los Angeles on July 26. An idea of the calibre of the production, musically at least, can be gathered from the fact that such outstanding singers as Irra Petina, Dorothy Sarnoff and John Raitt have been engaged. The tentative New York opening date is September 20.

Symphonies and Boogie Wow African Bushmen

LOS ANGELES, May 1 (AP).—Bach, Beethoven, Boogie—the Bushmen of the Dark Continent like all music.

Says Laura Boulton, UCLA music instructor who has returned from her ninth expedition to primitive lands:

"The African natives' whole life is intimately bound up with music. Everything they do is to the accompaniment of some rhythm."

Mrs. Boulton combed primitive territory from Cairo to Capetown recording little-known dance songs and dances, and her expedition took her from the Belgian Congo through Portuguese West Africa, Southwest African Zululand, Swaziland, Bechuanaland and Basutoland.

Nothing she recorded sounds anything like that American thing about not wanting to leave the Congo, however.

"They think their music is better than most of our jazz," Mrs. Boulton told reporters, "but they like our boogie-woogie and they are simply crazy about symphonies. They employ the free-wheeling manner of jazz, one man picking up a note from another and improvising upon it. They create more rhythmic patterns than we do, and their drum playing is much superior to ours."

In order to record the music of an efundula, or coming-of-age ceremony for young girls, she lived for a while with Ovambos of Southwest Africa and took part in the ceremony. One night she had her shortwave set playing a program of symphony music.

Slowly, the bushmen crept out of the jungle, edging toward her tent. They listened for a while, enraptured. Then, in perfect timing, they began to dance to the Seventh Symphony of Beethoven.

Record Player

Sayao Shines In Disk Set Of Boheme

PUCCINI: La Boheme. Metropolitan stars chorus and orchestra. Columbia OP 27. $19.95.

The cast:

Rodolfo	Richard Tucker
Mimi	Bidu Sayao
Musetta	Mimi Benzell
Marcello	Francesco Valentino
Colline	Nicola Moscona
Schaunard	George Cehanovsky
Benoit & Alcindoro	Salvatore Baccaloni
Parpignol	Lawrence Davidson
Conductor	Giuseppe Antonicelli

For the third time in record history, one of Puccini's most popular operas comes to records, complete. In addition, this set has been preceded by abridged versions in French, German and English.

SAYAO

Record companies do not issue larger works unless they are sure of public sale. With Boheme, they can hardly fail to succeed. This set follows Columbia's earlier releases of Hansel and Gretel, as second in its series of recordings made from the Metropolitan stage, with Met stars in Columbia's stable.

The cast does not suffer from limitations of contracts, for it is one of the best possible today at that theater. It is our opinion that Bjorling is the finest Rodolfo now at the Met, but Tucker is coming up fast, and does very well. Sayao is our personal choice for Mimi, even over Albanese, on the grounds of the Brazilian's ability to sing softly those passages which suffer when taken in fuller voice. The rest of the cast does presentably, sounding much like the average Saturday afternoon broadcast.

Balance between orchestra, chorus and soloists is well maintained. There are routine interpretations which we have come to recognize. This is not Boheme of a Toscanini or a Moranzoni, but it is the "standard" version of today, and sounds very much as Boheme has sounded for years.

FOR particulars: the tenor aria in act one is transposed down a half-tone as is the final duet closing the act. We assume this is an accommodation for Tucker, though we supposed he has a good easy high C. His voice is solidly produced, has little subtlety, few really dramatic moments, but gives out in good fashion.

Sayao is the artist of the crowd, giving every phrase delicate inflection, making every passage fit into the whole picture. Strangely she flats in two or three minor places, but otherwise, is perfect.

Benzell as Musetta sings her aria well enough, but yips the rest of the part as every soprano seems to in the role. If you watch the score while listening to the records you will find no explanation from the composer for such interpretation, but it has become an international custom to portray Musetta as a bitch, and Benzell is no exception. It's too bad.

The men make their funning in the outer acts convincing, and what more does one ask of Boheme? As for competition with other recordings, I would choose this set over the Victor album which features Gigli and Albanese. Reasons: Gigli was in his worst sobbing period when he made that set and his great voice does not compensate for the excessive emoting. Albanese was not in as fine voice in those years as now, and her Mimi is too edgy for me. P. H.

Art Festival Opens Monday At Howard U.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY, in its third Festival of Fine Arts, moves with bold intelligence into the fields of the dance, drama, art, and music.

Mme. Nehru

Beginning tomorrow, and continuing through Friday, are scheduled plays, lectures and demonstrations in various fields. Monday brings the dance, with Sophia Deiza lecturing and Howard's modern dance group in recital. Tuesday, Erika Thimey speaks on sacred dance in worship, and the "Bayou Legend" by Owen Dodson, with music by Thomas Kerr, jr. receives the first of five performances. Later repetitions are planned for May 5, 6, 8, and 10.

Wednesday morning Madame Rajan Nehru, wife of the Minister of India, will speak on India's art. In the afternoon, Sidney Kaplan will discuss the relation of that art to India's religion, and at 4 o'clock an exhibit of contemporary Indian paintings opens.

Thursday rings in the drama, with a round table discussion, and two one-act plays. Friday, fullest schedule of the week, begins at 9, with Rabbi Schiff discussing the sacred music of Judaism. At 11, Howard receives a chapter of Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary musical society.

Excitement is promised at 2:30 with a symposium run by students of Howard and Juilliard Institute, and a program of original compositions.

That evening Howard's choir, directed by Warner Lawson, will give a concert, assisted by students from Juilliard who will play a quartet for piano and woodwinds.

Tickets are available for the series, or individually; information and reservations through Dupont 6100, extension 262.

Taking Pictures

Good Excuses Held Important For 'Explaining' Picture Faults

By Ollie Atkins

Interesting close-ups which tell a story, such as the picture at right, entitled "Promotion," are wonderful subjects for nearly all cameras. The Speed Graphic photo on Super XX film with 1/10th second at F/32 took grand prize in the recent world-wide Army and Air Force photography contest. Synchronized flash with shutter speed of 1/200th second at F/16 on 4x5 Super Panchro Press film in a Speed Graphic captured this natural snapshot of the youngster beating away on a birthday drum, left.

IN ORDER to be a good photographer one must first master the art of producing a good excuse on the spur of the moment to baffle critics of your work or methods.

A former associate of mine, Bill Bennett of 4306 South Capitol st., told me that a photographer was no better than his worst excuse. Haven't you often explained to friends after a photographic session with their year-old baby that the pictures were not worth printing because the kiddie moved all the time, whereas the real reason was you forgot to open the back shutter or put the film in the hypo tank instead of developer.

Any photographer worth the spilled chemicals on his work bench can explain why he didn't get that picture. Appraise yourself right now—how do you rate on excuses?

The poor camera is blamed for more picture failures than anything else. Charlie Corte of Acme here in Washington has a classic excuse. He figured that a double image on the film was caused by "shutter bounce." Nobody ever heard of this ailment before and nobody questioned his word. I asked Charlie what was "shutter bounce." His explanation was that the leaves of the shutter flew open again with the closing impact of the first exposure.

I defy any lensman to explain a print turned brown because he failed to give the picture enough time in the hypo or wash water.

It is these stained prints which make your friends wonder why they sent over that bottle of Scotch as homage.

* * * *

FIX prints at least 15 minutes in good hypo. Get a small jar of Braun's "hyp-a-test" for 35 cents. A single drop will form a cloudy area if the hypo bath is exhausted. A small jar will last the average amateur over a year. Wash the prints at least an hour. Be sure they are not all jammed up in a solid pack and just swirling around in the wash water. Each print demands an hour in changing water.

SOME time ago this column discussed the sale of pictures as a means of defraying costs of photography as a hobby. That column created much comment. The best single source I know of for sale of good pictures, either series in story form or casual shots in both monochrome and color is through Robert Fuhring, 68 Washington square, S., New York 12, N. Y. Bob Fuhring was formerly executive secretary of the American Society of Magazine Photographers, which includes the top-notch slick paper lensmen in the country, and he knows the problems of the cameraman. For a reasonable percentage, that is about 35 per cent, the Free Lance Photographers Guild, of which Bob is manager, will place your pictures on the open market.

Good black and whites command from $200 to $10 per picture depending on the publication buying the pictures. Colliers' will give $250 for a cover color picture. Saturday Evening Post pays $750 for two pages inside of color pictures suitable for a layout. Life prices on monochrome run from $15 up.

In dealing with an agent send only your finest pictures with complete caption material. Write first to find out if the agency can handle your work.

ELLEN WOOLSTON took first and second prizes and an honorable mention in the recent salon of the USDA Graduate School photographic seminar. Third place went to John Wood, and other honorable mention pictures were made by Jack Kleiman, Raymond Schaffer, Sartain Smith, H. Sidney Heyman, P. F. Lambert, Marlys Edman and Irv Rudin. In the color class Alice Kilpatrick copped first place, with the following honorable mentions: Mary Bolton, Maxine Lewis, William Moore, Joseph Mayer, P. F. Lambert and Irv Rudin.

Under auspices of the National Photographic Society a camera stroll in Alexandria for pictures of old homes and historic buildings is scheduled next Sunday. For details phone Miss Ann-Katrine Shaw, secretary of the group, TAylor 2037.

Electric Timer Now on Market

A sturdy, dependable electric timer which will provide split-second accuracy and long service for precise timing in both contact and projection printing has been announced by the Eastman Kodak Co.

Known as the Kodak electric time control, the new unit has a timing range from one to 50 seconds. It offers facilities for repeat timing, focusing light, and non-repeat timing.

The control measures only 3¼ inches wide, 2½ inches deep, and 4⅜ inches high. Its maximum electric load is seven amperes. The control may be used on circuits of 110-volt, 60-cycle alternating current. It is priced at $15, and will be available through all Kodak dealers.

How to Ease Handicaps of Photo Deadlines

NEW YORK, May 1.—The twelfth annual exhibition of the Press Photographers Association of New York was held here recently.

Packed with the dynamic action, drama and some of the humor that meets the news photographer in his daily round, the exhibit was a tight anthology of the year's events. It was divided into five classes: spot news, features, sports, portraits and personalities and pictorials.

The selection of prize winners was made by a large jury, divided among the different classes, and composed of picture editors, sports writers and photographic writers, each assigned to the class in which he was considered most versed. Judging was accomplished, not by the point system familiar to amateur circles, but by a process of gradual elimination, with final decisions based on the weight of votes.

Thoroughly Reviewed

BY THIS method, pictures were observed more than once; the best of them several times, and a fair consensus produced the final results. The fact that few of the judges themselves would agree wholeheartedly with any one picture gave evidence that there is plenty of room for argument, even in a press photographers' contest.

Spot news, features and sports shots were, naturally, the lens hawks' best work. In the spot news and feature class, some of the judges felt there was a heavy leaning toward too much stark sensationalism and deep tragedy, which arises from a combination of the photographer's training and the picture editor's taste, based in turn on the taste of the public.

There was little of either real humor, light, subtle emotion or social significance—a fact which doesn't seem to be in exact proportion to the state of the contemporary world.

The first-prize winner in the feature class, for example, was an unpleasant shot of a new-born child undergoing a tooth extraction, a picture that might have its place as a clinical record of an odd and unusual circumstance, but hardly in an exhibition of the best commentary to come from the cameras of the press photographers in the world's greatest city.

Lesson for Amateurs

BY SOME curious distortion of human judgment, this laboratory shot received top rank in its group: while only an honorable mention could be found for a touching photograph of a tearful youngster struggling with his chalk lessons on his first day in school.

Judging aside, nearly all of the entries in the city-wide competition showed a vigor and carried a story-telling impact which constitutes the experienced press camera man's lesson in picture taking for the amateur photographer.

Sacrificing pictorial lighting and darkroom work to the speed necessary to meet press deadlines, these veterans demonstrate a facility in the use of the camera as a medium of vigorous expression which puts the average shutterbug to shame.

The press photographer has no time for the fine points. He has to bring back a picture that smacks the eye and the senses, and he frequently has only one shot at it. A good look at any news-picture exhibit is worth a library of conventional instruction and picture taking tips.

Some of the judges offered sound argument, however, to the effect that press photographers, submitting pictures for exhibition, should not be forgiven poor print quality simply because they have to work fast.

Knows Foibles

Theater Guild Boss Super Star Handler

By Jean Meegan

NEW YORK, May 1 (AP).—A wide-waisted, heavy-shouldered man who looks like Winston Churchill bosses more stars than any other director in the despotic, temperamental, complicated state of confusion called show business.

As director of the Theater Guild of the Air for three seasons, Homer Fickett hires a different brace of stage or motion picture stars every week, 42 weeks a year. In the course of a month he will work with, fuss over and rule such diverse talents as Maurice Evans, Dorothy McGuire, Florence Reed, Ray Milland. Marlene Dietrich, Burgess Meredith, Judy Holliday, Eddie Albert and Paul Douglas.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne appear on the air only under his direction. Miss Fontanne says simply, "He understands our foibles."

When the Lunts were to do "The Guardsman" on the air after years of playing it on the stage, the stars and Fickett figured Miss Fontanne knew her part by heart.

Homer Fickett, director of Theater Guild on the Air, and Dorothy McGuire go over a script during rehearsal of a Guild show

At the last moment, with the red hand on the clock in the American Broadcasting Co. studio pointing a couple of minutes before air time, Miss Fontanne changed her mind.

She wanted her glasses. She wanted to read the script. An assistant ran for the glasses, another for the script. As the actress reached for them, the script sailed out of her hands and fluttered over the stage.

Fickett bounded after the pages, sorted them in order, handed them to the lady and quietly admonished: "You must be more careful about these things. Lynny."

He Knows His Stars

HE IS a magnet for the creative force in actors. His strength probably lies in knowing his stars, relying on their thespic judgment and keeping order in the house.

During rehearsals of "Romeo and Juliet," he said several times to Dorothy McGuire: "That isn't quite what I want." Finally she said, "Here, you read it!" But he couldn't. Unlike most of his colleagues Fickett was never an actor. He was a newspaperman in his home town of Rochester.

Years ago Fickett fostered such stunts as Ted Husing broadcasting from an airplane or DeWolf Hopper speaking from the top of the Empire State Building. He was exploring the possibilities of the new medium for an advertising agency in Philadelphia.

Since then he has been director of "March of Time," "Cavalcade of America," "The Inside Story" and "This Is My Best."

Direction Invisible

HIS direction is almost invisible, but effective. When Helen Hayes was going to play in "Alice Sit by the Fire," thereby supplying her daughter, Mary MacArthur, with a vehicle for her radio debut, she was nervous. Fickett says, "She was nervous for Mary, which made Mary nervous, and they both were making me nervous."

Finally, the director couldn't stand it any longer. "Helen," he said, to snap the actress out of it, "you know what you are doing—you are playing Mrs. MacArthur."

That broke the tension.

In spite of the High Church, Diamond Horseshoe, 14-karat mood of the Theater Guild, the show is sometimes strange to watch.

Ed Jerome played Lincoln one Sunday night in "Prologue to Glory," wearing the George Washington costume he had to wear in the Broadway show "The Patriots."

When Charles Laughton appeared on the program this winter, he attended rehearsals in a work-stained sports shirt. At the end of rehearsal, when the actors leave for supper, a nap and shower, Fickett spoke to Laughton.

"Charles," he said, "we have an audience tonight, you know."

Laughton nodded, said he knew all about it.

"Well, I didn't want you to be caught," Fickett said, "sometimes actors haven't known and didn't change their clothes."

He thought he'd handled a delicate subject quite adequately. Laughton reappeared with a tie on the brown shirt.

Those Campaign Talks Are Paid in Advance

classics, or, of course, they may just stay there forever. Right now the Lewis dialogue, which in 1922 was mordant, is simply appalling, like those Victorian sofas which were relegated to the attic as horrors by grandmother's children and happily rediscovered as antiques by the grandchildren.

It's an uncomfortable position to be in and, of course, it isn't Mr. Lewis' fault. Those old greetings between a couple of town boosters—"How's the old horse thief?"—"I'm fine, you old hunk of cheese"—may still echo around Sauk Center, Minn., but they have lost literary style and have not yet gained quaintness.

"I guess they got another think coming," "That's the way I like to hear you talk, Georgie," "Stewed to the gills"—all these may become authentic period expressions like "Ods bodkins" or " 's teeth," but right now they strike uncomfortably on the ear.

Similarly, the Lewis obsession, which seems to run through all his novels, that women were enchanting and understanding creatures until you married them, when they became totally impossible, has not only been relegated to the literary attic temporarily, but on the radio amounts almost to heresy. In radio, Mr. Lewis, the wife is a monument of understanding and tolerance; the husband is a clubfooted oaf who couldn't get through the day without assistance from his amused and loving wife.

Ready for U.S. Radio Orders

Radio manufacturers are anxious to learn what the Government may ask of them in the planned expansion of the armed forces. The Radio Manufacturers' Association has set up a preliminary committee on problems of industry mobilization and military production.

The industry expanded tremendously during the war and has pretty well caught up on the war-accumulated backlog of demand for radio sets. It is believed fairly large Government radio orders could be handled without cutting into civilian supplies. There's less margin in television, although cathode ray output has been stepped up greatly since the end of the war.

Fred Allen, left, and Henry Morgan saw a photographer coming, and quick went into this handshake-with-club-behind-the-back, or so it appears. The two funny men will meet tonight at 8:30 over WRC on Allen's show

U. N. Network Vital Force In Keeping News Objective

By Gaston Coblentz

LAKE SUCCESS, Long Island, May 1.—One of the main assets of the discord-ridden United Nations in its fight for survival is a U. N. news network which is perhaps second to none in the world for objectivity.

The strong right arm of this network, the U.N.'s radio division, is beginning to win recognition everywhere for its carefully balanced presentation of the bitter political battles at Lake Success and Flushing Meadows.

Officials of the U.N.'s radio service frankly admit that they are worried about the U.N.'s future, but their efforts to keep the global organization alive leave them little time to indulge in pessimistic predictions.

22 Nationalities

PETER AYLEN, 38, head of the radio division, and his 79 assistants, representing 22 nationalities, have a deep-rooted confidence that they can do a lot to save the U. N. by maintaining a free flow of accurate information around the world.

Mr. Aylen, former supervisor of the international service of the Canadian Broadcasting Co., fought hard last year to win one of the few budget increases alloted to the U. N.'s Secretariat by the dollar-short and economy - minded budgetary and finance committee.

With a budgetary boost from $355,500 in 1947 to $383,300 for 1948, the radio division has continued to expand its 18-months-old regular news broadcasts in five official U. N. languages (English, French, Spanish, Russian and Chinese), and to step up its news and feature broadcasts in a dozen other tongues, including Dutch, Portuguese, Norwegian, Swedish, Turkish, Hebrew, Arabic and Tagalog.

Highly Praised

FROM the beginning, the radio division has received letters of recognition from individuals in some of the most obscure points of the globe. Letters have trickled in from Madagascar, British Honduras and Baluchistan, and from remote islands in the South Pacific. They have poured in from Europe and South America and the United States.

Generally, the letters express gratitude for a chance to hear what goes on at the U. N. unobscured by the grinding of nationalistic axes. Occasionally the letters are frankly sentimental. A woman in Spain wrote how much it meant to her to hear the U. N.'s "welcome, dear, reliable voice."

Peabody Citation

BUT the first big visible feather in the radio division's cap was its citation in the announcement of the annual George Foster Peabody Awards in New York last week. The U. N.'s radio was cited for the program which "best promotes international relations." The Peabody Awards are administered by the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism of the University of Georgia.

Civitan Club to Honor 10 High School Boys

THE Civitan Club Tuesday will honor 10 young men who will graduate from high school next month.

The 10 will be presented Civitan honor keys and with their parents and the principals of their schools, will be guests at dinner at 7 p. m. in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

The 10 have been skimmed off the top of the more than 1000 boys who will graduate from the 10 local white public and parochial high schools this year.

The boys are: Jack George of St. John's, Harry Zehner of Western, Edmund C. Hughes of Coolidge, Harmon Brown of McKinley, J. Robert Falabella of Gonzaga, Alan Raywid of Wilson, Harry L. Cherry, jr., of Eastern, Lewis Meriwether of Roosevelt, C. Robert Johnson of Central, Marion Thomas Alexander of Anacostia.

They are not necessarily the best students or have the best records in school activities.

Each high school has at least a dozen students who maintain better than average grades while holding offices in student governments and clubs or participating in the cadets or in sports. The 10 are a good representation of these students.

They were picked for the honor by the teachers and principals of their schools for "outstanding student citizenship." At the banquet they will be cited for "leadership, willingness to assume responsibility, and to serve and be useful."

Nine Set for College

NINE of the 10 plan to go to college next year providing they are not called into the armed forces. They are 17, 18 and 19 years old and military training is more than a topic to be discussed in the high schol debating society. They read the front page of newspapers before they turn to the comics.

Their comment almost to a man on the prospects of spending a year in training is: "I'm sweating it out."

Three of the students plan to be doctors. Others plan to go into the fields of engineering, foreign service, business administration, law and professional sports. Two haven't made up their minds.

An Educator Takes Issue With Army

By Fred Hechinger

PART of my basic training was inflicted upon me by a battalion commander who liked to proclaim: "A good soldier has a strong back and a weak mind."

Even then I disagreed violently, if inaudibly, with the colonel, and insisted in off-the-record barracks talk that his slogan merely reflected his own talents. But now, with the help of the National Education Association and Selective Service headquarters, I can offer the facts to support the former rookie's uninformed and not altogether unprejudiced opinion. The colonel was wrong.

The hard fact is that the modern soldier needs mind as well as muscle. National defense, therefore, does not begin in the induction center or on the drillground. The foundation for the country's security—in peace and war—is laid in the school.

As Congress and the Nation debate the necessity of certain forms of compulsory military service, it is more than interesting to look at the most recent, consolidated reports concerning the effect of inferior schooling on America's manpower. These are not theoretical statistics; they are facts hot out of the human story of World War II.

Heavy Cost in Lives

SOME citizens of the wealthier States balk at paying for the education of the children in our educational slums. But as a result of inequality of educational opportunity, the wealthier States paid a higher wartime price in terms of military service and lost lives.

The armed forces had to reject 659,392 men for educational deficiency alone. That category included those who could not offer fourth-grade literacy, but it did not include the mentally deficient or feebleminded. Graphically this meant the loss of 40 combat divisions—twice as many as were employed in the entire South Pacific theater.

But even these figures don't tell the whole story. Many who somehow slipped through the educational screening proved sadly under-educated in practice. I served in a predominantly Tennessee and Kentucky composed regiment, and one of the great difficulties always was the selection of competent noncommissioned officers: many potentially excellent soldiers had to be disqualified because they were incapable of writing simple messages or conducting roll call.

State Percentages

WHAT I did not know then was that proportionately New York, my home State, had contributed more manpower to the war effort than Georgia. In South Carolina one third of all rejections were due to low-grade schooling. In the State of Washington only 1.4 per cent were unfit for the same reason. Of Alabama's rejections, 28.9 per cent were caused by educational deficiency; for Connecticut the figure was only 5.6; for the District of Columbia, 6.9, and for New York, 2.9.

Significantly the States with the lowest educational expenditure showed the highest rate of rejections, and vice versa. The 12 States with the most unfavorable record are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Arizona. In six of these States more than one fourth of all rejections were caused by educational lack.

Gum Removal Held Aid In Protecting Stamps

By William M. Stuart

THERE is no doubt that gum injures postage stamps. In spite of this fact there are collectors who will pay far above catalogue value for stamps with original gum—especially old issues. The philatelic problem of a correct solution to gum damage is a serious one. Preserving stamps in moisture-proof containers has even been questioned as being a safe measure, but moisture is a damaging element to stamps, the paper even being susceptible to dampness and mildew.

Excessive heat also damages stamps, contraction of the gum causing the stamp to curl, even though it is supposed to be properly protected. There is no general rule for protection from gum, and the only safe way is to remove it.

But there are collectors who fear the consequences if the gum is removed, but this group has offered no solution of the problem, for problem it surely is; and besides they do not care to sacrifice money values for resale of valuable stamps. It is a fact that many collectors are saving valuable stamps by removing gum.

THE Capital City Postcard Collectors Club has elected the following officers: President, Leslie L. Newson; vice president, John B. Barker; second vice president, Miss May Murray; secretary, Miss. Virginia L. Brown, 215 Avenue F, District Heights, Washington 19, D. C.; treasurer, Mrs. Anna S. Sirola, and publicity chairman, Ted Schad. The club will meet tomorrow evening in the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw. Other meetings will be held May 24, June 7 and June 28. The Washington club is Chapter 9 of the Post Card Collectors Club of America. Membership dues are $1 a year.

Don Carlos Julio Arosemena, President of the Ecuadorian Republic, paid a visit to the Ecuadorian Philatelic Association last week and was greatly impressed with the large exhibition given. Collecting is more popular than ever in Ecuador, and many high government officials are ardent stamp collectors.

Paul Bluss of New York, one of the best known stamp dealers and auctioneers, was the speaker at a meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple. Ellery Denison presided and introduced the speaker. Bluss talked on philately in general, the auction feature of stamp trade and philatelic literature. He displayed early catalogues, foreign and domestic, and some early editions of Scott's. Svend Yort exhibited many frames of his stamps of Denmark. Next meeting is on Tuesday at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

4 Ships Set For Student Trips Abroad

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 1—Four student ships to carry Americans to Europe and at least some Europeans to the United States will be in operation this summer, Laurence Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education in New York, announces.

The plan will step up a program which was started successfully last year. Two ships will be made available by the United States Maritime Commission for transporting American and foreign students and teachers to and from Europe for special summer studies. The Marine Jumper and the Marine Tiger will have accommodations for 600 passengers each and will be operated by the United States Lines and the Moore-McCormack Lines.

A total of eight round-trips between June and October are scheduled with calls at English and French ports and two special sailings to include Oslo. Depending on class of accommodation and port of debarkation, the rates will range from $140 to $200 one-way. The first departure from New York has been set for June 3, with sailings at roughly two-weeks' interval thereafter. The latest date for return from Southampton is scheduled for September 22. The June 17 sailing from New York will stop at Oslo.

In addition the Dutch Office of Foreign Student Relations has made available two transports, the Kota-Inten and the Tabinta, to carry students from Quebec to Rotterdam on June 18 and July 1, respectively. Each vessel will carry 750, and return accommodations for the total of 1500 passengers will be available on the Volendam, which will sail from Rotterdam for New York early in September. Round-trip rates on the Dutch ships will be $280.

Directing Program

THE Institute of International Education will act as administrator for the entire Student Ship Program, and all applications should be made to its office at 2 West 45th st., New York 19, N. Y.

Applicants must be able to demonstrate that the purpose of their trip is for formal study, conferences or cultural and reconstruction purposes. The overwhelming interest in the project became evident when more than 2700 applications and inquiries were received by the institute prior to this initial announcement.

The United States Department of State indicated that the program is in the national interest of this country. Senator J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, who has played an important part in the working out of exchange schemes, said: "Large-scale exchange programs such as this are a significant contribution in developing understanding among the peoples of the world."

The American and Dutch schemes together will enable 6300 American students to visit Europe this summer.

German Students Are Hungry for 'Truth'

By Ann Cottrell

COLLEGE students in the American zone of Germany are hungry for two things—food and the truth about practical democracy. They are getting little of either. Many maintain they cannot become democrats on an empty stomach. Others are willing to tighten their belts and just ask for brain food, something to replace the mental diet fed them during their formative years under the Nazis. Almost nothing has been given them to fill the vacuum left by the superficial passing of Nazidom.

They need everything from the hors d'oeuvres of pencil and paper to such substantial fare as books, American lecturers and an opportunity to meet American students. One young law student, a former Luftwaffe lieutenant, put it this way: "We want to find out what is the truth — there is nobody to tell us."

The students are at an intersection now. The amber light is flickering. America is either unwilling or unable to lead them across any street, except on rare occasions.

Their desperate need for American help is shown at Heidelberg, where the first organization paralleling an American student council has been formed. The 180 members of "the Collegium Academicum" are trying to bring self government, a miniature democracy, into being.

There are members of that same organization who during unguarded moments of casual conversation reveal a basic unawareness of democracy and war guilt. They might, for example, complain that the D. P.s are being fed off the Germany economy. The students, in general, have blind spots about German war guilt that must be eradicated before they can ever start to build for democracy in their colleges or in their nations. American interest in such a small thing as the Collegium Academicum might help to put one group onto a stronger foundation.

Want Break With Past

SOME German students really want to break with the past and become instrumental in bringing the American brand of democracy to Germany. There are others who, while telling themselves they want to become democrats, actually—maybe subconsciously—look at it from the viewpoint of military necessity, the old marriage of convenience.

I learned more about blind spots and the real or pretended desire for democracy at a discussion group meeting at the Heidelberg home of Capt. and Mrs. A. A. Nicolosi of Brooklyn.

College groups of 15 or 20 young men and women meet twice a month in his requisitioned billet to discuss problems of mutual interest. Here they get a taste of democracy supplemented by sandwiches and coffee. (Only five Army officers have been persuaded to entertain students in their homes.)

They told me I was the first American of their age group—23 to 30—they had had a chance to speak with on a social and intellectual level. They wanted to know everything, hear my opinions, express their own.

Wide Range

THIS IS the way the conversation went: "Is your press really free? Do you have slums in America? Did you know that Benjamin Franklin warned America against the Jews? We heard that Mrs. Roosevelt is Jewish. Why does the Army take our houses and only give us six hours' notice. The Americans took my camera. Why do you talk of democracy in your newspapers and not give us enough to eat? When will there be a peace conference. The foreign labor in Germany during the war was not all slave labor. Many came voluntarily. Conditions were better here than other places. No, maybe we shouldn't have killed the Jews; there could have been some other solution to the problem. Anyway we didn't know what was going on in those camps.. But why do these Jews come back here?"

Then they said: "Why doesn't military government give us more practical democracy. We ask them for help, but we get no answer. Why don't you send American lecturers, professors and students to talk to us? Why don't you give us more paper and pencils? Maybe some of us know that America is sending food to Germany, but why don't you explain more about your policies? The man in the street knows that he had more to eat under Hitler."

After that week in Heidelberg, the one remark I remember best was a somewhat hysterical question. Michael Vowinckel, 23, formerly a sailor on a mine sweeper, now a thin, sensitive law student, said this: "If we believe what is wrong, why don't you Americans tell us what is right? You talk about democracy all the time. The Russians talk about democracy. The British and French talk about democracy. Our new German leaders talk about democracy.

Grafton's Ready For Mother's Day

WHEN it's Mother's Day in West (b. g.) Virginia, they know what to do in Grafton (that nearly scans, if anybody's interested). Grafton is where the modern observance of MD originated, the State Industrial and Publicity Commission says. So there'll be a big observance next Sunday in Andrews Methodist Church, where visitors are privileged to read a plaque proclaiming the wee kirk as "Mother Church of Mother's Day." I always had another idea about Mother's Day, but we needn't go into it . . . Tom Bell of Trans World Airline would remind this pillar of integrity that direct passenger and cargo service between Washington and Baltimore has been established by TWA. Four flights are made daily — two East and two West. TWA also has out a fascinating pamphlet called "Everywhere by Air," prepared by a Kansas City man named G. Etzel Pearcy. It furnishes information on the various airlines by which passengers can reach off-line destinations all over the world . . . United Fruit is starting its summer cruise program June 18, when the Jamaica sails for the Caribbean.

THE INNOCENT LAD in the cut below is gazing into the misty distances of the Blue Ridge. He is perched on a wall alongside Skyline Drive in Shenandoah National Park. And it is with this thought that we bring up the crass fact that Virginia Trailways now is operating daily service from Washington through the park over Skyline Drive. Buses leave Trailways Bus Terminal, New York ave. at 12th st. nw., at 7:45 a. m. . . . Now look at this: "Would you be good enough to put in your paper that I want to visit the United States next year. The position is that on July 4, 1949, I will be celebrating my twenty-first birthday and would very much like to spend that day in America. Owing to the restricted allowance of 35 pounds, I would not be able to stay in any hotels, and, therefore, would like to stay with a family. I have only three weeks holiday, which includes traveling, so would stay in America for approximately seven or eight days . . . Yours Faithfully, Catherine Hussey, 19 Great Gardens rd., Gidea Park, Romford, Essex, England." Anybody want a nice young visitor?

KNUTE ROCKNE, the character builder, used to say a good quarterback knows when not to pass. Well, the National Federation of American Shipping, Inc., which knows when not to surprise people, says it's against toll increases on the Panama Canal . . . Spanish American, a new magazine designed to aid promotion of cruises to the Caribbean and South America, is now being distributed by a New York publisher. It's free, but, like everything else that's free, it doesn't seem to come to this desk . . . "No traffic snarls in Ocean City, (N. J.) this summer," calls a happy missive from Norman Sargent. West Avenue is newly paved, and besides, the police are studying the situation . . . There'll be another dance at the Lumina pavillion, Wrightsville, N. C., on May 15. National Editorial Asociation is convening in Pinehurst May 6 to 9 . . . Trout fishing season has started at St. Jovite, Quebec, and it's about time . . . Pan American Airways is cutting fares in the Pacific. Roundtrip from Manila to Hong Kong will be $135, formerly $175: one way $75, formerly $95 . . . Bermuda Garden Club is opening its gardens to visitors from the U. S. and Canada.

U. S. Highways Face Biggest Repair Job

By Richard Fiske

NEW YORK, May 1 (AP).—The ation's highways are facing the biggest repair job in history.

Neglect during the war years, an ever increasing volume of traffic and a severe winter have boosted the 1948 repair and maintenance estimate to a record high of more than one billion dollars.

Surveyors are currently in the field, and exact figures are not yet available.

But Federal and private sources agree that the bill to fill the holes, smooth the frost blisters, cover the rough spots and maintain the highways will run to the record high estimate.

The current high cost of materials enters into the picture, but the story really begins back in the war years.

Roads were neglected mainly because of wartime restrictions on materials. Maintenance was cut down by manpower shortages and scarcity of equipment. Repairs became simply minor patch jobs.

A Federal public roads official compared those wartime repairs with patching pants that were wearing quickly because of constant use without a cleaning and pressing job.

The trunk arteries and the rural roads took a terrific beating as traffic volume increased. Motor vehicle registration rose from 34,356,000 in 1941 to 37,000,000 last year. Registrations on trucks, which pound the highways hardest, jumped from 4,859,244 in 1941 to an estimated 6,500,000 last year.

As manpower expanded and materials grew less short in the postwar days, the increasing number of motorists began to expect better service, quicker snow removal, wider traffic lanes.

Last Winter Costly

THEN, this winter hit. The frost line extended farther south than any time in recent years. Snows were heavier. Temperatures were lower. And spring floods washed out what snow and frost hadn't forced apart.

Neglected highways, pounded by increased loads, heaved themselves out of shape.

And as the motorist protested the bumps and jolts, and survey crews began damage estimates, costs rose.

A Federal public roads official at Washington summed up the question of cost as follows—highway work that cost $1 in 1935 cost $1.71 in 1947.

He added that in 1921 the repair and maintenance bill in the United States was around 442 million dollars and in 1947 it was 967 million dollars.

He didn't have exact figures available for this year, but agreed it would pass the one-billion-dollar mark.

The repair and maintenance bill is spread across a vast network of three million miles of trunk arteries, rural roads and State highways in the United States.

There are about 650,000 miles of paved surface roads in the network—the remainder are gravel and dirt.

Of the paved surfaces, more than 70 per cent are of asphalt, the black top road that is perhaps most familiar to old and young motorists from the city and from the country.

Water Road Menace

ASPHALT is not a new product. It has been known for thousands of years; one story is that the basket in which the infant Moses was placed was waterproofed with a coating of asphalt cement.

It is a petroleum product. A little of it comes from pitch lakes similar to Trinidad's widely known tourist spot. Engineers call them oil wells that ran wild centuries ago.

But most asphalt is derived from petroleum by the Nation's oil refineries.

Bernard E. Gray, who heads the Asphalt Institute, says "the product that uses the roads builds them—petroleum paves the highways over which its gasoline and oil are used."

Rain-Soaked Bergen Waits Visit of U. S. Carrier Force

IF THE SUN is shining when the United States carrier task force makes its scheduled good-will call at Bergen, Norway, extra headlines will be in order. According to an old Norwegian story, a Bergen sea captain once sailed into Bergen's fjord under a bright sun. So he turned back, convinced that he had the wrong harbor.

Norway's old and beautiful port is as rainy as many a tropical spot, notes the National Geographic Society. But few mind the weather, because they are always prepared for it. Even the babies going for a carriage ride are provided with raincoats and hats, and umbrellas are standard equipment at all times.

So much water drips from Bergen's parked umbrellas that stands there are said to be larger than those elsewhere. In some of the restaurants coats and umbrella racks have drain pipes through which the water flows out to street gutters.

Bergen, however, is noted for many things besides rain. This port was a going establishment more than 400 years before Columbus set sail toward the West. It was old Norway's capital, and is still the country's leading industrial and commercial center of the west coast.

Warmed by Gulf Stream

Visitors admire the picture postcard effect of Bergen's red-topped houses climbing the seven hills beyond its scenic fjord. More important for the livelihood of the more than 100,000 inhabitants is the fact that the warm Gulf Stream keeps the fjord's northern waters open the year around.

Bergen's interests are many, from a busy merchant marine, fishing fleets, and wharf-markets to educational, theater and musical affairs. Composer Edvard Grieg and Violinist Ole Bull were both native Bergeners.

In the many centuries since 1070 when King Olaf Kyrre made it a town, Bergen has had a crowded and often dramatic career. In the fifteenth century, its already rich fishing trade came under the control of the powerful German merchants of the Hanseatic League. Eventually the Norwegians rebelled and reclaimed their own commerce.

During World War II, when the Germans returned to occupy Norway, they made this city into an important U-boat nest. Bergen received some damage in the British bombing of the port. A center of Norwegian resistance, it was more badly battered in 1944 by the exploding of a Nazi munitions ship in the harbor.

Few if by Sea

Less than half of 1 per cent of intercity passenger travel in the United States in 1940 was by boat.

A raccoon washes its food before eating it, and the name raccoon is a derivation of the Indian name "arathcone" meaning "the washer."

The Richmond - Williamsburg area of Virginia was a well-settled and prosperous country when southwest Virginia was still a virgin mountain fastness.

Five Rude Days

Miami Beach, Fla., May 1.—This resort's mean year-around temperature during the last 40 years was 75.2 degrees, according to statistics of the United States Weather Bureau. In 1946 there were only five days when the sun did not shine here.

Wide World Tourists' Apple

He left his love at Avalon, the songster once said, and as far as we've been able to learn, there's no connection with this photo, which is of Avalon Bay, on Santa Catalina Island, off California. Picturesque, ain't it?

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK, May 1 (AP).—The whole wide world, with a few notable exceptions, is the apple of the American tourist this summer. Competition for his presence (and dollars) is fierce and tough.

Times have changed. The multi-million dollar travel industry is aware that purse strings have been drawn tight around the tourist greenback. Once again the public is asking just what it is going to get for its playtime money. There are more places to go and more ways of getting there.

Randall M. Ruhrmann, head of an organization pushing Lake Erie as the ideal vacationland, summed up bluntly:

"There will be less vacation money in circulation this year and the customers will be definitely price and money conscious. While business will still be good, it will be below last year."

But the customer can look around in any direction, near or far, and find a welcoming outstretched hand. For those who seek foreign travel, there's Alaska and Canada to the north; Hawaii and the down-under countries to the west; Central and South America to the south, and the Old World to the east. All are eager and anxious to play hosts to the camera-carrying contingent. Only the Arctic, Russia and its neighbors and some trouble spots in the East seem to be off-limits.

Prices Still Way Up

PRICES, unhappily, are holding to their own high levels in most places. A vacation this year will cost just as much, if not a little more, than it did last year. One possible exception is France, which recently devalued the franc.

At home, the postwar drive to spread the vacation season over the whole year is continuing. Most of the resorts which traditionally are winter boom towns are working overtime to sell plum trees in the summer.

The domestic resorts of the Northern United States did a brisk winter sports trade and now are focusing on the summer stampede.

Motor travel is expected to increase this summer. Some three million new cars are on the road. The American Automobile Association expects that 3000 automobiles will be shipped abroad by American tourists—even with gasoline selling from 45 cents up a gallon. The Alcan Alaska Highway, all 1523 miles, will be open to the public for the first time this summer.

Airlines, railroads and bus lines are up to their necks in package tours that stream out all over the United States, and are designed to fit almost any vacation pocketbook. Hotels, motels and cabins are inviting patronage this year. For the last five years the demand for accommodations has been much greater than the supply.

Cruises will be available—mostly to the South American ports—for a small number. Prices remain high for these, and they are booked up well in advance.

Only 30 Ships

THE real bottleneck is transocean shipping. Only about 30 transatlantic ships, with a monthly capacity of 22,250 passengers, are currently available. In 1937, more than 90 passenger ships were ready to handle 90,000 voyagers monthly. However, the airlines can carry another 19,000 Europe-bound travelers each month.

Britain, France, Switzerland, the Benelux countries, Spain and Portugal are making a strong bid for all the tourists they can get. Czechoslovakia, even since the government upheavals, is still interested in rolling out red carpet to foreigners. A limited number of sightseers will be permitted in the American zone of Germany, where special hotels and facilities have been set up. Austria, too, is happy to share her music and scenery for the first time since the war.

The State Department is not enthusiastic about issuing the necessary papers to visit a number of countries, and refuses passports for Yugoslavia. Passports for Russia can be obtained, but Russian visas are rare enough to be collector's items. Travelers to Palestine junket strictly on their own responsibility and take their own risks. So do those who want to experience the sights and smells of India.

Italy is once again open to tourists, and almost all the famous hostels from the northern lake region down to popular Capri are refurbished.

League's Championship Set for Next Weekend

By Marian H. Barre

THESE are busy times for the Washington Bridge League. It holds its annual City Championships next Saturday and Sunday . . . but before that comes the Master point team game Wednesday evening. Then the annual meeting and election of officers on May 12, and on that same evening, the final session of the play-off for team prizes . . . All these events will take place in Hotel Roosevelt, with P. E. Golden directing.

Current holders of city titles are Mrs. Marianne Boschan and Miller Roberts, "mixed" champs; Mrs. Amy Ashmead and Miss Kathleen McNutt, open pairs. "He-she" partnerships on May 8 start play at 2 p. m., going through two rounds without elimination. The open qualifying session begins at 1 p. m., May 9; finals at 7 o'clock, with a special game in play concurrently for eliminated pairs, and others not in the championship. Tourney Chairman C. C. Johnson personally selected stunning prizes for the winners.

Final sectional play-offs for season prizes will be held by the Federal Bridge League at Pierce Hall, Tuesday evening. It's the last closed game, the open pair summer season starting on May 11, while in another part of the hall the league's top-average foursomes will battle for the Luther Stewart Trophy. The championship match finishes on May 18.

First annual team-of-four championship in Arlington Farms Duplicate Club will be concluded today, opening session having been played Friday.

The monthly master point game at the Capital City Chess Club will be held on May 15 instead of the 8th to avoid conflict with City Tourney.

Final session of the WBL team play-off on May 12 looks like a foregone conclusion, the team of Boschan, Eberson, Poissant and Stone, having a 3½ board-lead over Cotter, Boyd, Murray and Willis. The latter line-up is half-a-board up on Dickerman, Gorton, McHugh and Roberts.

Master point winners in the Federal Bridge League monthly, held last Tuesday, were Mr. and Mrs. George Kathan and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson, in Section A; Mrs. T. L. McConchie and Mrs. Margaret Rucker, Miss. Rita Levy and Mrs. Clair Geiger, in Section B; top score for the evening going to the McConchie-Rucker partnership, with an 18-point lead over the runners-up.

At Euclid Studios last Monday, national awards went to Mrs. Ida Terrant and C. W. Zimmer, in one position; to T. B. Westman and Peter Weiss, in the other.

Treasure Hunters Again Seek Doubloons

By Allan Reid

United Press Staff Correspondent

RIVERSIDE, CALIF., May 1 (U.P.). The lure of Spanish doubloons is strong here and 1000 residents are convinced that a map belonging to James Forbes IV shows where some really are.

They are so convinced that they have bought shares of stock to finance the fourth trip of a treasure hunting expedition that will lead to a small island off the Costa Rican coast. Discoveries made during the last visit, in March of 1947, have them feeling confident that this trip will be successful.

Forbes discovered the map among some papers belonging to his great-grandfather, a sea captain who befriended an aged sailor in South America and was given a treasure map in return.

The great-grandfather married a short time later and never did look for doubloons, Spanish dollars, bars of silver and pouches of jewels supposedly buried on the island. Neither did several other descendants.

Descriptions Fit

FORBES WAS enchanted by the idea, however, and is eagerly waiting to make his fourth attempt. The island descriptions corresponded exactly with the map on his last visit, even though the spot where the treasure was supposed to be buried was in the middle of the bay. An electric mine detector failed to locate anything at all on the island.

It was by chance that Forbes carried the detector from land back to the sloop anchored in the bay. As they passed over the terminal indicated by the correct latitude and longitude, the detector leaped to life and the bell clanged over water many fathoms deep, he said.

Investigation indicated the possibility that an earthquake had deposited the treasure-laden section of the island into the bay.

The War, Perhaps?

Between 1941 and 1943, United States auto traffic decreased 40 per cent.

Big Investment

About one fifth of all United States capital expenditures are made for transport.

DICK CONTINO

A contest, an accordian, and a delivery boy add up to success

ON THE OTHERWISE calm night of last December 7, an 18-year old Fresno, Calif., butcher's delivery boy named Dick Contino stood up to a microphone at a Horace Heidt radio talent contest, nervously smoothed back a raven curl, displayed a set of snowy teeth, and launched into a jive rendition of "Lady From Spain" on a large and glittering accordian.

Frenzied by fast-fingered artistry and impressed by his handsome appearance, the bobby-sox audience howled, stamped and clapped its hands, thereby awarding a $250 prize to Contino by a margin of fully 30 points on the applause meter.

Thirteen straight weeks of competition later, with similar effects on the applause meter in Los Angeles, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Cleveland, and New York, Contino stood up to a microphone at Manhattan's radio station WNBC and slapped out "Bumble Boogie," romping away with the Heidt 1948 quarter-finals and a prize of $750.

Award in Finals: $5,000

If everything goes well, he will win the $5,000 finals prize when he meets the winners of the three remaining 13-week contests next winter. Even if he doesn't win, he will have amassed some $15,000 in earnings and prize money, gained priceless radio and vaudeville experience as a featured player with Heidt's Musical Knights, been the idol of a large and vocal fan club, and carried on the tradition that America is the Land of Opportunity.

A year ago, he was still an undergraduate at Fresno High School, with a choice of working full time in his father's butcher shop or playing at obscure Fresno night spots.

With a screen test already in the works, he seems destined to make pikers out of Horatio Alger's heroes. Bandleader Heidt, who discovered Frankie Carle, Alvino Rey, Gordon MacRae, Fred Lowry, and the King Sisters, considers him one of the major finds of his career.

Any doubt about his musical ability can be dismissed by the fact that the stiff Heidt contests, open to professionals as well as amateurs, pitted him directly, or through pre-contest qualification trials, against an estimated 20,000 program aspirants. For Dick Contino, opportunity needed only one knock.

Jackpot: Horace Heidt talent contest quarter-finals winner Dick Contino checks in with new boss Heidt.

Schoolmarm: Mrs. Horace Heidt keeps contestants in touch with lessons while the show is on road tour.

Commodore Harry Manning

Master of the S. S. America is a sea captain in the old tradition

A master is a master . . .

MANY OF THE SET IDEAS that Harry Manning took to sea with him 34 years ago aboard a sailing bark bound for Japan have undergone changes.

Today, Commodore Manning, skipper of the U.S. Lines' $20,000,000 S.S. America, the country's only transatlantic luxury liner, is mellowed, but it took years to effect the change.

One of his pet hates used to be publicity, and his first taste of it personally made him a very irritated man. That happened in 1929 when, as chief officer of the old America, he took a lifeboat crew through mountainous seas to rescue the 32-man crew of a freighter seconds before she went down. Manning viewed the rescue as merely an act in keeping with the great traditions of the sea. To the country, however, he was a national hero.

Felt Himself Publicity's Victim

But the rousing reception he received and the round of testimonial dinners tendered him left him somewhat repelled. He felt that he was merely being put on display.

"I didn't like it," he says. And for years he didn't. Today, however, he conducts a press conference with the same ease with which he plots a course from Nantucket Light to Bishop's Rock.

As master of a great vessel, one of Manning's duties, which he did not take to easily when he received his first ship 20 years ago, was the entertaining of important passengers. Inclined to be taciturn, the skipper has scant interest in making small talk; consequently his soirees are often rather stiff and formal. Over the years, however, Manning has built up a quiet resignation to holding them and although he seldom endears himself to his passengers he always commands their highest respect.

But one idea that remains unchanged with Manning, one on which the mellowing influence of time has had no effect whatever, is that the master of a ship is precisely that, in fact, as well as in name. This attitude has caused him to tangle with the unions—battles from which he has generally emerged on top.

In late 1946, after the America had been reconverted, a deck officers' union demanded that Manning join. He retorted, "I'll starve first." Twenty-eight days later the union gave in.

Recently, in an inter-union conflict, demands were made on Manning to fire the chief steward or else see his ship tied up. The skipper refused. The America sailed on schedule.

It has been said that Commodore Manning wants the unchecked power of a dictator. To this a friend of the skipper replied: "Sure he does. It's the only way he can do what he wants to do — that is to run a perfect ship."

"Dear Mom, I finally broke into the advertising racket."

ON PARADE . . .

When PARADE'S reporters visited the Racquet Club at Palm Springs, Calif., recently (see pages 19-21), they found themselves in an atmosphere of informality not always associated with celebrities.

No arrival or departure is official at the club without the presence of owner Charles Farrell's 12-year-old Springer spaniel "Bright Boy." He has a noisy greeting for film headliners and delivery boys alike.

Owner Farrell has his way with guests. When Spencer Tracy rushed the season by moving in at the club before painting was complete, he was greeted with a pot of paint, a brush and ladder, put to work.

Even party favors are different at the R. C. Mrs. Farrell passed out gold-plated yo-yos at an elaborate week-end party not long ago. She had seen them during a trip to New York, and had purchased the shop's entire supply.

One of the club's most startling sights is Sydney Greenstreet rumbling through an early-morning tennis match. Racket-wielder Greenstreet once held amateur tennis titles in England as a youngster—but that was long ago.

NEXT WEEK...

It has remained for the small but intensely up-to-date school system of Toms River, N.J., to institute an experiment which may ultimately influence U. S. education as a whole: courses in living, in which high school students ponder the problems of marriage and adult life. PARADE visits the Toms River classrooms next week . . . In the same issue will be a report on how Akron, O., is solving its traffic problem, another on the revived ghost town of Goldfield, Nev.

THE COVER . . .

Lush as is the Palm Springs Racquet Club (see above), its own beauty can never challenge that of some of its members. An example is svelte, sensitive Esther Williams, renowned as swimmer and famed as film actress, who appears on PARADE's cover in the act of enjoying the club pool. Miss Williams, who still holds swimming titles certified by the Amateur Athletic Union, is a member of the R. C., and displays her skill and beauty during her sojourns in Palm Springs. Her latest picture is MGM's "On an Island With You." The color photography is by Carlyle Blackwell-Globe.

Typical in purposes and procedures of health departments in larger U. S. communities is the St. Paul, Minn., Bureau of Health. Among its services is free vaccinations, one of which is administered here by Dr. Arthur E. Nichols. Other functions of the Bureau include keeping records of births and deaths, a school hygiene program, enforcement of the local sanitation code, free X-ray service to trace incipient tuberculosis. Efficiently administered, it provides services not available in many areas.

Wanted: Better Public Health

It's a basic national need, says this authority

By OSCAR R. EWING

Federal Security Administrator

How healthy are we as a nation?

Are we—as many of us think—the healthiest nation in the world? What are the weak spots in the national health picture, and how should they be strengthened? How much further must we go in attaining true national health and how do we get there?

Even as you read this article, several hundred members of the medical and allied professions, and business, civic, labor and welfare leaders from all parts of the country are meeting in Washington to consider these questions. They are the delegates to the National Health Assembly which I called in response to President Truman's request that I draft a ten-year health plan for the Nation.

Divided into 15 sections, and meeting continuously from May 1 to May 4, these delegates are mapping out what they consider to be the nation's most urgent health needs.

Right now, the notion that we are the healthiest people in the world has more basis in wishful thinking than in comparative statistics.

True, our potential for good health and medical services is unsurpassed anywhere in the world. Our people, by and large, have escaped the ravages of war, pestilence, and slow starvation. Our death rate is the lowest in our history.

So far so good. But it doesn't take us as far as it ought to—certainly not to the top of our capacity for health protection. Nor even to the top of the list in any comparison of normal peace-time national health records.

The last reliable world-wide statistics were gathered on the eve of war, in 1939. In that year, when our public health agencies were operating on normal peacetime levels, the United States did not make an enviable showing. Among the nations publishing good vital statistics, our standing was about as follows in the various fields in which public health operates:

10th in general death rate
14th in deaths from typhoid
6th in infant mortality
6th in deaths from diphtheria
5th in deaths from tuberculosis

Since then we have made considerable progress—our general death rate is down by about 6 per cent; infant mortality, by 30 per cent; maternal mortality, by 60 per cent; diphtheria, by 40 per cent; tuberculosis, by 23 per cent; typhoid, by 80 per cent.

These reductions in the death rate in a period of less than 10 years are fairly spectacular, but even so, we have no cause for complacency. National figures hide the cruel fact that the benefits of scientific knowledge are unfairly distributed among our people. They do not show one very essential fact. It is that good health varies widely among states, among localities within states, and among age groups and income levels.

War Showed Our Health Weakness

The weaknesses in our health record were dramatically demonstrated during the war period. All of us were shocked to learn that medical examiners classified nearly 5,000,000 male registrants as unfit for military service. Three million more men had either to be discharged from the forces or treated for defects which existed prior to induction.

The great physical suffering and the economic loss which illness imposes upon the population is staggering. About twenty-five million people in this country have some chronic disease. At least one billion days of productivity are lost annually from this cause.

OSCAR ROSS EWING, 59-year-old Hoosier, brings to his present FSA position a varied legal background. He received his law degree from Harvard University in 1913, practiced in Indianapolis and New York. During World War I he was a captain in the Infant Air Force.

An epidemic of ringworm found the St. Paul Bureau of Health prepared. A clinic was immediately opened. Here, under the Wood light, examinations are made by a registered nurse. If infection is present, Bureau doctor prescribes treatment.

Ringworm cultures are examined in the Bureau's laboratory, where mycology tests are made by bacteriologists and other technicians. Food samples from St. Paul's hotels, restaurants and stores are also brought to laboratory for inspection.

R. J. Karpen prepares a chlorine count of water in the YWCA pool. He is aided by Jean Ohman, Y education director.

Inspections of public places are made periodically. Here Bert Benson examines a hotel room for its general sanitation.

We need only united effort to bring

THE VALUE of our losses from illness is hard to estimate. An "educated guess" as to the cost runs into the billions. Thus diseases of the heart cost the American people almost one billion dollars each year. Mental disease costs one and one-half billion dollars annually. The common cold and other respiratory diseases cost another billion.

Eight killer diseases account for about three-fourths of our annual death toll—1,031,170 out of 1,395,617 in 1946.

Two diseases of the circulatory system—heart disease and intracranial lesions—cause 500,000 deaths each year.

	Deaths	Rate per 100,000
Diseases of the heart.	429,230	306.8
Cancer	182,005	130.1
Intracranial lesions. .	125,646	89.8
Nephritis	81,701	58.4
Accidents (except auto)	64,622	46.2
Pneumonia and influenza	62,324	44.6
Tuberculosis	50,911	36.4
Diabetes	34,731	24.8

Medical research offers our best hope of conquering these killers. But so far our investments in research have been uneven and in many fields downright inadequate.

In 1946 we spent an estimated total of around 16½ million dollars of public and private money for medical research in these diseases. The next year this was nearly doubled by gratifyingly substantial federal funds for cancer research, which bring the present total to around $28,000,000. Cancer research is making good use of every penny put at its disposal. The investment we are now making in this field is more than warranted by the problem with which it deals and the potential returns.

Cancer Investment Leads

The same thing would, of course, be true in other fields. But elsewhere our investment is less adequate—how far less is shown by even cursory comparison.

Cancer research now accounts for more than half of all our public and private research money, leaving only 43 per cent of our present investment to be devoted to all other serious diseases.

Add to the funds for cancer research those for respiratory diseases, including tuberculosis, and only about 12 per cent of all available funds is left for all other diseases, including our No. 1 killer—heart disease.

What we need to make this balance is to bring medical research generally somewhat nearer to what we have wisely allocated to the study of cancer.

Equally important is the development of better methods of spreading the benefis of research knowledge. We already know how to save hundreds of thousands of lives—but we aren't using this knowledge!

We have the knowledge to stamp out as public health problems venereal disease, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, malaria, most of the dysentaries, whooping cough and several other diseases. Yet people will continue to suffer and die from such preventable illnesses this year. Why? Because they couldn't get, or failed to seek, in time, the treatment that would have saved them.

In thousands of homes this year, parents will worry helplessly over behavior of their children, perhaps recognizing that such symptoms are indications of mental illness but unaware of where or how to get the early psychiatric guidance that might restore their child to sound mental and emotional health.

Why Have Such Losses?

Why do we permit needless suffering and death?

One reason is that there aren't enough doctors in many sections of the country. We are worse off now, as far as our supply of dentists is concerned, than we were 20 years ago. Nurses? We need them by the thousands.

A second great obstacle to improving our national health is the shortage of local health departments, hospitals and other health facilities. There should be a full-time, professionally staffed health department for every 50,000 persons in our population. Instead, 54

Benson, the Bureau's food and dairy inspector, spends much of his time inspecting restaurant kitchens and those of food manufacturers and processors. Here he examines baking room in a large commercial bakery as dough goes in oven.

health to all . . .

million people have no organized public health services whatsoever.

With a good health department, easily accessible to every citizen, there could be mass X-ray surveys to find every case of tuberculosis early, when it is easily treated; early cases of venereal diseases could receive fast and sure cures. Filth-borne diseases could be stamped out. Cancer control, dental hygiene and mental health programs could be brought to all the people—if there were local facilities.

This, then, is the nation's health picture. I think you will agree with me that we still have a long way to go.

All right, you say, you've convinced me. But what can I do about it? My answer is that if you want to, I think you will soon be able to do plenty.

At the beginning of this article, I spoke about the National Health Assembly, which is meeting this weekend in Washington. I hope very much that through the Assembly techniques may be created so that a community will be able to measure what its health assets are, what its deficits are, and from what point it can work out specific programs to fill the gap. And you are the person who can help very specifically in filling it.

There are very few people in this country who did not make some contribution toward winning the recent war—either through military service or service on the home front.

I should like to see that same unanimity of purpose and that same zeal for action united now for another cause—to battle disease, to cut down preventable death, to improve the nation's health. I hope that the time is not far distant when this country will be dotted with thousands upon thousands of local health councils, consisting of laymen and professionals, all joined together to make the community a healthier place in which to live.

Health is the people's business—all the people. And only when all of them are united to achieve better health will you and I be able to say, "I am a citizen of the healthiest nation on earth."

Capital of Spring: Parisians, atop the massive Arc de Triomphe, gaze out over the roofs of the world's most popular city.

Paris in the Spring

France's capital is still a city of gay and vernal magic

THERE HAVE BEEN CITIES, like Rome, that have been symbols of power; like prewar London, that have reflected the pomp of Empire; like New York and Chicago, that have stood for vigor and enterprise in new lands. There is one—Paris—that has become undyingly identified with spring.

Geography says that it is merely the capital of France, a city of brick and stone located on the Seine—a miserly and libelous understatement disproved every year. In spring, Paris is composed of chestnut blossoms, the smell of April rain, pastel colors, taxi horns, restlessness, and a disposition to sing in the morning. As such, it is the capital of the season, with suburbs on the Hudson, the Thames and the Arno.

Americans, who fell under the spell in large numbers during the tourist boom of the '20s, colonized it to such an extent that the New York Herald-Tribune published a special Paris edition for the exiles lined up at Harry's Bar or sipping apéritifs at the Café du Dôme.

If peace holds, an estimated 100,000 will go back this year, lured by a devalued franc fallen from 119 to 300 to the dollar. De luxe hotels are down to $8 per day, with baths, meals, and wine. Smaller hotels are as low as $3.

Few Parisians have money for frivolity, but dollar-hungry Paris has hopefully brightened-up old tourist haunts like the Bal Tabarin, the Folies-Bergère, Ciro's and the Boeuf sur le Toit. Paris is waiting.

Same old taxi drivers, with new cabs, dash madly into traffic melee before Opera House.

Quais along Seine, favorite morning stroll of Americans in Paris, await new crowds in '48.

Bookstalls, in shadow of Notre Dame, have an inexhaustible supply of art prints, books.

Open-air cafes line the ample sidewalks along the Champs Elysees.

Flower marts offer potted plants for windows, flowers for breakfast tables.

Chimney pots of Montmartre bask in sun on slope below Church of Sacred Heart.

Place de la Concorde, with fountain and obelisk, is finest in Europe. THE END

At LaGuardia Field in New York, Gerry Flynn gallantly presents corsage to Gloria Southard, honor guest at airborne birthday party.

Flying Birthday Party

Cake, ice cream and kids go aloft as Gloria Southard turns ten

The cow that jumped over the moon didn't have nearly as much fun as Gloria Southard did recently on her tenth birthday. After all, it isn't everybody who can have ice cream and cake with her guests while flying over New York City in a big, two-engined plane.

But that's exactly what Gloria and 22 of her friends did. When Gloria's birthday came around, her father, Daniel B. Southard, Eastern Airlines pilot, decided that it was time for something new in the way of birthday parties. He proceeded to organize what is probably the first aerial birthday celebration for children in the history of flight.

Mr. Southard suggested the idea to his chief, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of the airline. Delighted with the novelty of the plan, Capt. Rickenbacker put at Southard's disposal a fully-equipped DC-3 passenger plane. Even the weather man cooperated, because it was a fine day for flying when Gloria and her friends drove from her home in Wilton, Conn., to New York's LaGuardia Field. Under the guidance of a stewardess, a co-pilot and Gloria's father, the covey of small fry scampered aboard the big plane. Gloria, her arms full of presents, led the procession up the steps.

At takeoff Gloria (center, foreground) poses with guests, crew.

As the plane cruised for about two hours in huge, leisurely circles over New York and Long Island, Capt. Southard turned the controls over to his co-pilot and himself acted as master of ceremonies. While her guests watched, Gloria blew out the candles of her cake, and everybody lustily sang "Happy Birthday to you."

Like all such dream-like parties, this one ended all too soon. The young guests were still pop-eyed with excitement when the plane's wheels touched down again at LaGuardia Airport.

Flavor tricks transform three simple foods into treats for a gourmet, put no strain on the food budget, and make a meal long to be remembered.

Three Flavor Tricks

THERE IS A SAYING that the true gourmet cooks with his heart. That means, of course, that a love of good food and a dash of imagination bring results that money can't buy.

That's our story for today—three flavor tricks that lift commonplace foods to the gourmet level. Half a cup of beer lends inimitable tang to a salad for six. (For accurate measuring, let the beer stand until it ceases to foam.) It's customary to serve bread and butter with salad, so our next trick costs almost nothing extra. Thick slices of crusty French bread, toasted on one side, turned, brushed with garlic butter,* sprinkled with caraway or poppy seeds and toasted again. And for dessert, canned applesauce, tinted pink, flavored with mint, and folded into whipped cream.

Garlic butter:* Melt ¼ cup butter or margarine; add 2 garlic cloves. Let stand over low heat 5 min.

MAYTIME SALAD BOWL

4 cups cooked elbow macaroni
½ cup diced green pepper
1 cup diced celery
3 sweet gherkins, sliced
½ cup mayonnaise
Salad greens
½ cup 'still" beer
½ lb. bologna sausage, cubed
Tomato wedges
½ tsp. celery seed

Combine macaroni, green pepper, celery and gherkins; mix well. Combine mayonnaise, salt, beer and celery seed; add to macaroni mixture; mix well. Serve on salad greens, topped with bologna cubes; garnish with tomato wedges. Yield: six servings.

First trick: A salad dressing subtly flavored with beer adds zest to a bland macaroni and vegetable salad base.

Second trick: Slices of crusty bread spread with garlic butter, sprinkled with poppy and caraway seed, toasted.

Third trick: Canned applesauce, tinted pink, flavored with mint, and combined with rich whipped cream. THE END.

New type of outboard motor purrs quietly, won't scare the fish. For greater convenience at home, there's a new ironer that folds into a cabinet

By PETER DRYDEN

FOLD-AWAY IRONER offers new convenience. All working parts fold into a compact cabinet, 36" x 18" x 25", with a porcelain-enamel "table top" that provides extra work space when you're not ironing. Ironer flips out easily when wanted, has an adjustable knee control that leaves hands free. There are two thermostats to give the right temperature for every fabric.

NEW OUTBOARD MOTOR has a prop that comes right into the boat so you can easily untangle weeds and fishline, or change shearpin. Other claimed advantages: mechanically controlled valves that give more horsepower per pound of weight, flood-proof starting, rapid acceleration, and permit trolling at slow speeds. In addition, a special exhaust design is said to cut noise.

OTHER NEW CONVENIENCES: For cockroaches, a liquid coating said to be the safest, most effective killer ever devised. Dabbed on insect frequented surfaces, it dries in ten minutes, is colorless, odorless, stainless, harmless to children and pets, yet gives complete roach control in living or business premises. . . . For home craftsmen, a metal turning and cutting tool that converts drill presses, woodworking lathes and grinder stands into precision metal-working lathes . . .

For grooming long and short haired pets, a new comb (left) with curved blade and smooth teeth that's said to remove loose, hair, snarls and cockleburrs without scratching sensitive skin . . . A pastry lifter—two aluminum half-moons each with a handle—that slides under rolled dough, lets anyone transfer even wafer-thin pastry from board to pie plate without tearing en route. . . .

When these two cars collided, driver Nat Levitsky (in midget car "49") was so badly injured that he may never race again. Other driver was unhurt.

School for Speeders

At his Long Island track, "Pop" DeVercelly trains midget racing drivers

IN 20 YEARS OF AUTO RACING Andrew J. "Pop" DeVercelly, 53, had broken three ribs, both legs and his back, lost many of his teeth and most of his hair and developed a nervous twitch that still runs up and down the left side of his face like a frightened rabbit. But—all things considered—he thinks he was lucky.

"At least," says DeVercelly, who now is engaged in the less hazardous profession of running a school for midget racing drivers near his home in Islip, Long Island, "they never had to carry me home in a basket."

When DeVercelly quit serious driving a few years ago he estimated that he had covered more than a million miles of dirt, board and brick track behind the wheels of more than 500 cars, ranging in size from a monstrous pre-World War I Locomobile to an Offenhauser midget. He has also raced motorcycles, bicycles and speedboats but doesn't count the mileage thus covered in his total. "After all," he says, "automobile racing was my business. That other racing was just for fun."

Saw Midget Racing Grow Up

DeVercelly spent his last five years on the track racing nothing but midgets, and he watched midget racing flower into one of the nation's most popular spectator sports. When he started there were few tracks in the country suitable for or interested in midget racing, but now there are more than 1,500 drivers, more than 700 major outdoor speedways and more than 100 indoor rinks. Attendance at midget races last year passed 20 million and prize money exceeded $5 million.

Although at the time of his retirement from racing, DeVercelly was considered a bad driving risk because of his advanced age, his large family (a wife and eight children) and his numerous injuries, he quit not for these reasons but because he felt he could make more money elsewhere. Midget drivers, if they are lucky, earn from $100 to $400 in prize money a week, but DeVercelly wasn't always lucky and eventually his income shrank so that he decided to look for means to bolster it.

Aware of the growing appeal of midget car racing, in 1944 DeVercelly decided to open a school for drivers. Several such schools had been opened and operated by the National Midget Racing Association in New York and in Freeport, L. I., Bridgeport, Conn., and Worcester, Mass., and so successful were they that DeVercelly figured he couldn't lose. As things turned out, he figured correctly.

For the site of his school, DeVercelly chose the Deer Park Speedrome, a small track on the plains north of Islip. There, with half a dozen rented midgets, he set up shop. In a few months he had 100 students, each paying $100 for a ten-lesson course in how to guide a midget racing car around a plank or gravel track with the least possible damage to life and limb.

Students get final instructions from DeVercelly before first "solo" ride. "Pop's" main concern is their safety.

Like most schoolteachers, DeVercelly starts with the fundamentals. His students, all of whom are over 21, are required to take a physical examination and a mechanical aptitude test before they are admitted to the school. Then they are taught to take a midget apart and put it back together again. Track sessions—at 20 miles an hour—follow and, as the course progresses, each student is given two periods of 12 laps a day with demonstrations and a lecture period between sessions. After ten lessons, DeVercelly believes they need only driving experience to make them winning drivers.

Their Hope: To Drive the Big Ones

Most of the students in DeVercelly's school are farm boys from Islip, Wyandanch, Farmingdale, Deer Park and other neighboring towns. Many of them are interested in midget auto racing only as a hobby, but to some the prospects of driving a car in a professional race has become a life ambition. "I want to race the midgets for a couple of years," a lanky student of DeVercelly's confided recently, "and then I want to drive a big car in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis."

The desire to race in the Indianapolis big-car classic is recognized as an occupational delirium by most veteran midget drivers. Nearly every midget pilot—from the most successful down to the lowest apprentice—cherishes the dream that someday he will win the Indianapolis. Actually few of them ever drive big cars in any race because the operation of midgets today is a far more lucrative profession than the driving of full-scale cars.

Graduates from DeVercelly's school seldom get driving jobs immediately. If they are lucky, they are taken on as mechanics, pit men, or wipers by a driver or by the stable that owns his car. Then, in two or three years, some of them may get the golden opportunity to drive and share in the track prizes.

"It isn't the easiest way in the world to make a living," says Pop DeVercelly, "but it's the only one I know about."

Midget midgets are used by DeVercelly in training of students. To succeed, drivers must have strong wrists, quick reflexes, cool heads.

Big moment for young driver arrives when he first takes wheel of midget. DeVercelly sets 20-mile-speed limit for a student's first ride.

Skull session before scoreboard usually terminates day's activities at school. DeVercelly gives students good background in fundamentals.

Before a race, DeVercelly hooks midget to rear of his car, hauls it to track. Many of his students now are racing professionally. THE END.

American Portrait

Baby Joy Ann represents the future for which Bennett M. Deal, employe of the Post Cereal plant at Battle Creek, Mich., and his wife Louise, are making their plans. Bennett, who has been with the company over two years, has been advanced to substitute foreman.

HIS JOB IS CEREALS

Bennett Deal helps put them on U.S. breakfast tables

EVERY MORNING, MILLIONS of breakfasting Americans munch the contents of about three million boxes of ready-to-eat cereals. This gastronomic custom, which originated in the U. S. some 55 years ago and has since spread far beyond our borders, now sustains a domestic dry cereal industry with an annual output worth $175,000,000, provides employment for thousands of persons in the great milling centers of Buffalo, N. Y., Battle Creek, Mich., and St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., and every year provides a dependable market for some 54 million bushels of grain from the nation's farms.

One of the army of men and women who play a part in getting cereals to America's breakfast table is Bennett M. Deal, 37-year-old substitute foreman in the Post Cereal plant in Battle Creek, Mich. With his wife, Louise, and baby daughter, Joy Ann, Bennett lives in a two-story unit of a government housing project in Lakeview, a suburb of Battle Creek. In 1946 he started working in the Post Toasties department of the Post Cereals plant at $45 a week. In two years he has advanced to his present job in the toasting department, with his weekly net earnings averaging $53. He is now being trained for other work, and is paid the wages for the job at which he works.

Born in Clebourne, Tex., Bennett spent part of his boyhood in the south. On visits to South Haven, Mich., he met Louise, and they were married in 1935. During the war he was a flight instrument specialist and was assigned to Kellog Field, Battle Creek.

At war's end, Bennett applied for a job at the Post plant and was promptly hired. He was looking for steady employment and he knew that in the pattern of the cereal industry security counts for much. Service records at the Post plant are impressive—the senior worker in Bennett's present department has been with the firm since 1908.

Although Bennett is looking forward to a fairly ample future, it takes careful planning to get along on what is at best a modest income—take-home pay is about $2,800. A savings account insures the Deals against a yearly deficit.

Home is Pleasant

Their home has a living room and kitchen downstairs, two bedrooms and bath upstairs. The war-built, basementless dwelling has its inconveniences—the furnace is on the first-floor level and there are no doors on the closets. But Louise manages to keep her home attractive.

The Deals' favorite recreation is traveling. Rather than spend money for amusements, they prefer to get into their Chevrolet and drive as far away as Bennett's weekends and occasional holidays will permit.

Like thousands of other young couples, the Deals live comfortably within their budget. They shop carefully, sometimes utilize their auto trips to look for bargains. Louise cuts household expenses by doing her own laundry and her own housework, and by making many of her own clothes as well as Joy Ann's. Bennett is handy with tools and can do repair work.

Because Bennett likes his job at Post, he has made unusually good progress — the kind that will help the Deal family to have what they want the most: a home of their own in Battle Creek.

Goldfield, a Ghost Town for 40 Years, Feels the Throb of New Life

Just four decades ago the town of Goldfield, Nev., was a roaring, wide-open mining town in the full-blown western and Klondike tradition. The leading city of the state, it was twice the size of Reno, and contained a quarter of Nevada's population. But then the ore upon which the mines depended ran out, and the people left. Goldfield, deserted, sweltered and shivered and fell apart . . . But lately ore has been rediscovered, and Goldfield is coming back. PARADE visits an old town reborn next week.

High School Students Study How To Live

Teaching teen-agers how to cope successfully with problems of marriage, family life and parenthood is the aim of courses in social behavior and family relationships offered in the Toms River, N. J., High School. Next week, PARADE brings you the story of this highly significant experiment in adolescent education. Watch for the story next Sunday.

Hy Gardner's Newsreel...

AD-LIBS: (In a Los Angeles paper): "My wife has left my bed and board, leaving me with a beautifully furnished five-room apartment. Whoooopppeeee!" . . . In the Yonkers Herald: "Tall, dark and lonesome young man with male cocker spaniel wishes to meet tall, blonde and winsome female with cocker spaniel of same sex. Object matrimony—for the cocker spaniels" . . . In Sacramento Union, via Ed Sullivan: "Two women about Jack Benny's age want an unfurnished apartment for the price Jack would be willing to pay." . . . In East Side, N. Y., News: "Lost, set of uppers and lowers between Coney Island Avenue and Prospect Park entrance. Sentimental value only—I love to eat. R. F. Box 326". . .

ETHICS: A used car dealer in New York gives away a book of tickets to every used car buyer—each ticket good for one free towing in case the car, guaranteed to be in perfect—isn't . . .

FOR QUIZ FANS: After winning a furnished one-family house on a radio program recently, a Chicago woman, when told the law required her to pay a tax on her winnings, offered the Treasury Department a sporting proposition. "Since I haven't any cash," she wrote, "I'll use the first two floors—and you people can have the use of the basement!"

ALABAMA BOUND: Governor Jim Folsom of Alabama is writing a book about the subject he knows best—himself. It'll probably be titled: "I Wonder Who's Kissing Me Now." Which reminds us, comedian Henny Youngman has a new sideline—selling lipstick remover to Big Jim. . .

SMALL WORLD: While flying from Los Angeles to New Orleans, Bennett Cerf, the noted raconteur, eased into a conversation with a fellow passenger who works for the Hooper organization. A few weeks ago, the man related, he called a number and asked: "Are you tuned into a radio program, sir?" The voice at the other end chuckled: "Does Macy tell Gimbel? My name is George Gallup—we're also in the poll-business!"

The Week...

TOPPING THE EVENTS of the first full week in May will be the third anniversary of V-E Day and a birthday for President Truman. There are, however, other events of interest to businessmen, philatelists, horticulturists, and horse fanciers.

TUESDAY: Peter Minuit landed on Manhattan Island 322 years ago today and proceeded to swing the most profitable real estate deal on record: he swapped merchandise valued at 60 guilders with the Indians for what was to become the richest city in the world. The S.S. Lusitania, was torpedoed 33 years ago by the German submarine U-20 off the Irish coast; 1,195 lives were lost. The annual Albermarle Stock Show will open in Elizabeth City, N. C.

Parade's Guest Quiz...

WIN ELLIOT

Win Elliot, master of ceremonies of "County Fair," (CBS, Saturdays, 1:30 to 2: p.m., E.D.S.T.) and PARADE'S Guest Quizzer today, has concocted a quiz on American cities similar to County Fair's "Whereami," in which clues about a city are given one at a time. Win says you should try to answer this quiz in the same way, by trying to get the answer on the first clue before going on to the others. The better you know your geography, the sooner you'll get the correct answers.

It has a "Johnnycake Road" and a "Featherbed Lane". . . Pundit H. L. Menken lives there, and the "Sun" papers are published there.

2. Located on one river with another running through its center, this city boasts a 527-foot skyscraper, tallest in the state . . . Trinity Chapel is one of its famous landmarks . . . Largest city in the state, it is also the capital . . . It is called the country's insurance capital.

3. Rich in history, this city was burned by British troops in 1781 . . . Here Patrick Henry made his most famous speech . . . The capital city, it is the largest in the state . . . A University, named after the city, is appropriately situated on College Road . . .

4. Gateway to a number of famous parks, this is the city Horace Greeley had in mind when he said, "Go West, young man.". . . Settled by people seeking gold, the city today is the country's largest sheep market . . . A state capital, this city is the burial place of W. F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody.

5. The Mississippi river winds through a section of this city, and a few miles down the river lies the state capital, this city's civic rival . . . Its University has the nation's largest campus . . . Because of its big industries, the city's skyline is called "Bread and Butter Skyline."

6. Each year the first salmon caught in this city is sent to the President of the United States . . . Indians called it "Eel Catching Place," and white settlers christened it "Sunbury". . . Located at the junctions of two rivers and U. S. Routes 1 and 2, it is third largest in the Pine Tree State.

Charles Farrell, proprietor of Palm Springs Racquet Club, shows sketch to Gene Tierney.

The Racquet Club

It's a desert hideaway for members of the film colony and their friends

NO BRIGHTER BLOOM exists in the Great American Desert than the cluster of luxury hotels and gilded private refuges which lies in the shadow of San Jacinto Mountain and has the postal designation of Palm Springs, Calif.

And in Palm Springs, no lusher hideaway exists than the bright, tight Racquet Club, owned by ex-motion picture player Charles Farrell and inhabited chiefly by refugees from the Hollywood movie colony, Los Angeles society people and luxury-wise easterners.

The Racquet Club's season extends from November to May, and during that time its Spanish-style clubhouse, swimming pool, tennis courts and private golf club are filled with the good-natured fun-making of the Far West's elite. When summer comes with heat up to 110 or 120 degrees in the shade, the club is closed, but while the season lasts, the Racquet Club offers its members respite from the vexing problems of studio contracts, business deals, and the troubled state of the world's affairs.

Film notables and West Coast socialites mingle on Racquet Club patio by swimming pool.

Dorothy Lamour gets imprompru shower from her mite-sized son Ridgeley as the two of them go for swim in pool. Closing now, club will reopen in November.

Paulette Goddard, down from Hollywood, finds secluded spot for knitting in corner of club's shaded courtyard.

Life at club is informal

THE RACQUET CLUB differs from most Palm Springs resorts in that it is a private—although proprietary—club with an annual membership fee.

Just how many members the club has is known only to big, jovial Charles Farrell and he isn't saying. But it is generally agreed there are about 200. Farrell is equally secretive as to the amount of money Racquet Clubbers put up every year so that they can rub shoulders with their own kind. Some say $500, others say $1,000. A good guess, supported by local authority, is some figure in between.

This, of course, only carries with it the privilege of the grounds. Rooms, food, drinks show up on signed tabs. It's all quite pleasant, for Farrell has a long waiting list of those who'd like to pick up where the old ones, for one reason or another, leave off their merrymaking.

Club Life Is Relaxing

Life at the club consists of relaxation—sunbathing, tennis, swimming. The less athletic go in for bridge, chess, gin rummy or backgammon. Originally the club had no sleeping accommodations but year by year Farrell has made improvements so that now about 40 can stay at the club. Others stop at one of several nearby Palm Springs hotels. Waking hours are spent at the Racquet Club.

The club had its origin in the 1935-36 season when Farrell and actor Ralph Bellamy staked out a claim on the western edge of Palm Springs, a hundred miles east of Hollywood. After a few years, Bellamy, much too active on stage and screen to worry about the club, sold out to Farrell.

Virginia Valli (Mrs. Farrell) did the decorating, and even blasé movie folk consider it ably done. The Farrell influence is rather rampant and even invades the bar where the favorite drink is the "Seventh Heaven" cocktail, stemming from Farrell's role some years ago in the picture of the same name.

As soon as Farrell closes the Racquet Club he'll leave for Catalina Island, where he acts as manager at the Toyan Bay Club.

Omelette-eating Cary Grant wisecracks with club manager Farrell, Townsend Netcher and actor Spencer Tracy as group foregathers for lunch by the pool.

Racquet Club has tennis courts, but most members prefer private golf course. Player here is Joan Caulfield.

Farrell mixes his "Seventh Heaven" for Dorothy Lamour, Hedda Hopper, King Kennedy and Ben Bogeaus.

Walter Pidgeon is among club's gin rummy enthusiasts, plays carefully but with less absorbtion than kibitzer.

Cornell and Pat Wilde bring out tandem bicycle for ride on club paths. Hot sun limits this sport's popularity.

Tennis-player Spencer Tracy ventures on to club's courts for singles. Palm Springs is favorite with film colonists because of proximity and fine facilities.

Dinner hour finds movie producer Walter Wanger and Mrs. Wanger (Joan Bennett) ready to tackle a steak.

Big kisses go with gala birthday party in club's ballroom. Members, who spend most of day lounging in playclothes, don formal attire for dinner. THE END.

JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE STEPS

1. Identify the six objects at the top of the puzzle. (The name of each object is a five letter word.)
2. See the table of letter values below the puzzle. Each letter is worth a certain number of points. If you have identified the objects correctly you will find that the total value of the 30 letters that spell out the names of the six objects is 544 points.
3. Now your job is to place those words into the shaded letter-paths, each of which has space for 5 letters. You can place any of the six words in any of the paths. Of course, the words must read from top to bottom or left to right.
4. You will now note there are 12 empty white squares remaining in the diagram. By inserting letters of your own choosing into those white spaces and by combining these letters with the interlocking letters you have already filled into the grey squares, you can spell out 5 extra words. These extra words, too, must read from top to bottom or from left to right.
5. Of course, it is easy to fill in 12 extra letters to get 5 extra words but remember your job is to use 12 letters that will give you a high score when the value of those letters (as shown in the table of letter values) is added to the 544 points you will have already earned if you identified the pictured objects correctly.

We have worked out here a sample puzzle to show you how to go about solving the Official Puzzle.

First we identified the objects pictured: PURSE . . . SPOOL . . . BANJO . . . DAISY . . . CAMEL . . . PLANE and then added up the value of all the letters in the names of these six objects (using the table of letter values given for the Official Puzzle) and found the total was 613 points. Next, we filled in these six names in the six shaded paths and then added 12 extra letters which gave us 5 extra words: CRAB . . . POMP . . . ORANGE . . . RAIL and GOOD. These 12 extra letters which we had, had a total value of 189 points thus giving us a total score of 802 points.

DIAGRAM No. 2

We felt we could do better so we changed our 12 extra letters and got five different extra words. We changed CRAB to COMB, POMP to PULP, ORANGE to ORIOLE, RAIL to ROLL and GOOD to LEAD. We thus attained a total of 245 points for the 12 letters we filled into the white spaces giving ourselves a total score of 858. Now, if you get the idea, why not try your hand at the Official Puzzle.

BRAND NEW 1948 BUICK CONVERTIBLE

THE OFFICIAL RULES Please read carefully

1. $51,265.00 will be awarded in accordance with these rules to the 270 contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Contest Puzzle. This sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $3,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $10,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $20,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 89 prizes each, making a total of 270 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)

2. To enter Group 1 a contestant must send in with his answer to the puzzle a donation of $2.00 to the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation; to enter Group 2 a donation of $5.00 is required and to enter Group 3 a donation of $10.00 must be sent in. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and once having entered may transfer his entry from any group or groups to any other group or groups by submitting the necessary donation.

3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 90 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.

4. In the event of ties, as many prizes will be reserved in each list as there are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. These tied contestants will be required to send in answers to a series of five tie-breaking puzzles. We will first judge the answers to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking series and then award the tied-for prizes in the order of the scores submitted. If this is not sufficient to break all ties, and permit awarding of all the tied-for prizes, then the answers to puzzle No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If ties still remain we will then judge the answers of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzles Nos. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. However, if further needed to break ties a second and even a third series of such tie-breaking puzzles (to be judged similarly) may be used. All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle with clearly identifiable objects, though they may be more difficult and more numerous and will have words to be built on them. A limited time, the same for each contestant, will be given for solving tie-breaking puzzles and they will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. Tied contestants will not be required to make any further contributions. Should final ties remain after the third series of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is tied.

5. The contest is open to any resident of the United States of America except employees of the DAV and its Departments, the DAV Service Foundation, its advertising agency, or service organization, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or in kind in a previous contest or any member of his or her family. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete. A contestant may win a prize in each prize group.

6. Each contestant may send in only one answer to the official puzzle, however, at no extra cost, one substitute score can be submitted on the Official Substitute Entry Form which will be sent to each contestant already numbered and registered in the contestant's name. Where two scores are submitted, only the higher score will be considered as that person's entry. That score will serve to compete in any one, two or all three prize groups depending on the amount donated.

7. Neatness or decoration of answer will not count. Unsigned or illegible entries, however, will not be considered. The first solution must be submitted on an official entry form and must be accompanied by a minimum contribution of $2.00.

8. In solving the puzzle practically any word in the English language that fits may be used. Errors on the part of contestants in totalling their score or in filling in words will disqualify said contestants. Words that may not be used in the solution of the puzzle are proper names or hyphenated words, prefixes, or suffixes, abbreviations or contractions. With those exceptions, any word may be used provided it appears in bold face type in the A-Z main alphabetical section (footnotes excluded) of the final word authorities for this contest which will be the Merriam - Webster New International Unabridged Dictionary (1947 Edition), and Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary, Unabridged (1946) Edition. Further excluded are plurals unless they appear in bold-face type and words that appear only as part of a two or more word phrase such as "suey" in chop suey. No correspondence will be entered into with contestants regarding the use of words.

9. All entries must be sent by mail to DAV Service Foundation
Puzzle Contest
Washington 9, D. C.
and must be postmarked before midnight May 31, 1948 and received before midnight June 14, 1948 to be eligible for consideration. The deadline date for mailing and receipt of substitute scores and/or additional donations in order to transfer from one group or groups to another group or groups is 30 days later than these dates. The DAV Service Foundation will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical errors and each contestant by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by these rules and conditions and, in any event, with the decision of the DAV Service Foundation on any and all matters affecting the contest.

10. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from anyone (same family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required from all winners.

Winners names will be sent to all contestants.

Dust bowl U. S., 1936: Arthur Rothstein's classic photograph stands as a grim warning of the dangers of soil erosion.

SPOILERS OF THE EARTH

A new book indicts man for his wanton waste of nature's bounty

IF MAN IS CONSCIOUS of the waste and havoc that is his heritage from waging war on his fellows, he appears oblivious to the waste and havoc which even today are accruing in the wake of a greater struggle: Man's war against Nature.

For ages past, conservationists have pleaded with man to respect the source of his bounty. They have argued and warned and preached against the wanton destruction of forests and fields and wildlife. But the destruction continues even as new voices protest man's assault on Nature.

Latest to sound the warning is 61-year-old Fairfield Osborn, president of the New York Zoological Society, who has recorded the frightening story of man's wanton waste in his new book, *Our Plundered Planet.

Though the interrelations of all living organisms—the mutual dependence of one upon the other—have long been known to science, man's callous disregard of Nature's life cycle is paying off in barren earth.

Products of exploitation and ignorance—erosion, the disappearance of forest and wildlife and the growing deterioration of natural soils because of the absence of organic fertilizers—threaten ruin not only to the land but to the men who live from it.

And "the flattery of science," writes Osborn, will not help.

"Technologists may outdo themselves in the creation of artificial substances for natural subsistence, and new areas, such as those in tropical or subtropical regions, may be adapted to human use. But even such resources or developments cannot be expected to offset the natural life-saving elements of the earth. There is only one solution: Man must recognize the necessity of cooperating with nature."

Of the failure to cooperate, author Osborn cites the lessons of history.

"It can be read in despairing chronicles of ruins buried in sands, of rivers running in channels high above their surrounding landscapes, of everspreading deltas, of fallen terraces which once held productive fields or rich gardens. It can be seen in man-made deserts and in immense reaches of bare stone from which the once fertile soils have been washed and blown away."

Follies Have Been Repeated

The follies have been repeated time and time again: Destruction of forests with resultant floods and droughts; overgrazing and reckless plowing of grasslands leaving the denuded soil to the mercy of the winds. Cut, burn, plant, destroy, move on. But move where?

Asia, Africa, the Mediterranean lands and even Australia bear the scars of man at his worst, as a ruthless geological force assaulting the land and rendering it barren. That England and western Europe have fared better is attributable in part to their people's love for the soil.

If the story of the Old World's despoliation of its life-sustaining resources is shocking, the conservation record of the Western Hemisphere is worse.

"There was a time, just the other day as time goes," writes Osborn, "when the Western Hemisphere could be called the 'New World.' It is 'new' no longer. Quite the opposite. In many parts of the two great northern and southern continents, once boundless in natural riches, there are already large areas, death-spots of wasted, man-made deserts. Millions of people are approaching the final crisis of life—that of obtaining a minimum subsistence."

But it is at his own nation, that Osborn levels his most telling blow.

Waste Has Been Appalling

"The story of our nation in the last century as regards the use of forests, grasslands, wildlife and water sources," the author writes, "is the most violent and the most destructive written in the long history of civilization. The velocity of events is unparalleled and we today are still so near to it that it is almost impossible to realize what has happened, or far more important, what is still happening."

Of some of the events still happening, listen to the author: Forests: "Annual loss exceeds growth by more than 50 per cent." Erosion: "Soil losses from all lands in the U. S. total 5.4 billion tons annually." And author Osborn speaks frankly against the determined assaults now being made through Congress on U. S. Public lands. "They represent an attack more desperate in its nature than any similar one in the history of our country."

"Are we to continue on the same dusty, perilous road once traveled to its dead end by other mighty and splendid nations?" asks Osborn of 143 million Americans. "Or, in our wisdom, are we going to choose the only route that does not lead to the disaster that has already befallen so many other peoples of the earth?"

"The time for defiance is at an end!"

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
Registered U. S. Patent Office.
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Synopsis: ALETA MIGHT EASILY HAVE FALLEN INTO THE BRUTAL HANDS OF ROARY DHU, AN IRISH KING, BUT SHE LOST HER TEMPER AND CUT HIM RATHER MESSILY WITH HER DAGGER. A BLAST ON HIS HORN BRINGS HIS COMRADES.......
.......AND ALSO BRINGS PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS MEN! HE LAUGHS, A SMALL LAUGH THROUGH CLENCHED TEETH, AND IT IS RECORDED THAT FEW PEOPLE HAVE ENJOYED GOOD HEALTH AFTER HEARING THAT PARTICULAR LAUGH.
VAL PONDERS. HIS MEN ARE ARMED FOR COMBAT, BUT THE HUNTERS GREATLY OUTNUMBER THEM.......AND ALETA?
ROARY DHU SITS DOWN, CAREFUL TO KEEP HIS HUNTING SPEAR POINTED AT THE SMALL FURY. HIS SLASHED WRIST IS BLEEDING FREELY AND HE IS BEGINNING TO FEEL WEAK. "YOU MOVE AND THE WENCH DIES!" HE WARNS.
"WE HAIL THE BRAVE CHIEFTAIN WHO USES A WOMAN AS A SHIELD," MOCKS VAL. "AND I WOULD CHALLENGE YOU TO TRIAL BY ARMS, BUT I PERCEIVE A GIRL HAS ALREADY BEATEN YOU!"
THEN HIS MANNER CHANGES; THERE IS BOTH ICE AND FIRE IN THE CALM VOICE THAT SAYS: "ALETA! WALK SLOWLY TO THE SHIP, MEN! IF SHE IS HARMED TAKE ROARY......ALIVE!"
"OH! COME, COME, MY GOOD FELLOW," SAYS ROARY, PLEASANTLY, "SUCH A DISPLAY OF TEMPER UNBECOMES A KNIGHT. THE LITTLE HUSSY MAY GO NOW, FOR I WILL HAVE HER ERE DAWN, ANYHOW!"
ALETA TOUCHES HER HUSBAND FONDLY AS SHE PASSES. HIS ARM IS TREMBLING, HIS WHITE FACE AN ICY MASK. SHE SIGHS; IT IS NICE TO BE SO LOVED!
SLOWLY BOTH SIDES WITHDRAW. BACK AT THE SHIP VAL ASKS, "HOW SOON CAN WE BE READY TO SAIL?" "NOT UNTIL TO-MORROW'S TIDE," ANSWERS GUNDER HARL.
